g. Christ brought revelation and salvation; his miracles were 'signs' of these things, 2:11+. The 'works' of the disciples will continue this ministry. The Spirit, from whom mighty works will proceed, is to be sent by Jesus seated in glory at the Father's right hand, 7:39; 16:7.

h. Var. 'keep my commandments'. Jesus, like God himself, asserts his right to love and obedience.

i. The Greek word parakletos is here translated 'Advocate', but it is difficult to choose between the possible meanings: 'advocate', 'intercessor', 'counsellor', 'protector', 'support'. The parallel between the Spirit's work for the disciples and Christ's brings out powerfully the personal character of the Spirit, cf. 14:26+; 1 Jn 2:1.

j. He who reveals and inspires the true worship of God, 4:23f, as opposed to the prince of this world who is 'the father of lies', 8:44; 1 Jn 4:3f.

k. Var. 'will be in you'.

l. The world has seen its last of Jesus, cf. 7:34; 8:21. The disciples, however, will see him in his risen life, not merely with their eyes but with the inward vision of faith, 20:29.

m. Phrase used by the prophets for the occasions when God notably intervenes in human history, cf. Is 2:17; 4:1f, etc. The 'day' may indicate a whole epoch; here, it is the post-resurrection era.

n. By coming, with the Father, to dwell in him.

o. The 'Judas, brother of James' of Lk 6:16 and Ac 1:13; the Thaddaeus of Mt 10:3 and Mk 3:18.

p. As the world does not: 8:37, 43, 47.

q. Var. 'the word that you hear'.

r. In place of the departed Christ, the faithful will have the Spirit, 14:16, 17; 16:7; cf. 1:33+. He is the parakletos, who intercedes with the Father, cf. 1 Jn 2:1, and whose voice is heard in human courts, 15:26, 27; cf. Lk 12:11-12; Mt 10:19-20p; Ac 5:32. He is the Spirit of truth, leading men to the very fulness of truth, 16:13, teaching them to understand the mystery of Christ — his fulfilment of the scriptures, 5:39+, the meaning of his words, 2:19+, of his actions, and of his 'signs', 14:26; 16:13; 1 Jn 2:20f, 27, all hitherto obscure to the disciples, 2:22; 12:16; 13:7; 20:9. In this way the Spirit is to bear witness to Christ, 15:26; 1 Jn 5:6, 7, and shame the unbelieving world, 16:8-11.

s. The customary Jewish greeting and farewell, cf. Lk 10:5p; it means soundness of body but came to be used of the perfect happiness and the deliverance which the Messiah would bring. All this Jesus gives.

t. Though the Son is the Father's equal, 10:30+; 8:24+, his glory is for the moment veiled, 1:14+; his return to the Father will reveal it again, 17:5+.

Cf. Ph 2:6-9; Heb 1:3.

u. Var. 'I will not have much more speech with you'.

15 a. On the vine image, cf. Jr 2:21; Is 5:1+. In the Synoptics, Jesus uses the vine as a symbol of the kingdom of God, Mt 20:1-8; 21:28-31, 33-41 and p, and 'the fruit of the vine' becomes the Eucharistic sacrament of the New Covenant, Mt 26:29p. Here he calls himself the true vine whose fruit, the true Israel, will not disappoint God's expectation.

b. The 'fruit' is that of a life of obedience to the commandments, especially that of love, vv. 12-17. Cf. Is 5:7; Jr 2:21.

c. The Greek word seems to be used here in its agricultural sense, but it may also mean 'clean' or 'pure', cf. 13:10.

Mt 15:16 Rm 6:22; 7:4	It is to the glory of my Father that you should bear much fruit, and then you will be my disciples. ^d	8

13:16 Mt 10:24 Lk 6:40 Mt 10:25	Remember the words I said to you: A servant is not greater than his master. If they persecuted me, they will persecute you too; if they kept my word, they will keep yours as well.	20

- 24 If I had not performed such works among them
as no one else has ever done,
they would be blameless;
but as it is, they have seen all this,
and still they hate both me and my Father.
25 But all this was only to fulfil the words written in their Law:
They hated me for no reason.
26 When the Advocate comes, whom I shall send to you from the Father,
the Spirit of truth who issues from^g the Father,
he will be my witness.
27 And you too will be witnesses,
because you have been with me from the outset.
- 1 16 'I have told you all this so that your faith may not be shaken.^a 2 They will expel you from the synagogues, and indeed the hour is coming when anyone who kills you will think he is doing a holy duty for God.
3 They will do these things because they have never known either the Father or myself.
4 But I have told you all this,
so that when the time for it comes you may remember that I told you.

The coming of the Advocate

- 'I did not tell you this from the outset,
because I was with you;
5 but now I am going to the one who sent me.
Not one of you has asked, "Where are you going?"
6 Yet you are sad at heart because I have told you this.
7 Still, I must tell you the truth:
it is for your own good that I am going because unless I go,
the Advocate will not come to you;
but if I do go,
I will send him to you.
8 And when he comes,
he will show the world how wrong it was,
about sin,
and about who was in the right,
and about judgement:
9 about sin:
proved by their refusal to believe in me;^b 10 about who was in the right:
proved by my going to the Father and your seeing me no more;^c

c. The Spirit will demonstrate the right of Jesus to the title 'Son of God', cf. 10:33; 19:7. The 'passing' of Jesus to the Father will prove that he is God's Son, 13:1; 20:17, because it shows that heaven is his true home, 6:62.

Jesus to return very soon

7:33; 14:19 'In a short time you will no longer see me, and then a short time later you will see me again.'^g

Then some of his disciples said to one another, 'What does he mean, "In a short time you will no longer see me, and then a short time later you will see me again" and, "I am going to the Father"? •What is this "short time"?^h We don't know what he means.' •Jesus knew that they wanted to question him, so he said, 'You are asking one another what I meant by saying: In a short time you will no longer see me, and then a short time later you will see me again.

'I tell you most solemnly,
you will be weeping and wailing while the world will rejoice;
you will be sorrowful,
but your sorrow will turn to joy.ⁱ
A woman in childbirth suffers, because her time has come;
but when she has given birth to the child she forgets the suffering^j in her joy that a man has been born into the world.

So it is with you: you are sad now, but I shall see you again, and your hearts will be full of joy,
and that joy no one shall take from you.

When that day comes,
you will not ask me any questions.

I tell you most solemnly,
anything you ask for from the Father
he will grant in my name.

Until now you have not asked for anything in my name.^k
Ask and you will receive,
and so your joy will be complete.

I have been telling you all this in metaphors,
the hour is coming

when I shall no longer speak to you in metaphors;
but tell you about the Father in plain words.^l

When that day comes

you will ask in my name;

Jesus, in his turn, manifests the glory of the Father, 17:4, from whom comes everything he possesses, 3:35; 5:22, 26; 13:3; 17:2. C. THE PASSION

The arrest of Jesus

- 1 18 After he had said all this Jesus left with his disciples and crossed the ||Mt 26:30,36
 Kedron valley. There was a garden there, and he went into it with his 32
 2 disciples. •Judas the traitor knew the place well, since Jesus had often met his ||Mk 14:26,
 3 disciples there, •and he brought the cohort^a to this place together with a detach- 43-52
 ment of guards sent by the chief priests and the Pharisees, all with lanterns and ||Mt 26:47-56
 4 torches and weapons. •Knowing everything that was going to happen to him, ||Lk 22:47-53
 5 Jesus then came forward and said, 'Who are you looking for?' •They answered, 1:48 +
 'Jesus the Nazarene'. He said, 'I am he'. Now Judas the traitor was standing 12:27 +
 6 among them. •When Jesus said, 'I am he', they moved back and fell to the ground. 8:24 + 7 He asked them a second time, 'Who are you looking for?' They said, 'Jesus the 8 Nazarene'. •'I have told you that I am he' replied Jesus. 'If I am the one you 9 are looking for, let these others go.' •This was to fulfil the words he had spoken,
 'Not one of those you gave me have I lost'. 6:39; 10:28;
 10 Simon Peter, who carried a sword, drew it and wounded the high priest's serv- 17:12

 Peter, 'Put your sword back in its scabbard; am I not to drink the cup that the 12:27
 Father has given me?' Mt 20:22;

Jesus before Annas and Caiaphas. Peter disowns him

- 12 The cohort and its captain and the Jewish guards seized Jesus and bound 13 him. •They took him first to Annas, because Annas was the father-in-law of Lk 3:2
 14 Caiaphas, who was high priest that year. •It was Caiaphas who had suggested 11:50 to the Jews, 'It is better for one man to die for the people'.
 15 Simon Peter, with another disciple,^b followed Jesus. This disciple, who was ||Mt 26:58,
 16 known to the high priest, went with Jesus into the high priest's palace, •but ||Mk 14:54, delivering up his only Son, 3:16-18; 1 Jn 4:9,10,14,16;

 cf. Rm 8:32; it follows that men must believe that Jesus is the Son, 3:18, if they are to appreciate this love, cf. 1 Jn 2:23; Jn 20:31, and thus 'know' the Father.

i. Add. 'and have known'. Also translated 'they have given them true welcome because I came from you'.

j. Lit. 'Keep those in your name whom (var.
 which) you have given me'. So also in v. 12.

k. Lit. 'the son of perdition'.

l. Or 'from evil', cf. Mt 6:13.

m. The verb means literally: to set aside for, dedicate to, God; to 'sanctify' (in the original sense of the word), cf. Ac 9:13 +.

n. Jesus offers himself in sacrifice for his followers.
 o. Dedicated to God's worship 'in spirit and truth'.

p. Var. 'that you have loved them'.

18 a. A detachment from the Roman garrison in Jerusalem.

b. Probably the 'disciple' of 20:2f, 'whom Jesus loved', the evangelist himself.

Peter stayed outside the door. So the other disciple, the one known to the high priest, went out, spoke to the woman who was keeping the door and brought Peter in. •The maid on duty at the door said to Peter, 'Aren't you another of that man's disciples?' He answered, 'I am not'. •Now it was cold, and the servants and guards had lit a charcoal fire and were standing there warming themselves; so Peter stood there too, warming himself with the others.

The high priest questioned Jesus about his disciples and his teaching. •Jesus answered, 'I have spoken openly for all the world to hear; I have always taught in the synagogue and in the Temple where all the Jews meet together: I have said nothing in secret. •But why ask me? Ask my hearers what I taught: they know what I said.' •At these words, one of the guards standing by gave Jesus a slap in the face, saying, 'Is that the way to answer the high priest?' •Jesus replied, 'If there is something wrong in what I said, point it out; but if there is no offence in it, why do you strike me?' •Then Annas sent him, still bound, to Caiaphas the high priest.^c

As Simon Peter stood there warming himself, someone said to him, 'Aren't you another of his disciples?' He denied it saying, 'I am not'. •One of the high priest's servants, a relation of the man whose ear Peter had cut off, said, 'Didn't I see you in the garden with him?' •Again Peter denied it; and at once a cock crew.

Jesus before Pilate

They then led Jesus from the house of Caiaphas to the Praetorium.^d It was now morning. They did not go into the Praetorium themselves or they would be defiled^e and unable to eat the passover. •So Pilate came outside to them and said, 'What charge do you bring against this man?' They replied, •'If he were not a criminal, we should not be handing him over to you'. •Pilate said, 'Take him yourselves, and try him by your own Law'. The Jews answered, 'We are not allowed to put a man to death'.^f •This was to fulfil the words Jesus had spoken indicating the way he was going to die.

So Pilate went back into the Praetorium and called Jesus to him, 'Are you the king of the Jews?' he asked. •Jesus replied, 'Do you ask this of your own accord, or have others spoken to you about me?' •Pilate answered, 'Am I a Jew? It is your own people and the chief priests who have handed you over to me: what have you done?' •Jesus replied, 'Mine is not a kingdom of this world; if my kingdom were of this world, my men would have fought to prevent my being surrendered to the Jews. But my kingdom is not of this kind.' •'So you are a king then?' said Pilate. 'It is you who say it' answered Jesus. 'Yes, I am a king. I was born for this, I came into the world for this: to bear witness to the truth; and all who are on the side of truth listen to my voice.' •'Truth?' said Pilate 'What is that?'; and with that he went out again to the Jews and said, 'I find no case against him. •But according to a custom of yours I should release one prisoner at the Passover; would you like me, then, to release the king of the Jews?' •At this they shouted: 'Not this man,' they said 'but Barabbas'. Barabbas was a brigand.

19 Pilate then had Jesus taken away and scourged; •and after this, the soldiers twisted some thorns into a crown and put it on his head, and dressed him in a purple robe. •They kept coming up to him and saying, 'Hail, king of the Jews!'; and they slapped him in the face.

Pilate came outside again and said to them, 'Look, I am going to bring him out to you to let you see that I find no case'.^a •Jesus then came out wearing the crown of thorns and the purple robe. Pilate said, 'Here is the man'. •When they saw him the chief priests and the guards shouted, 'Crucify him! Crucify him!' Pilate said, 'Take him yourselves and crucify him: I can find no case against him'. •'We have a Law,' the Jews replied 'and according to that Law he ought to die, because he has claimed to be the Son of God.'

- ⁸ When Pilate heard them say this his fears increased. •Re-entering the Praetorium, he said to Jesus, 'Where do you come from?'^b But Jesus made no answer. ^{7:28}
¹⁰ Pilate then said to him, 'Are you refusing to speak to me? Surely you know I ¹¹ have power to release you and I have power to crucify you?' •'You would have no power over me' replied Jesus 'if it had not been given you from above; that is why the one who handed me over to you has the greater guilt.'^c ^{3:27; 10:18 + 8:21,44}

Jesus is condemned to death

- ¹² From that moment Pilate was anxious to set him free, but the Jews shouted, 'If you set him free you are no friend of Caesar's; anyone who makes himself
¹³ king is defying Caesar'. •Hearing these words, Pilate had Jesus brought out, and seated himself on the chair of judgement at a place called the Pavement, in ¹⁴ Hebrew Gabbatha.^d •It was Passover Preparation Day,^e about the sixth hour.^f ^{19:31 Mt 26:17 + 18:33-37 Lk 19:14}
¹⁵ 'Here is your king' said Pilate to the Jews. •'Take him away, take him away!' they said.^g 'Crucify him!' 'Do you want me to crucify your king?' said Pilate.
¹⁶ The chief priests answered, 'We have no king except Caesar'. •So in the end Pilate handed him over to them to be crucified. ^{Ac 17:7}

The crucifixion

- ¹⁷ They then took charge of Jesus,^h •and carrying his own cross he went out of the city to the place of the skull or, as it was called in Hebrew, Golgotha, ¹⁸ where they crucified him with two others, one on either side with Jesus in the ¹⁹ middle. •Pilate wrote out a notice and had it fixed to the cross; it ran: 'Jesus ²⁰ the Nazarene, King of the Jews'. •This notice was read by many of the Jews, because the place where Jesus was crucified was not far from the city, and the ²¹ writing was in Hebrew, Latin and Greek. •So the Jewish chief priests said to Pilate, 'You should not write "King of the Jews", but "This man said: I am King
²² of the Jews"'. •Pilate answered, 'What I have written, I have written'. ^{Mt 27:31, 33,37-38 Mk 15:20, 22,25-27 Lk 23:33,38 Gn 22:6 Lk 23:26 Is 53:12 3:35 + 18:33 Heb 13:12 + Lk 19:14}

Christ's garments divided

- ²³ When the soldiers had finished crucifying Jesus they took his clothing and divided it into four shares, one for each soldier. His undergarment was seamless,ⁱ ²⁴ woven in one piece from neck to hem; •so they said to one another, 'Instead of tearing it, let's throw dice to decide who is to have it'. In this way the words of scripture were fulfilled: ^{Mt 27:35 Mk 15:24 Lk 23:34}

*They shared out my clothing among them.
 They cast lots for my clothes.*

This is exactly what the soldiers did.

The burial

After this, Joseph of Arimathaea, who was a disciple of Jesus—though a³⁸ secret one because he was afraid of the Jews—asked Pilate to let him remove the body of Jesus. Pilate gave permission, so they^w came and took it away. Nicodemus came as well—the same one who had first come to Jesus at night-time³⁹ —and he brought a mixture of myrrh and aloes, weighing about a hundred⁴⁰ pounds. •They took the body of Jesus and wrapped it with the spices in linen cloths, following the Jewish burial custom. •At the place where he had been⁴¹ crucified there was a garden, and in this garden a new tomb in which no one had yet been buried. •Since it was the Jewish Day of Preparation and the tomb⁴² was near at hand, they laid Jesus there.

The empty tomb

20 It was very early on the first day of the week^a and still dark, when Mary¹ of Magdala came to the tomb. She saw that the stone had been moved away from the tomb •and came running to Simon Peter and the other disciple,² the one Jesus loved. 'They have taken the Lord out of the tomb' she said 'and we don't know where they have put him.'

So Peter set out with the other disciple to go to the tomb. •They ran together,³ but the other disciple, running faster than Peter, reached the tomb first; •he bent⁵ down and saw the linen cloths lying on the ground, but did not go in.^b •Simon⁶ Peter who was following now came up, went right into the tomb, saw the linen

 8 not with the linen cloths but rolled up in a place by itself. •Then the other disciple 21:7 9 who had reached the tomb first also went in; he saw and he believed. •Till this moment they had failed to understand the teaching of scripture,^c that he must 5:39+;
 10 rise from the dead. •The disciples then went home again. 14:26+

The appearance to Mary of Magdala

- 11 Meanwhile Mary stayed outside near the tomb, weeping. Then, still weeping, ||Mt 28:9-10
 12 she stooped to look inside, •and saw two angels in white sitting where the body ||Mk 16:9-11
 13 of Jesus had been, one at the head, the other at the feet. •They said, 'Woman, why are you weeping?' 'They have taken my Lord away' she replied 'and I Sg 3:1-3 14 don't know where they have put him.' As she said this she turned round and 15 saw Jesus standing there, though she did not recognise him. •Jesus said, 'Woman, Lk 24:16 why are you weeping? Who are you looking for?' Supposing him to be the gardener, she said, 'Sir, if you have taken him away, tell me where you have put him, and I will go and remove him'. •Jesus said, 'Mary!' She knew him^d then 17 and said to him in Hebrew, 'Rabbuni!'^e—which means Master. •Jesus said to her, 'Do not cling to me,^f because I have not yet ascended to the Father. But go and find the brothers,^g and tell them: I am ascending to my Father^h and your 18 Father, to my God and your God.' •So Mary of Magdala went and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord and that he had said these things to her. Mk 10:51

Appearances to the disciples

- 19 In the evening of that same day, the first day of the week, the doors were closed in the room where the disciples were,ⁱ for fear of the Jews. Jesus came 20 and stood among them. He said to them, 'Peace be with you', •and showed them his hands and his side. The disciples were filled with joy when they saw

(cf. Mt 27:56p) or else, if the phrase refers to what follows, 'Mary, the wife of Clopas'.

l. The reference to the O.T. (vv. 24,28,36,37) and the unusual term 'woman' suggest that the evangelist sees more in this than the gesture of a dutiful son: namely, a declaration that Mary, the new Eve, is the spiritual mother of all the faithful, here represented by the beloved disciple.

m. Conj. 'on a spear'.

n. I.e. the Father's work as foretold by the scriptures: the salvation of the world through the sacrifice of Christ. Jn does not record the desolate cry of Mt 27:46 and Mk 15:34: it is the calm majesty of Christ's death that he wishes to emphasise. Cf. Lk 23:46; Jn 12:27+.

o. The last breath of Jesus is a token of the outpouring of the Spirit, 1:33+; 20:22.

p. To hasten death.

q. Var. 'when they saw'.

r. Var. 'water and blood'. The significance of the incident is brought out by two texts of scripture (vv. 36f). The blood shows that the lamb has truly been sacrificed for the salvation of the world, 6:51; the water, symbol of the Spirit, shows that the sacrifice is a rich source of grace. Many of the Fathers, not without good reason, interpret the water and blood as symbols of baptism and the Eucharist, and these two sacraments as signifying the Church which is born like a second Eve from the side of another Adam. Cf. Ep 5: 23-32.

s. The disciple of v. 26, probably the evangelist himself.

t. Referring either to 'the one who saw' or else to God (or Christ) whom 'the one who saw' calls to witness.

u. Two texts are here combined: one from a Psalm describing how God protects the virtuous man persecuted (cf. Ws. 2:18-20), of whom the 'servant of Yahweh' (Is 53) is the ideal example; the other, a ritual instruction for the preparation of the Passover lamb. Cf. Jn 1:29+ and 1 Co 5:7.

v. 'They will look', in the Johannine sense of 'see and understand', cf. 3:14+. For Jn, the Roman soldier symbolises the pagans who will be converted, cf. 12:20-21,32 and notes. Similarly, Mt 27:54+ and Mk 15:39+. Cf. also Lk 23:47,48; Mt 24:30; Rv 1:7.

w. Var. 'he'.

20 a. This was to become 'the Lord's Day', the Christian Sunday; cf. Rv 1:10.

b. The disciple acknowledges that Peter has some title to precedence. Cf. 21:15-17.

c. Cf. Ps 16:8-11; 2:7; Ac 2:24-31; 13:32-37; 1 Co 15:4.

d. Var. 'She turned'.

e. A more solemn address than 'Rabbi', and often used when speaking to God; it therefore approximates to Thomas' profession of faith, v. 28.

f. Mary has fallen at the feet of Jesus to embrace them. Cf. Mt 28:9.

g. Var. 'my brothers'.

h. This assertion does not contradict the account of Ac 1:3f. Christ 'went up' to the Father, that is to say, his body entered into glory, Jn 3:13; 6:62; Ep 4:10; 1 Tm 3:16; Heb 4:14; 6:19f; 9:24; 1 P 3:22; cf. Ac 2: 33+, 36+, on the day he rose from the tomb, Jn 20:17; Lk 24:51. The significance of the 'ascension', 40 days later, Ac 1:2f,9-11, is that the time of earthly companionship with Christ is over, that he is now 'seated at the right hand of God' and will not return before his final coming (the 'parousia').

i. Add. 'assembled'.

After saying this he breathed^d on them and said:

APPENDIX^a

Mt 26:32p; 28:7 The appearance on the shore of Tiberias

11:16; 14:5 21 Later on, Jesus showed himself again to the disciples. It was by the Sea 1
2:1 of Tiberias, and it happened like this: •Simon Peter, Thomas called the 2
Mt 4:18 his disciples were together. •Simon Peter said, 'I'm going fishing'. They replied, 3 Lk 5:4-10 'We'll come with you'. They went out and got into the boat but caught nothing that night.

It was light by now and there stood Jesus on the shore, though the disciples 4 did not realise that it was Jesus. •Jesus called out, 'Have you caught anything, 5 friends?' And when they answered, 'No', •he said, 'Throw the net out to starboard 6 and you'll find something'. So they dropped the net, and there were so many 6 13:23; 20:8 fish^b that they could not haul it in. •The disciple Jesus loved said to Peter, 'It is 7 the Lord'. At these words 'It is the Lord', Simon Peter, who had practically nothing on, wrapped his cloak round him and jumped into the water. •The 8 other disciples came on in the boat, towing the net and the fish; they were only about a hundred yards from land.

Lk 24:41-43 As soon as they came ashore they saw that there was some bread there, and 9 a charcoal fire with fish cooking on it. •Jesus said, 'Bring some of the fish you 10 have just caught'. •Simon Peter went aboard and dragged the net to the shore,^c 11 full of big fish, one hundred and fifty-three of them; and in spite of there being so many the net was not broken. •Jesus said to them, 'Come and have breakfast'. 12 4:27 None of the disciples was bold enough to ask, 'Who are you?'; they knew quite 6:11 well it was the Lord. •Jesus then stepped forward, took the bread and gave it 13
Lk 24:42 to them, and the same with the fish. •This was the third time that Jesus showed 14 20:19-23; 26-29 himself to the disciples after rising from the dead.

- 15 After the meal Jesus said to Simon Peter, 'Simon son of John, do you love me more than these others do?' He answered, 'Yes Lord, you know I love you'. Lk 5:10; 22:32
Ac 20:28
- 16 Jesus said to him, 'Feed my lambs'. •A second time he said to him, 'Simon son of John, do you love me?' He replied, 'Yes, Lord, you know I love you'. Jesus 13:37,38; 18:17, 25-27
- 17 said to him, 'Look after my sheep'. •Then he said to him a third time, 'Simon son of John, do you love me?' Peter was upset that he asked him the third time, 'Do you love me?' and said, 'Lord, you know everything; you know I love you'. 1:48 + 6:68f
Mt 16:17-19
Lk 22:31-32
- 18 Jesus said to him, 'Feed my sheep.'
- 18 'I tell you most solemnly,
when you were young
you put on your own belt and walked where you liked;
but when you grow old
you will stretch out your hands, and somebody else will put a belt round you and take you where you would rather not go.'
- 2 P 1:14
- 19 In these words he indicated the kind of death^d by which Peter would give glory to God. After this he said, 'Follow me'.
- 20 Peter turned and saw the disciple Jesus loved following them—the one who had leaned on his breast at the supper and had said to him, 'Lord, who is it that 12:33; 13:31,36; 17:1
- 21 will betray you?' •Seeing him, Peter said to Jesus, 'What about him, Lord?' 13:25
- 22 Jesus answered, 'If I want him to stay behind till I come,^e what does it matter to you? You are to follow me.' •The rumour then went out among the brothers that this disciple would not die. Yet Jesus had not said to Peter, 'He will not die', but, 'If I want him to stay behind till I come'.^f

Conclusion

- 24 This disciple is the one who vouches for these things and has written them down, and we know^g that his testimony is true. 3 Jn 12
- 25 There were many other things that Jesus did; if all were written down, the world itself, I suppose, would not hold all the books that would have to be written.

j. The breath of Jesus is a symbol of the Spirit ('breath', in Hebrew); he sends forth the Spirit who will make all things anew, Gn 1:2; 2:7; Ezk 37:9; Ws 15:11. See Jn 19:30+ and Mt 3:16+.

k. Add. 'other.'

l. In the closing words of his gospel, John again calls the Christian reader's attention to the wound in Christ's side, cf. 19:34+.

c. In the Synoptics, this operation is an image of the kingdom's coming, Mt 13:47f, or of the apostles' task, Mt 4:19p. Here, too, it evidently symbolises the apostolic mission under Peter's direction. Cf. Jn 21:15-17.

d. Martyrdom.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES

INTRODUCTION TO THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES

Acts and the third gospel must originally have been two parts of a book that today we should call 'a history of the rise of Christianity'. About 150 A.D., when Christians wanted the four gospels bound in one codex, these two parts were separated. The title 'Acts of the Apostles', or 'Acts of Apostles', which may have been given to the second part at this time, follows normal contemporary hellenistic usage as in, e.g., the 'Acts' of Hannibal and the 'Acts' of Alexander, etc. That these two books of the New Testament were once closely associated is suggested 1. by their Prologues: both are addressed (cf. Lk 1:1-4) to someone called Theophilus and Ac 1:1, having referred to the gospel as an 'earlier work', goes on by way of introduction to say why the gospel was written and to summarise its closing incidents (appearances of the risen Christ, ascension); 2. by their literary affinity: vocabulary, grammar and style are not only consistent all through Acts showing that it is a literary unity, but they are also characteristic of the third gospel, which makes it almost certain that both books are by the same author.

The only identification of the author ever suggested by church writers is St Luke, and no critics ancient or modern have ever seriously suggested anyone else. This identification was already known to the churches about the year 175 A.D. as shown by the Roman canon known as the Muratorian Fragment, by the Anti-Marcionite Prologue, by St Irenaeus, Clement and Origen in Alexandria and by Tertullian, and it is supported by internal evidence: the author must have been a Christian of the apostolic age, either a thoroughly hellenised Jew or, more probably, a well educated Greek with some knowledge of medicine and extremely well acquainted with the LXX and Jewish things in general. Lastly, and more significantly, he had accompanied Paul on his journeys judging from his use of the first person plural in Part 2 of Acts, and of all Paul's companions none is more strongly indicated than Luke. According to an ancient tradition Luke was a Syrian from Antioch, a doctor and of pagan origin, Col 4:10-14; Paul describes him as a close friend who stayed by him during his two periods of captivity in Rome, Col 4:14; Phm 24; 2 Tm 4:11. Luke probably accompanied Paul on the second (Ac 16:10f) and third (Ac 20:6f; cf. perhaps 2 Co 8:18) missionary journeys, and the only reason he does not figure in lists like that of Ac 20:4 is because he probably compiled the lists himself.

There is no clear early tradition about either date or place of writing (Greece, after Paul's death? Rome, before the end of Paul's trial?), and we have to rely on internal evidence. Acts ends with Paul's Roman captivity in 61-63, with reference to which it mentions a period of two years, 28:30+, and this happens to be the legal interval after which a case was dismissed if no evidence had arrived to support the charge. It is possible, therefore, that these lines were written after Paul's release. This ties in with the date of 64 A.D. suggested for Mark, since Acts must be later than Mark. A date as late as 80-100 which has been suggested by some critics is possible, but (as in Luke) there are no positive indications in Acts of a date later than 70 A.D.

The precise date, however, becomes a secondary consideration once the book can establish its primary importance either as an author's eyewitness account for the events that fill a major section or as based on adequate sources at the author's disposal. Analysis of Acts confirms Lk 1:1-4 (meant as prologue to the complete work) by suggesting that Luke must have collected a great deal of detailed evidence from a variety of sources, because in spite of the way Luke has superimposed his own personality in reworking this material he has not succeeded in disguising the various sources he has used. Not only does the flavour of the doctrinal content change according to the context so that in appropriate sections it seems convincingly primitive, but as well as that there is considerable variation in the literary style. In passages where Luke can control the style, when, for example, he is writing up his own travel notes, the Greek is excellent; but in his description of the early history of the Palestinian community we find that the language becomes full of semitisms, clumsy and even inaccurate. In some places this is only because he is trying to copy Old Testament LXX Greek, but mostly it is because he is reproducing his various Aramaic sources as closely as possible. In Luke this can be checked by comparing it with two of its sources (i.e. Mark and the document common to Matthew and Luke), but unfortunately there are no texts with which to compare Acts; it is possible, however, to try to determine what kinds of sources were used. One suggestion was that the whole of 1-15:35 is based on a single Aramaic document, but this is far too sweeping as it does not account for all the editing that Luke has unmistakably done in these chapters. Luke has obviously used not one long source but several short ones, many of which may not even have been written documents, though some probably were. Without being dogmatic about details, it is possible to classify the main kinds of traditions collected by Luke. 1. Those that relate to the primitive Jerusalem community, ch. 1-5. 2. Biographical notes about individuals: e.g. Peter, 9:32-11:18; ch. 12, or Philip, 8:4-40; these details could have been supplied at first hand by people like Philip, the deacon Luke met at Caesarea, 21:8. 3. Details about the early days of the community in Antioch and its foundation by hellenistic Jews: these were obviously provided by that community, 6:1-8:3; 11:19-30; 13:1-3. 4. Paul's conversion and missionary journeys: these were things Paul himself could have told Luke, 9:1-30; 13:4-14:28; 15:36f. 5. For Paul's later journeys Luke would probably have had his own notes and these he seems to use in the 'we' passages which are precisely the sections where the peculiarities of Luke's own style are most concentrated, 11:28; 16:10-17; 20:5-21:18; 27:1-28:16. Luke managed to organise all this material into a single book by sorting it out chronologically as best he could and linking the episodes together with frequent editorial formulae, e.g. 6:7; 9:31; 12:24; etc.

The unsophisticated nature of this material and the respect with which Luke treats it guarantee the historical worth of Acts. It was not easy to put all these sources together, and obviously a certain amount of anticipation, repetition and fusion was unavoidable; thus the events of ch. 12 should come before the visit of Barnabas and Saul to Jerusalem mentioned in 11:30; 12:25, unless this visit is to be identified with that of ch. 15; though the account of the 'council of Jerusalem' (ch. 15) may itself be a conflation of two quite distinct debates (cf. notes). Slight adjustments like this do not affect the basic reliability of the work, as may be seen for example by checking how closely Luke's account of Paul's missionary activities agrees with Paul's epistles, which were quite certainly not among the sources Luke used for Acts. This is even true of Galatians if we make allowances for the conflations in Acts. The earlier events, of course, cannot be checked in this way, but may seem reasonable enough in themselves, and Luke seems to have treated the sources for his account with considerable respect, if we may judge by all the realistic and lifelike details he has left in. Considerable suspicion, however, is aroused by the speeches in Acts since it is maintained that Luke has done what all classical historians did and put his own free compositions into the mouth of his characters. On the other hand it is hard to believe that anyone, however gifted, but least of all a person of Greek culture like Luke, could reproduce so convincingly, after forty years, the archaisms and semitisms of, for example, the speeches by Peter and Stephen. Luke must have had access to records in the sense that the earliest preaching made use of only a very few main themes and supported these with stereotyped arguments set out in standard ways and learnt by heart. Christian Jews had anthologies of scriptural texts; non-Jewish Christians had collections of tags from the accepted philosophers, while both had the essential kerygma (proclamation) of the Messiah who was killed and rose again, together with his invitation to conversion and baptism. Luke must first have come across these outlines of Christian preaching as sermons and from his own researches have been able later on, through his acute sense of psychology, to fill them out authentically with the most important Christian teaching.

Whether Acts is objective is the first question that must be faced when discussing the book's purpose. F.C. Baur and his followers thought Acts was a 2nd century attempt to smooth over the quarrel between Petrine and Pauline factions. Such a radical attack on the objectivity of Acts would not be put forward by any exegete today, not only because the date it suggests is far too late, but because its formulation is so obviously influenced by Hegel's philosophy of history. To what extent, however, is Acts a piece of special pleading? To what extent does it twist the facts that it records? Was Luke's purpose in writing Acts to present a portrait of Paul that would convince the Roman authorities that Paul was not a political criminal? This is certainly one aspect of Acts but not the only one, and in any case such a portrait of Paul need not necessarily be tendentious—Luke may have been convinced it was a true portrait, and Luke may have been right. The two things he stresses are the exclusively religious nature of Paul's battle with the Jews, and Paul's loyalty to the Roman authority. These were plain facts and Luke had every right to base his portrait on them. However, as has been said, Luke was not merely interested in giving a portrait of Paul to serve as evidence for the Roman courts: what he aimed at was to write the history of the beginnings of Christianity.

This assertion is based on the structure of the book that is summarised in the words of Christ with which it begins: 'You will be my witnesses not only in Jerusalem but throughout Judaea and Samaria, and indeed to the ends of the earth', Ac 1:8. Acts begins with Jerusalem where the faith takes firm root and the first community grows in grace and numbers, ch. 1-5. This community begins to expand, under the stimulus of the world-wide outlook of converts from hellenistic Judaism especially after the martyrdom of Stephen when these converts were expelled, 6:1-8:3. The faith spreads north of Jerusalem to Samaria, 8:4-25, south-west to the coast and north again to Caesarea, 8:26-40; 9:32-11:18. The insertion here of Paul's conversion shows that the faith had already reached Damascus and indicates that it was soon to reach Cilicia, 9:1-30. Refrains like the one that closes this section (9:31, which adds Galilee to the list) draw attention repeatedly to the spread of the faith. Acts turns next to the reception of the Good News in Antioch, 11:19-26, and shows how Antioch became a missionary headquarters, while keeping in touch with Jerusalem, and how Jerusalem and Antioch reached an agreed solution to the main problems connected with the missions, 11:27-30; 15:1-35. This leads on to the spread of the faith to the pagans. After his imprisonment following the conversion of Cornelius, Peter goes off to a place that is not named, ch. 12, and from that point Paul takes over the leading part in Luke's story. His first journey (before the council of Jerusalem) takes the faith to Cyprus and Asia Minor, ch. 13-14; his next two journeys take it as far as Macedonia and Greece, 15:36-18:22; 18:23-21:17. After each one he returns to Jerusalem where eventually he is arrested and later imprisoned at Caesarea, 21:18-26:32. This leads him to Rome, where, still a missionary in spite of being a prisoner in chains, Paul preaches the Good News, ch. 27-28, and since Rome could be taken as 'the ends of the earth' by any one who thought of Jerusalem as the centre, Luke has reached a point where he can stop.

It is a pity that Luke does not write about what the other apostles did, or describe how the Church was founded, for example, in Rome where it had been established before Paul's arrival (cf. Romans, written during Paul's third journey) or in Alexandria. Luke does not even suggest that Peter had an apostolate outside Palestine: there is never any doubt as to who the focus of attention is all through Acts, though only the second half is devoted to Paul exclusively. The sort of things, however, that Luke does not mention and the kind of gaps he leaves are valuable guarantees of the things he does say, since he limits himself to facts that he has acquired either at first hand or from sources he has checked. Luke is not interested in giving all the details about the spread of Christianity. What he is interested in is: 1. the spiritual energy inside Christianity that motivates its expansion, and 2. the spiritual doctrine he can deduce from the facts at his disposal. This is what the book is about, and what makes it universal and irreplaceable.

Here it is only possible to list the main points of this elaborate theology of Acts. 1. The kerygma (proclamation) of the apostles is centred on faith in Christ, and in Acts this is presented with many slight variations that make it possible for us to recover the history of how this teaching grew more and more precise; e.g. the earliest Christians are shown as feeling no need to go beyond the stage of contemplating the triumph of the human Jesus who has become the Kyrios by his resurrection, 2:22-36; but later Paul is made to give him the title 'Son of God', 9:20. 2. From the speeches we know the main scriptural texts that (under the Spirit's guidance) formed the basis both for a systematic Christology and for arguments with the Jews: e.g. the themes of the Servant, 3:13,26; 4:27,30; 8:32-33, and the second Moses, 3:22f; 7:20f; the proof of the resurrection from Ps 16:8-11 (Ac 2:24-32; 13:34-37); and the use of their own history to warn Jews against resisting grace, 7:2-53; 13:16-41. Pagans, of course, needed a more generalised theological argument, 14:15-17; 17:22-31, and though the apostles are primarily 'witnesses', 1:8+ (as such Luke sums up their kerygma 2:22+, and records their miraculous 'signs') the most urgent problem facing the new Church was the admission of pagans, and Acts provides important details about this. The Jerusalem brotherhood led by James remains faithful to the Jewish Law, 15:1,5; 21:20f; but the Hellenists, for whom Stephen acts as spokesman, want to break away from Temple worship. Peter, but even more so Paul, get the principle of salvation through faith in Christ recognised at the council of Jerusalem. This dispenses the pagans from the need to be circumcised and from obeying the Law of Moses. As it is still true, however, that this salvation comes from Israel, Luke records how Paul always preached to the Jews first, and only turned to the pagans after his fellow Jews had rejected him, 13:5+. 3. Acts also provides important details about life in the earliest Christian communities: e.g. the way of prayer and community of goods known to the church in Jerusalem; the administration of baptism in water and baptism in Spirit, 1:5+; celebration of the Eucharist, 2:42+; early attempts at organisation in e.g. 'prophets' and 'teachers', 13:1+, and the 'elders' who preside in the Jerusalem church, 11:30+, and who are also appointed by Paul in the churches he founds, 14:23. 4. All these developments in community life are attributed to the irresistible guidance of the Spirit. As Lk 4:1+ insists on the importance of the Holy Spirit so Acts (1:8+) attributes the spread of the developing Church to the continuous activity of the Holy Spirit—this is why the book has been called 'the gospel of the Spirit', and why it seems so full of spiritual joy and of wonder at God's works, a fact that can hardly surprise those who understand what the coming of Christianity meant to a world that had never seen anything like it. 5. To this wealth of theology we must add the detailed factual information which we should otherwise lack, the psychological tact with which Luke typically presents his characters, the shrewdness and the craftsmanship of passages like the speech in the presence of Agrippa, ch. 26, and the pathos of scenes like the farewell to the Ephesian elders, 20:17-38. This book, the only one of its kind in the New Testament, is full of treasures. Without it, there would be great gaps in what we know about the beginnings of Christianity.

The texts of the New Testament have come down to us with a great number of minor variants, and for Acts those in the so-called 'Western' Text (Codex Bezae, the old Latin and old Syriac versions, and early ecclesiastical writers) are the most interesting. Because this Western Text has not been critically edited like the Alexandrian recension, it contains many corrupt readings, but many of its concrete and vivid details, absent from the other texts, could be authentic. The most important of these readings have been either mentioned in the footnotes or incorporated in the text.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES

Prologue

1 In my earlier work,^a Theophilus, I dealt with everything Jesus had done and 1 taught from the beginning •until the day he gave his instructions to the 2 apostles he had chosen through the Holy Spirit,^b and was taken up to heaven.^c
He had shown himself alive to them after his Passion by many demonstrations: 3 for forty days he had continued to appear to them and tell them about the kingdom of God.^d •When he had been at table with them, he had told them not 4 to leave Jerusalem, but to wait there for what the Father had promised. 'It is'
he had said 'what you have heard me speak about: •John baptised with water but 5 you, not many days from now, will be baptised^e with the Holy Spirit.'

The ascension

Now having met together,^f they asked him, 'Lord, has the time come? Are 6 you going to restore the kingdom to Israel?'^g •He replied, 'It is not for you to 7 know times or dates^h that the Father has decided by his own authority, •but 8 you will receive power when the Holy Spirit comes on you,ⁱ and then you will be my witnesses^j not only in Jerusalem but throughout Judaea and Samaria, and indeed to the ends of the earth'.^k

As he said this he was lifted up while they looked on, and a cloud^l took him 9 from their sight. •They were still staring into the sky when suddenly two men 10 in white were standing near them •and they said, 'Why are you men from Galilee 11 standing here looking into the sky? Jesus who has been taken up from you into heaven, this same Jesus^m will come back in the same wayⁿ as you have seen him go there.'

I. THE JERUSALEM CHURCH

The group of apostles

So from the Mount of Olives, as it is called, they went back to Jerusalem, 12
a short distance away, no more than a sabbath walk; •and when they reached 13
the city they went to the upper room where they were staying; there were Peter and John, James and Andrew, Philip and Thomas, Bartholomew and Matthew, James son of Alphaeus and Simon the Zealot, and Jude son of James.^o •All 14 these joined in continuous prayer, together with several women, including Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brothers.^p

The election of Matthias

One day Peter stood up to speak to the brothers^q—there were about a 15 hundred and twenty persons in the congregation: •'Brothers, the passage of 16 scripture had to be fulfilled in which the Holy Spirit, speaking through David, foretells the fate of Judas, who offered himself as a guide to the men who 17 arrested Jesus—after having been one of our number and actually sharing this 18 ministry of ours. •As you know, he bought a field with the money he was paid for his crime. He fell headlong and burst open, and all his entrails poured out.

 19 Everybody in Jerusalem heard about it and the field came to be called the Bloody 20 Acre, in their language Hakeldama. •Now in the Book of Psalms it says:

*Let his camp be reduced to ruin,
 Let there be no one to live in it.*

||Mt 27:3-10

Ws 4:19

Jn 17:12

And again:

Let someone else take his office.

21 'We must therefore choose someone who has been with us the whole time that 22 the Lord Jesus was travelling round with us, •someone who was with us right from the time when John was baptising until the day when he was taken up from us—and he can act with us as a witness to his resurrection.'

1:8+; 10:35

23 Having nominated two candidates, Joseph known as Barsabbas, whose 24 surname was Justus, and Matthias, •they prayed, 'Lord, you can read everyone's 25 heart; show us therefore which of these two you have chosen •to take over this ministry and apostolate, which Judas abandoned to go to his proper place'.
 26 They then drew lots for them, and as the lot fell to Matthias, he was listed as one of the twelve apostles.†

1 a. The gospel of Luke.

b. This emphasises the part played by the Spirit in the first missionary activities of the apostles, vv. 5,8 and ch. 2, as in the opening of Christ's ministry, Lk 4:1,14,18.

c. The Western Text does not mention the ascension here.

d. The kingdom of God, Mt 4:17+, must be the main subject preached by the apostles, cf. Ac 8:12; 19:8; 20:25; 28:23,31, as it was the main thing preached by Christ, cf. Mt 3:2+.

e. The baptism of the Spirit foretold by John the Baptist, Mt 3:11p, and here promised by Jesus, will be initiated by the outpouring of the Spirit at Pentecost, Ac 2:1-4. Subsequently, the apostles, obedient to Christ's command, Mt 28:19, will continue to make use of baptism in water, Ac 2:41; 8:12,38; 9:18; 10:48; 16:15, 33; 18:8; 19:5, as the ritual initiation into the messianic kingdom, cf. Mt 3:6+, but it will be 'in the name of Jesus', Ac 2:38+, and through belief in Christ as saviour, cf. Rm 6:4+, will be able to absolve from sins and to give the Spirit, Ac 2:38. Connected with this Christian baptism by water there is the companion rite of the imposition of hands, 1 Tm 4:14+, the purpose of which is to give the gifts of the Spirit in as manifest a way as they had been given at Pentecost, Ac 8:16-19; 9:17-18; 19:5-6 (but cf. 10:44-48); this is the origin of the sacrament of confirmation. Side by side with these Christian sacraments the baptism of John was for a time still being administered by certain of the less instructed early Christians, 19:3.

f. Ac 1:6 takes up the narrative broken off in Lk 24:49.

g. The apostles still identified the messianic kingdom with the political restoration of David's dynasty. Cf. Mt 4:17+.

h. Human history is the unfolding of salvation, and it develops through the 'times and dates', cf. Dn 2:21; 1 Th 5:1, that God has always foreseen (Rm 16:25+; 1 Co 2:7; Ep 1:4; 3:9,11; Col 1:26; 2 Tm 1:9; cf. Mt 25:34): first there are the 'times' of preparation, Heb 1:2; 9:9; 1 P 1:11, and of God's patience, Rm 3:26; Ac 17:30; then follows the appointed time, Ga 4:4+, the moment long foretold for the Messiah to come and begin the era of salvation, Rm 3:26+; after this, the time that is to elapse before the parousia or final coming, 2 Co 6:2+; lastly, the great and final 'Day', 1 Co 1:8+ (preceded by the 'last days', 1 Tm 4:1+) and the Last Judgement itself, Rm 2:6+.

i. The Holy Spirit is a favourite theme of Luke (Lk 4:1+); he talks mostly about the Holy Spirit as a Power, Lk 1:35; 24:49; Ac 1:8; 10:38; Rm 15:13,19; 1 Co 2:4,5; 1 Th 1:5; Heb 2:4, sent from God by Christ, Ac 2:33, to broadcast the Good News. 1. The Spirit gives the charismata, 1 Co 12:4f, that guarantee the message: the gift of tongues, Ac 2:4+, of miracles, 10:38, of prophecy, 11:27+; 20:23; 21:11, of wisdom, 6:3,5,10; 2. the Spirit gives strength to proclaim Jesus as Messiah in spite of persecution, 4:8,31; 5:32; 6:10; cf. Ph 1:19, and to bear witness to him, Mt 10:20p; Jn 15:26; Ac 1:8; 2 Tm 1:7f, cf. following note; 3. the Spirit guides the Church in her major decisions: the admission of pagans, Ac 8:29,40; 10:19,44-47; 11:12-16; 15:8, without obligation to observe the Law, 15:28; Paul's mission to the pagan world, 13:2f; 16:6-7; 19:1 (Western Text), cf. Mt 3:16+, Ac also mentions the Spirit as received in baptism and forgiving sins, 2:38; cf. Rm 5:5+.

j. The primary function of the apostles is to bear witness: not only to Christ's resurrection, Lk 24:48; Ac 2:32; 3:15; 4:33; 5:32; 13:31; 22:15, but also to the whole of his public life, Lk 1:21; Jn 15:27; Ac 1:22; 10:39f.

k. Nothing can limit the apostolic mission, Is 45:14+. The progress outlined here follows the geographical plan of Ac: Jerusalem was destined to receive the Good News, to be the centre from which it is now spreading, cf. Lk 2:38+.

l. The cloud is part of theophanies in O.T., Ex 13:22+, and in N.T., Lk 9:34-35p. In particular, Dn 7:13, it marks the coming, or parousia, of the Son of Man, Mt 24:30+; v. 11 of this passage; cf. 1 Th 4:17; Rv 1:7; 14:14-16.

m. Thus the Western Text. Text. Rec. 'this Jesus who has been taken up from you into heaven'.

n. The glorious coming, the parousia, see notes on Mt 24 and Lk 17:22-37; 21:5-33.

o. 'Son' (of Alphaeus, of James) is not in the Greek. The apostle Jude is not the Jude 'brother' of Jesus, cf. Mt 13:55; Mk 6:3, and brother of James (Jude 1). Nor is it likely that the apostle James son of Alphaeus was James brother of the Lord, Ac 12:17; 15:13, etc.

p. Cousins of Jesus, cf. Mt 12:46+.

q. The term means Christians, usually the laity as distinct from apostles and elders, cf. 11:1; 12:17; 17-18; Rm 1:13, etc.

r. 'he was listed as one of the twelve apostles' Western Text.

Pentecost

Ex 23:14+ 2 When Pentecost day came round, they^a had all met in one room, •when ¹
^{4:31} suddenly they heard what sounded like a powerful wind from heaven,^b the ²
^{Ps 33:6;} noise of which filled the entire house in which they were sitting; •and something ³
^{104:30;} appeared to them that seemed like tongues of fire;^c these separated and came ⁴
^{Jn 3:8+;} to rest on the head of each of them. •They were all filled with the Holy Spirit, ⁵
^{20:22} and began to speak foreign languages as the Spirit^d gave them the gift of speech. ⁶
^{1:5+; 19:6} Now there were devout men^e living in Jerusalem from every nation under ⁷
^{1:8+;} heaven, •and at this sound they all assembled, each one bewildered to hear these ⁸
^{Ws 1:7} men speaking his own language.^f •They were amazed and astonished. 'Surely' ⁹
^{Lk 24:47} they said 'all these men speaking are Galileans? •How does it happen that each ¹⁰
^{Mt 28:19} of us hears them in his own native language? •Parthians, Medes and Elamites; ¹¹
^{Col 1:23} people from Mesopotamia, Judaea and Cappadocia, Pontus and Asia, •Phrygia ¹²
^{Gn 11:1-9} and Pamphylia, Egypt and the parts of Libya round Cyrene; as well as visitors ¹³
^{10:2+;} from Rome—Jews and proselytes^g alike—Cretans and Arabs; we hear them ¹⁴
^{10:46} preaching in our own language about the marvels of God.' •Everyone was ¹⁵
^{1 Co 14:23} amazed and unable to explain it; they asked one another what it all meant. ¹⁶
^{1 Co 14:23} Some, however, laughed it off. 'They have been drinking too much new wine' ¹⁷
^{1 Co 14:23} they said.

Peter's address to the crowd

Then Peter stood up with the Eleven^h and addressed them in a loud voice: ¹⁴
 'Men of Judaea, and all you who live in Jerusalem, make no mistake about ¹⁵ this, but listen carefully to what I say. •These men are not drunk, as you ¹⁶ imagine; why, it is only the third hour of the day.ⁱ •On the contrary, this is ¹⁷ what the prophet^j spoke of:

In the days to come^k—it is the Lord who speaks— ¹⁷
 I will pour out my spirit on all mankind. ¹⁸
 Their sons and daughters shall prophesy, ¹⁹ your young men shall see visions, ²⁰ your old men shall dream dreams. ²¹
 Even on my slaves, men and women, ²²
 in those days, I will pour out my spirit. ²³
 I will display portents in heaven above ²⁴ and signs on earth below. ²⁵
 The sun will be turned into darkness ²⁶ and the moon into blood ²⁷ before the great Day of the Lord dawns.^l ²⁸
 All who call on the name of the Lord will be saved.^m ²⁹

•Men of Israel, listen to what I am going to say:ⁿ Jesus the Nazarene was a ³⁰ man commended to you by God by the miracles and portents and signs that ³¹ God worked through him when he was among you, as you all know. •This ³² man, who was put into your power by the deliberate intention^o and foreknowledge ³³ of God, you took and had crucified by men outside the Law.^p You killed him, ³⁴ but God raised him to life, freeing him from the pangs of Hades;^q for it was ³⁵ impossible for him to be held in its power since, •as David says of him:^r ³⁶

I saw the Lord before me always, ³⁷
for with him at my right hand nothing can shake me. ³⁸
So my heart was glad ³⁹ and my tongue cried out with joy; ⁴⁰
my body, too, will rest in the hope ⁴¹ that you will not abandon my soul to Hades ⁴² nor allow your holy one to experience corruption. ⁴³
You have made known the way of life to me, ⁴⁴
you will fill me with gladness through your presence. ⁴⁵

- 29 'Brothers, no one can deny that the patriarch David himself is dead and 30 buried: his tomb is still with us. •But since he was a prophet, and knew that God had sworn him an oath to make one of his descendants succeed him on the 31 throne, •what he foresaw and spoke about was the resurrection of the Christ:
he is the one who was not abandoned to Hades, and whose body did not experience 32 corruption. •God raised this man Jesus to life, and all of us are witnesses to that.
33 Now raised to the heights by God's right hand,⁸ he has received from the Father the Holy Spirit, who was promised,⁹ and what you see and hear is the outpouring 34 of that Spirit. •For David himself never went up to heaven;¹⁰ and yet these

c. The shape of the flames (Is 5:24; cf. Is 6:6-7) is here associated with the gift of tongues.

d. One element, vv. 4,11,13, of the Pentecost miracle is the gift of glossolalia common in the early Church: see 10:46; 11:15; 19:6; 1 Co 12:14; cf. Mk 16:17, cf. early prophecy in Israel, Nb 11:25-29; 1 S 10:5-6,10-13; 19:20-24; 1 K 22:10. Cf. the promise of Joel, 3:1-5, quoted by Peter, vv. 17f.

e. 'devout men' Sin. Western Text 'Now the Jews who were living in Jerusalem were men from every nation under heaven'. The other texts have both 'devout men' and 'Jews'.

f. A second characteristic of the Pentecost miracle: the apostles speak a universal language: the unity lost at Babel is restored. This symbolises and anticipates the apostles' worldwide mission.

g. Pagan converts to Judaism who joined the chosen race by being circumcised. These proselytes are not the same as the God-fearers, 10:2+, who admire the Jewish religion and attend the synagogue but do not accept circumcision or the ritual prescribed by the Law. Jews and proselytes are not here additional classes of people: the terms qualify the nations just enumerated.

h. Peter speaks as head of the apostolic body and occupies a leading position, cf. 1:15; 2:37; 3:4,6,12; 4:8,13; 5:3,8,9,15,29; cf. 10-11. See Mt 16:19+.

i. About 9 a.m.

j. Add. 'Joel'. Vv. 17-21 quoted as in Western Text; Alexandrian Text favours the LXX.

k. The messianic age.

l. The day of the Lord's coming in glory, the 'day of Yahweh', Am 5:18+. In Christian preaching, this 'day' is that of Christ's return, Mt 24:1+.

m. The Christians style themselves 'those who invoke the name of the Lord', 9:14,21; 22:16; 1 Co 1:2; 2 Tm 2:22; the title 'Lord' no longer indicates Yahweh but Jesus, cf. Ph 2:11; Ac 3:16+. On Judgement day people will be received or rejected according as they have or have not invoked this name, i.e. acknowledged Jesus as Lord: see Ac 4:12 and Rm 10:9.

n. The content of the earliest apostolic preaching (the 'kerygma') is here summarised for the first time: cf. the five discourses of Peter, Ac 2:14-39; 3:12-26; 4:8-12; 5:29-32; 10:34-43, and the discourse of Paul, 13:16-41. The kerygma is 1. a witness, 1:8+, to Christ's death and resurrection, 2:24+, and to his exaltation, 2:33+; 2:36+. 2. It also provides certain details of Christ's ministry; how it was heralded by John the Baptist, 10:37; 13:24, inaugurated by teaching and miracle, 2:22; 10:38, completed by the appearances of the risen Christ, 10:40,41; 13:31, and by the gift of the Spirit, 2:33; 5:32. 3. It places this story in its wider setting: it appeals to the past, adducing the O.T.

prophecies, 2:23+; 2:25+, and it surveys the future, the advent of the messianic era, inviting Jews and pagans to repentance, 2:38+, so that Christ's glorious return may come the sooner, 3:20-21. The gospels, which are developments of the primitive preaching, adopt the same scheme.

o. The O.T. prophecies demonstrate this divine plan: Ac 3:18; 4:28; 13:29, cf. 8:32-35; 9:22; 10:43; 17:2-3; 18:5,28; 26:22-23,27; 28:23; Lk 18:31+; 22:22; 24:25-27,44.

p. In this case the Romans. The primitive kerygma accused the Jews in the same way, and confronted them with that act of God which raised up Jesus, 2:32,36; 3:13-17; 4:10; 5:30-31; 7:52; 10:39-40; 13:27-30; 17:31; cf. Rm 1:4+; 1 Th 2:14+.

q. 'of Hades' Western Text; 'of death' Text, Rec. Cf. vv. 27 and 31. 'Hades' in LXX is sheol, Nb 16:33+; Mt 16:18+.

r. Quoted according to LXX. In the Hebr. text the psalmist prays only for deliverance from imminent death 'You will not allow your faithful one to see the pit'. Hence the argument presupposes the Greek version which, by translating 'pit' (=grave) as 'corruption', introduces a new idea.

s. Words borrowed from Ps 118 (v. 16 LXX 'The right hand of the Lord has raised me up') used in their preaching by the apostles who took it to be messianic: Ac 4:11; 1 P 2:7; Mt 21:9p,42p; 23:39; Lk 13:35; Jn 12:13; Heb 13:6. But it is possible to translate 'Having been raised up to the right hand of God' and to see in this an introduction to the quotation (v. 34) of Ps 110:1, which is another theme of apostolic preaching: Mt 22:44p; 26:64p; Mk 16:19; Ac 7:55,56; Rm 8:34; 1 Co 15:25; Ep 1:20; Col 3:1; Heb 1:3,13; 8:1; 10:12; 12:2; 1 P 3:22.

t. According to the prophets, the gift of the Spirit would characterise the messianic era, Ezk 36:27+. Peter explains the miracle his hearers have witnessed as the 'pouring out' of this spirit, foretold in Jt 3:1-2, by the risen Christ.

u. The argument is, apparently, that David lies in his tomb and therefore did not ascend into heaven; hence God's summons was addressed not to him but to the one who came out from the tomb. A variant reading 'for he himself says', in place of 'and yet these words are his' (i.e. it was said by, not to, him), reduces the argument to that of Mt 22:43-45.

v. Conclusion of the argument from scripture: it is by his resurrection that Jesus has been constituted the 'Lord' of whom Ps 110 speaks, and the 'Messiah' (Christ) to whom Ps 16 refers. From Ps 2:7 (Son of God), Ac 13:33+; Heb 1:5; 5:5; Rm 1:4+ develop a similar argument. Cf. also Ac 5:31 (leader and saviour); 10:42 and Rm 14:9 (Judge and Lord of living and dead); Ph 2:9-11 (glorified Lord).

14:8-10 The cure of a lame man

Lk 8:51 3 Once, when Peter and John were going up to the Temple for the prayers at 1 the ninth hour,^a • it happened that there was a man being carried past. He 2 was a cripple from birth; and they used to put him down every day near the Temple entrance called the Beautiful Gate so that he could beg from the people 2:14+ going in. • When this man saw Peter and John on their way into the Temple he 3 begged from them. • Both Peter and John looked straight at him and said, 'Look 4 at us'. • He turned to them expectantly, hoping to get something from them, 5 but Peter said, 'I have neither silver nor gold, but I will give you what I have: 6 3:16+; 4:10 in the name of Jesus Christ the Nazarene, walk!'^b • Peter then took him by 7
 Mt 2:23+ the hand and helped him to stand up. Instantly his feet and ankles became firm,
 Is 35:6 he jumped up, stood, and began to walk, and he went with them into the Temple, 8

 Lk 1:12+ the Beautiful Gate of the Temple. They were all astonished and unable to 5:3; 19:17 explain what had happened to him.

Peter's address to the people

Everyone came running towards them in great excitement, to the Portico of 11 5:12 Solomon, as it is called, where the man was still clinging to Peter and John.

w. Each of the great apostolic discourses closes with a call to repentance (cf. Mt 3:2+) to obtain forgiveness of sins: Ac 3:19,26; 5:31; 10:43; 13:38; cf. 17:30; 26:20; Lk 1:77; 3:8; 5:32; 13:3.

x. Baptism is administered 'in the name of Jesus Christ' (cf. 1:5+) and the recipient 'invokes the name of the Lord Jesus' (cf. 2:21+; 3:16+); 8:16; 10:48; 19:5; 22:16; 1 Co 1:13,15; 6:11; 10:2; Ga 3:27; Rm 6:3; cf. Jm 2:7. Such expressions are not necessarily the actual liturgical formulae of baptism, cf. Mt 28:19, they may simply indicate its significance, namely, that the baptised profess their faith in Christ, and Christ adopts those who thenceforth are dedicated to him.

y. The promise is addressed primarily to the Jews, 3:25-26; 13:46; Rm 9:4.

z. I.e. the pagans, alluding to Is 57:19 quoted and explained in Ep 2:13-17; cf. also Ac 22:21.

aa. Or 'he bore witness', cf. 8:25; 28:23.

bb. Luke repeatedly and deliberately notes the Church's numerical growth: v. 47; 4:4; 5:14; 6:1,7; 9:31+; 11:21,24; 16:5; cf. 12:24; 13:48-49; 19:20.

cc. Cf. this passage with 4:32-35 and 5:12-16. These three composite editorial 'summaries' paint similar pictures of life in the first Christian community.

dd. Not the proclamation of the Good News to non-Christians, cf. 15:35, but instructions for the newly converted in which the scriptures were explained in the light of the Christian Event.

ee. What constitutes this 'brotherhood' or 'fellowship' is a united purpose, cf. Ga 2:9; Phm 6; 1 Jn 1:3,6,7, and a care for the poorer members to the extent of holding all goods in common, cf. Rm 15:26; 2 Co 8:4; 9:13; Ph 1:5+. In a word: charity.

ff. See v. 46; 20:7,11; 27:35; Lk 24:30,35. In itself the phrase suggests a Jewish meal at which the one who presides pronounces a blessing before dividing the bread. For Christians, however, it implies the eucharistic ceremony, 1 Co 10:16; 11:24; Lk 22:19p; 24:35+. This, v. 46, was celebrated not in the Temple but in private houses; an ordinary meal would accompany it, cf. 1 Co 11:20-34.

gg. Prayers in common, with the apostles presiding, 6:4; 4:24-30, is one example. Cf. 1:14,24; 12:5. There are many examples in Ac of the constant prayer Jesus recommended (Mt 6:5) and practised (Mt 14:23+). There is the prayer in common presided over by the apostles (1:14; 4:24-30; 6:4) with the breaking of bread as the central ceremony (2:42,46; 20:7,11); the prayer for special occasions like the election and ordination to office in the Church (1:24; 6:6; 13:3; 14:23)—accompanied in the last two cases by fasting); the confirmation of the Samaritans (8:15); the prayer in time of persecution (4:24-30; 12:5,12). There are also individual prayers: that of Stephen for himself and his persecutors (7:59-60), the prayer of Paul after his vision (9:5), of Peter and Paul before they work miracles (9:40; 28:8), of Peter when God sends him to Cornelius (10:9; 11:5) who is himself a man of prayer (10:2,4,30-31), of Paul and Silas in prison (16:25), of Paul when he bids farewell at Miletus (20:36) and at Tyre. In most of these cases the prayer is a petition (see also the petition for forgiveness in 8:22-24), but there is also the prayer of praise (16:25) and thanksgiving (28:15). Prayer is evidence of faith: 'to invoke the name of Jesus Christ' is the mark of a Christian (2:21,38; 9:14,21; 22:16).

hh. Add. 'in Jerusalem, and upon all there was great fear'.

ii. Joy is the sequel of faith: 8:39; 13:48,52; 16:34; cf. 5:41; Lk 1:14+; Rm 15:13.

jj. Cf. 3:8,9; 4:21; 13:48; 21:20; Lk 2:20+.

kk. When judgement comes the members of the Christian community are assured of salvation, 2:21+, cf. 13:48 and St Paul's letters. The Church is thus identified with 'the remnant of Israel', Is 4:3+. Cf. Rm 9:27, 3

a. The time of evening sacrifice, cf. Ex 29:39,42; Lk 1:8-10+; Ac 10:3,30.

b. Var. 'set up and walk', cf. Lk 5:23-24, etc.

c. The Christians see in Jesus the mysterious 'servant' of Is 52:13-53:12 (quoted in part in Ac 8:32-33), cf. Is 42:1+. See below, v. 26; 4:27,30. His 'glorification' by God is his resurrection, v. 15. Cf. Jn 17:5+.

d. Cf. Is 53:12. Same allusion to the Servant Song in Rm 4:25; 8:32; Ga 2:20; Ep 5:2,25; Ac 7:52.

e. As they disowned Moses, 7:35, himself a figure of Christ.

f. Var. 'disowned'.

g. Cf. with Ac 4:27,30: Jesus is 'the holy servant of God'. He is also 'the holy one of God' and 'the holy one' par excellence: Ac 2:27; Lk 1:35; 4:34; Mk 1:24+; Jn 6:69; Rv 3:7.

h. Cf. Is 53:11; Ac 7:52; 22:14. See also Mt 27:19; Lk 23:47; 1 P 3:18; 1 Jn 2:1.

i. The one who leads his subjects to full life, imparting his own life to them. In the Roman liturgy the Easter Sequence borrows the expression Dux vitae mortuus regnat vivus. This same title of 'leader' is given, 7:27,35, to Moses who prefigures Christ. Cf. 5:31+; Heb 2:10.

j. The 'name', according to the ancients, is inseparable from the person and shares his prerogatives, see Ex 3:14+. By invoking the name of Jesus, 2:21+; 38+, his power is stirred to action, 3:6; 4:7,10,30; 10:43; 16:18; 19:13; Lk 9:49; 10:17; see also Jn 14:13,14; 15:16; 16:24,26; 20:31. Faith is of course required if this invocation is to be effective, cf. Ac 19:13-17; Mt 8:10+.

k. Apparently an allusion to Lk 23:34; cf. Ac 7:60.

l. By 'repentance' man 'comes back' to God, cf. Mt 3:2+. The pagans must return to God by forsaking idols; see 1 Th 1:9; Ga 4:9; 1 Co 10:7,14; Ac 14:15; 15:19; 26:18,20; the Jews must turn to the Lord by acknowledging Jesus as Lord: cf. 2 Co 3:16; Ac 9:35. The expression of Lk 1:16; Ac 11:21; cf. 1 P 2:25 is somewhat different. Cf. also Is 6:10, quoted in Ac 28:27; Mt 13:15; Mk 4:12; cf. Jn 12:40.

m. This epoch coincides with that of Christ's coming and of 'the restoration of all things', cf. 1:7+; Rm 2:6+, a period which, as the apostles thought, would see the re-establishment of the kingdom in Israel, Ac 1:6-7. Repentance and conversion hasten its coming, cf. 2 P 3:12.

n. Or 'Jesus who has been appointed Christ for you', cf. 2:36+. When the time comes, Christ who became King Messiah through his resurrection will return to establish his kingdom for ever and to make all creation new, v. 21, cf. Rm 8:19+.

o. Term used by the prophets for the return from Exile (foretaste of the messianic age), Jr 15:19, etc.

Peter and John before the Sanhedrin

Lk 22:4+ 4 While they were still talking to the people the priests came up to them, accom- 1
5:17-18,24 panied by the captain of the Temple and the Sadducees.^a •They were extremely 2 23:6-8; 24:15,21 annoyed at their teaching the people the doctrine of the resurrection from the
1 Co 15:20-23 dead by proclaiming the resurrection of Jesus. •They arrested them, but as it 3
2:41+ was already late, they held them till the next day. •But many of those who had 4 listened to their message became believers, the total number of whom had now risen to something like five thousand.

The next day the rulers, elders and scribes^b had a meeting in Jerusalem •with 5
Lk 3:2+ 5:17 Annas the high priest, Caiaphas, Jonathan,^c Alexander and all the members 6 of the high-priestly families. •They made the prisoners stand in the middle and 7
Lk 20:2 began to interrogate them, 'By what power, and by whose name have you men 8
1:8+; 2:14+; 22:1 done this?' •Then Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit, addressed them, 'Rulers of 9
Mt 10:20 the people, and elders! •If you are questioning us today about an act of kindness 10
3:6,16+ to a cripple, and asking us how he was healed, •^dthen I am glad to tell you all, 11
2:23-24+ and would indeed be glad to tell the whole people of Israel, that it was by the 12
Ps 118:22 name of Jesus Christ the Nazarene, the one you crucified, whom God raised 13
2:33+ from the dead, by this name and by no other that this man is able to stand up 14
Mt 21:42p perfectly healthy, here in your presence, today. •This is the stone rejected by you 15
1 P 2:4,7 the builders, but which has proved to be the keystone. •For of all the names in the 16
2:21+ world given to men, this is the only one by which we can be saved.^e

They were astonished at the assurance shown by Peter and John, considering 13
Jn 7:15 they were uneducated laymen; and they recognised them as associates of Jesus; 14
Jn 11:47-48 but when they saw the man who had been cured standing by their side, they could 15 find no answer. •So they ordered them to stand outside while the Sanhedrin had 16 a private discussion. •'What are we going to do with these men?' they asked. 17
'It is obvious to everybody in Jerusalem that a miracle has been worked through 18 them in public, and we cannot deny it. •But to stop the whole thing spreading 19 any further among the people, let us caution them never to speak to anyone in 20 this name again.'

So they called them in and gave them a warning^f on no account to make 18
5:28,40 statements or to teach in the name of Jesus. •But Peter and John retorted, 'You 19
5:29 must judge whether in God's eyes it is right to listen to you and not to God. •We 20
1:8+ cannot promise to stop proclaiming what we have seen and heard.' •The court 21
Jr 20:9 repeated the warnings and then released them; they could not think of any way 22
1 Co 9:16 to punish them, since all the people were giving glory to God for what 23
2 Tm 1:7-8 had happened. •The man who had been miraculously cured was over forty years 24 2:47+ old.

The apostles' prayer under persecution

As soon as they were released they went to the community and told them 23 everything the chief priests and elders had said to them. •When they heard it 24 they lifted up their voice to God all together. 'Master,' they prayed 'it is you 25 14:15+ who made heaven and earth and sea, and everything in them; •you it is who said 26 through the Holy Spirit and speaking through our ancestor David, your servant:^g prayed, the house where they were assembled rocked; they were all filled with 4:33

the Holy Spirit and began to proclaim the word of God boldly.^l 3:16 +

The early Christian community^m his own use anything that he had, as everything they owned was held in common. Ph 1:27

33 The apostles continued to testify to the resurrection of the Lord Jesus with = 2:44-45

35 houses would sell them, and bring the money from them, •to present it to the Lk 12:33

The generosity of Barnabas

36 There was a Levite of Cypriot origin called Joseph whom the apostles surnamed
37 Barnabas (which means 'son of encouragement').^p •He owned a piece of land 11:22; 13:1

q. The earliest Christian preaching made a point of showing how Jesus fulfilled O.T. prophecy: he was a descendant of David, 2:30; 13:34, he appeared as a prophet, Moses' successor, 3:22f, cf. Mt 16:14 +; Jn 1:21 +, he suffered, Ac 2:23 +, he was the stone rejected by the builders (the Jews) but now set in a place of honour, 4:11, he rose again, 2:25-31; 13:33-37, and is at God's right hand, 2:34f.

r. Thus implementing the promise recalled in v. 22, because the Greek verb means both 'to raise up' and 'to raise up again', God by raising Christ from the dead fulfils the promises made to the fathers, 13:32-34; 24:14-15; 26:6-8.

s. Cf. 26:23; 2 Tm 1:10; Ga 3:14. Christ by his resurrection brought to the world the blessing promised to Abraham, v. 25.

t. Others translate 'so long as each of you turns from your wicked ways'.

4 a. The priestly aristocratic faction opposed the Pharisees who were the pious and popular party, see Mt 3:7 +. The Sadducees are always represented as denying the doctrine of resurrection, Ac 23:6-8; Lk 20:27-38p. More than once the mutual hostility of these two parties produces an alliance of Pharisees with Christians, cf. Ac 5:34; 23:8-9; 26:5-8; Lk 20:39.

b. The Great Sanhedrin of Jerusalem, Israel's supreme court.

c. Cf. Lk 22:66 +. Var. 'John'.

d. For vv. 10-12 we follow the Western Text.

e. 'Jesus' means 'God saves', Mt 1:21.

f. Apparently a solemn legal warning. In matters of this kind the accused (unless they were rabbis) could not be imprisoned except for a second offence (the case in 5:28).

g. Text corrupt, translation uncertain.

h. 'Anointed': the Greek word is 'Christ'; it is explained here, v. 27, according to its etymological sense.

i. Representing respectively the 'kings' and 'princes' the Psalm mentions. For 'Herod', cf. Lk 23:6-16.

j. The 'anointing' that has constituted him King Messiah, 'the Christ', cf. Mt 3:16 +.

k. Lit. 'your hand and counsel'.

l. A miniature Pentecost, cf. the earlier one, 2:1f.

m. A summary like that of 2:42-47. The prevailing idea is here the pooling of resources; this precludes two examples: Barnabas, Ananias and Sapphira. The emphasis on sacrificing possessions is characteristic of Luke's religious outlook.

n. A power that showed itself by miracles. Cf. 2:22; 3:12; 4:7; 6:8; 8:13; 10:38; 1 Th 1:5; 1 Co 2:4-5.

o. By the populace: cf. 2:47; 4:21; 5:13.

p. The Greek word means both 'consolation' and 'encouragement'. Cf. 11:23. 'son of', a semitic expression here meaning 'with an aptitude for'. On Barnabas, see 9:27; 11:22-30; 12:25; ch. 13-15; 1 Co 9:6; Ga 2; Col 4:10.

About three hours later his wife came in, not knowing what had taken place. 7

 she said 'that was the price.' •Peter then said, 'So you and your husband have 9

The apostles' arrest and miraculous deliverance

 Sadducees. Prompted by jealousy, •they arrested the apostles and had them put 18

 But at night the angel of the Lord opened the prison gates and said as he led 19 them out, •'Go and stand in the Temple, and tell the people all about this new 20 Life'.^g •They did as they were told; they went into the Temple at dawn and 21 began to preach.

A summons to appear before the Sanhedrin

When the high priest arrived, he and his supporters convened the Sanhedrin
 —this was the full Senate^h of Israel—and sent to the gaol for them to be brought.
 But when the officials arrived at the prison they found they were not inside, so 22 they went back and reported, •'We found the gaol securely locked and the warders 23 on duty at the gates, but when we unlocked the door we found no one inside'.
 4:1+ When the captain of the Temple and the chief priests heard this news they 24 wondered what this could mean. •Then a man arrived with fresh news. 25
 'At this very moment' he said 'the men you imprisoned are in the Temple.
 They are standing there preaching to the people.' •The captain went with his 26 men and fetched them. They were afraid to use force in case the people stoned them.

When they had brought them in to face the Sanhedrin, the high priest 27 demanded an explanation. •'We gave you a formal warning' he said 'not to 28 4:18+ preach in this name,ⁱ and what have you done? You have filled Jerusalem with Mt 27:25 your teaching, and seem determined to fix the guilt of this man's death on us.'

 that they wanted to put them to death.

Gamaliel's intervention

- 34 One member of the Sanhedrin, however, a Pharisee called Gamaliel, who was 22:3
a doctor of the Law and respected by the whole people,^m stood up and asked 35 to have the men taken outside for a time. •Then he addressed the Sanhedrin, 36 'Men of Israel, be careful how you deal with these people. •There was Theudas 23:9 who became notorious not so long ago. He claimed to be someone important, Jn 7:50f and he even collected about four hundred followers; but when he was killed, 37 all his followers scattered and that was the end of them. •And then there was Lk 2:2+
Judas the Galilean, at the time of the census, who attracted crowds of supporters;
38 but he got killed too, and all his followers dispersed." •What I suggest, therefore, Mt 15:13 is that you leave these men alone and let them go. If this enterprise, this movement Lk 20:4 39 of theirs, is of human origin it will break up of its own accord; •but if it does in fact come from God you will not only be unable to destroy them, but you might find yourselves fighting against God.'^o 2 M 7:19
- 40 His advice was accepted; •and they had the apostles called in, gave orders for them to be flogged, warned them not to speak in the name of Jesus and the honour of suffering humiliation for the sake of the name.^p 22:19

II. THE EARLIEST MISSIONS

The institution of the Seven

- 1 6 About this time, when the number of disciples^a was increasing, the Hellenists 2:41+ made a complaint against the Hebrews:^b in the daily distribution their own 2:45

5 a. Prompted by love of money, Ananias and Sapphira tried to deceive the apostles and the Holy Spirit which was leading and directing them; this was their sin.

b. The meaning of this term, adopted from the O.T., cf. Ac 7:38, to signify the messianic community, Mt 16:18+, expanded as Christianity developed. It originally indicated the mother church in Jerusalem, Ac 8:1; 11:22, etc.; later the individual churches throughout Judaea, Ga 1:22; 1 Th 2:14; cf. Ac 9:31, and among the pagans, Ac 13:1; 14:23; 15:41; 16:5; Rm 16:1,4; 1 Co 1:2+, etc.; Jm 5:14; 3 Jn 9; Rv 1:4; 2:1, etc., referring to their 'gatherings', 1 Co 11:18; 14:23,34, etc., cf. Ac 19:32; Phm 2, or to their regions, Rm 16:5; 1 Co 16:19; Col 4:15. Lastly, it stands for the Church united under God, Ac 20:28; 1 Co 10:32; 12:28, etc., for the Church as Body and Bride of Christ, Col 1:18+; Ep 5:23-32, and for the Church as including the whole cosmos, Ep 1:23+.

c. This third 'summary' stresses the miraculous power of the apostles, cf. 2:43; 4:33. Vv. 12b-14 interrupt the development of this theme.

d. Here, it seems, not the apostles but all the faithful.

e. Rather than 'More and more joined (the community) as believers in the Lord'. Cf. 11:24.

f. Var. 'Annas the high priest', cf. 4:6.

g. Lit. 'all the words (cf. v. 32; 10:37) of this Life'. This means the same thing as 'the message of salvation', 13:26. The purpose of Christian preaching is the 'salvation', cf. 4:12; 11:14; 15:11; 16:17,30-31, and 'life', cf. 3:15; 11:18; 13:46,48, promised to those 'who invoke the name of the Lord', 2:21,40,47; 4:12.

h. The terms 'Sanhedrin' and 'Senate' both indicate the same council, the Great Sanhedrin of Jerusalem, cf. Lk 22:66+.

i. Western Text " 'Did we not expressly forbid you to preach in that name? And now...' " Then Peter answered, 'Which must we obey? God or man?' 'God' he said. And Peter then replied, 'The God of our ancestors...' "

j. The phrase is repeated in 10:39 (cf. 13:29). It recalls Dt 21:23, quoted in Ga 3:13, cf. 1 P 2:24.

—k. The title matches 'Prince of life', 3:15+; it also corresponds to 'Prince and Redeemer' applied to Moses as a prefiguring of Christ, 7:35 (cf. 7:25). See also Heb 2:10; 12:2. There is an implicit comparison of Jesus with Moses.

l. Cf. Mt 10:20p; Jn 15:26-27; Ac 1:8.

m. Gamaliel I, Paul's teacher, 22:3, belonged to the school of Hillel and was the leading exponent of the more liberal and humane interpretation of the Law. The policy he urges here is in line with that of the Pharisaic party, cf. 4:1+.

n. Josephus mentions the revolts of Theudas and of Judas the Galilean but the dates he gives seem improbable. Both must have taken place about the time Jesus was born.

o. A variant introduces the idea of ritual purity '...leave them alone and do not dirty your hands. For if... God, not only you but kings and tyrants will be powerless to destroy them. Do not therefore touch these men lest you find yourselves at war with God.'

p. The name for whose sake the apostles suffer, cf. 21:13; 1 P 4:14; 3 Jn 7, the name they preach, 4:10,12,17,18; 5:28,40; cf. 3:6,16; 8:12,16; 9:15,16,27,28, and which the Christians invoke, 2:21; 4:12; 9:14,21; 22:16, is the name, i.e. the person, of Jesus, 3:16+, the name he received at his resurrection, 2:36+, 'the name above all other names'. This name was 'Lord', hitherto reserved to God, Ph 2:9-11+.

6 a. 'Disciples': a new use of the term, peculiar to Ac, to indicate the Christians who are thus associated with the small circle of those first adherents of Jesus who are called by this name in the gospels.

b. 'Hellenists': Jews from outside Palestine; in Jerusalem they had their own synagogues where the Bible was read in Greek. The 'Hebrews' were native Palestinian Jews; their language was Aramaic but in their synagogues the Bible was read in Hebr. This distinction made its way into the early Church. Missionary initiative was to come from the hellenistic group.

widows were being overlooked. •So the Twelve called a full meeting of the 2 disciples and addressed them, 'It would not be right for us to neglect the word of God so as to give out food; •you, brothers, must select^c from among yourselves 3 seven men of good reputation, filled with the Spirit and with wisdom; we will hand over this duty to them, •and continue to devote ourselves to prayer and 4 to the service of the word'.^d •The whole assembly approved of this proposal and 5 elected Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Spirit, together with Philip, Prochorus, Nicanor, Timon, Parmenas, and Nicolaus of Antioch, a convert to Judaism.^e •They presented these to the apostles, who prayed and laid their hands 6 on them.^f

The word of the Lord continued to spread:^g the number of disciples in Jeru- 7 salem was greatly increased, and a large group of priests made their submission to the faith.

Stephen's arrest

Stephen was filled with grace and power and began to work miracles and 8 great signs among the people. •But then certain people came forward to debate 9 with Stephen, some from Cyrene and Alexandria who were members of the synagogue called the Synagogue of Freedmen,^h and others from Cilicia and Asia.
They found they could not get the better of him because of his wisdom, and 10 because it was the Spirit that prompted what he said. •So they procured some 11 men to say, 'We heard him using blasphemous language against Moses and against God'. •Having in this way turned the people against him as well as the elders 12 and scribes, they took Stephen by surprise, and arrested him and brought him before the Sanhedrin. •There they put up false witnesses to say, 'This man 13 is always making speeches against this Holy Place and the Law. •We have heard 14 him say that Jesus the Nazarene is going to destroy this Place and alter the traditions that Moses handed down to us'.ⁱ •The members of the Sanhedrin all 15 looked intently at Stephen, and his face appeared to them like the face of an angel.^j

Stephen's speech

7 The high priest asked, 'Is this true?' •He replied,^a 'My brothers, my fathers, 1 listen to what I have to say. The God of glory appeared to our ancestor Abraham, 2 while he was in Mesopotamia before settling in Haran,^b •and said to him, "Leave 3 your country and your family and go to the land I will show you". •So he left 4 Chaldaea and settled in Haran; and after his father died God made him leave Haran and come to this land where you are living today. •God did not give him 5 a single square foot of this land to call his own, yet he promised to give it to him and after him to his descendants, childless though he was. •The actual words God 6 used when he spoke to him are that his descendants would be exiles in a foreign land, where they would be slaves and oppressed for four hundred years. •"But I will pass 7 judgement on the nation that enslaves them" God said "and after this they will leave, and worship me in this place."^c •Then he made the covenant of circumcision: so 8 when his son Isaac was born he circumcised him on the eighth day. Isaac did the same for Jacob, and Jacob for the twelve patriarchs.
•The patriarchs were jealous of Joseph and sold him into slavery in Egypt. But 9
God was with him, •and rescued him from all his miseries by making him wise 10 enough to attract the attention of Pharaoh king of Egypt, who made him governor of Egypt and put him in charge of the royal household. •Then a famine came that 11 caused much suffering throughout Egypt and Canaan, and our ancestors could find nothing to eat. •When Jacob heard that there was grain for sale in Egypt, 12
he sent our ancestors there on a first visit, •but it was on the second that Joseph 13 made himself known to his brothers, and told Pharaoh about his family. •Joseph 14 then sent for his father Jacob and his whole family, a total of seventy-five people.
Jacob went down into Egypt and after he and our ancestors had died there, 15

c. Var. 'We shall select'.

d. When the community met for public worship the apostles had two functions: they recited the prayers and were responsible also for the catechesis (the doctrinal elaboration of the Good News).

e. Luke does not call the chosen seven 'deacons', but twice uses the word diakonia ('service' v. 4; translated 'distribution' in v. 1). All seven have Greek names; the last is a proselyte, cf. 2:11+. The hellenistic Christians now have their own organisation independent of the Hebrew group.

f. Lit. 'and they prayed and laid their hands on them': possibly a gesture of the community, cf. 13:1-3. more probably (v. 3) of the apostles.

g. A fresh formula, see also 12:24; 19:20; cf. Lk 1:80+, here juxtaposed with the earlier one, see Ac 2:41+.

h. Probably the descendants of Jews carried off to Rome by Pompey in 63 B.C. who were sold into slavery and later released.

i. The 'false witnesses' at the trial of Jesus similarly objected that he 'would destroy the Temple'. There is also a similarity in the climax of the two trials, Ac 7:56-57; Mt 26:62-66. The allegations concerning Mosaic practice will be made in Paul's case also, Ac 15:1,5; 21:21,28; 25:8; 28:17.

j. The sight of an angel induces religious awe, cf. Jg 13:6. The face of Moses, reflecting the glory of God as he came down from Sinai, produced the same effect, Ex 34:29-35; 2 Co 3:7-18; so also the appearance of Jesus was changed, Mt 17:2; Lk 9:29. The members of the Sanhedrin in their turn witness a transfiguration, that of Stephen as he contemplates the glory of God, Ac 7:55-56. The narrative, interrupted by the insertion of Stephen's discourse, 7:1-54, is resumed in 7:55.

7 a. The discourse opens with a summary of the stories of Abraham and Joseph, vv. 2-16; it goes on to expound the history of Moses, vv. 17-43 (cf. the charge made against Stephen, 6:11). With Moses' divine mission of salvation Stephen contrasts the attitude of Israel: rejection, disobedience, faithlessness—traditional themes (cf. Dt) but here elaborated with the Christian Event in mind. When Stephen speaks of Moses he is thinking of Christ whom Moses prefigured: the Jews react now as the Israelites did then. From the subsequent history of Israel Stephen selects only the building of the Temple; his purpose is to point out that God does not dwell in man-made temples, vv. 44-50 (cf. the allegation in 6:13). The speech ends with a fierce diatribe, vv. 51-53, which uses one of the themes of the earliest Christian preaching, cf. 2:23+.

b. According to Gn 11:31 the apparition took place at Haran. Stephen follows a non-biblical tradition.

c. Mt. Horeb, but Stephen says 'this place' (i.e. the Jerusalem Temple) instead.

d. 'father of Shechem': this detail is taken from Gn 33:19. Var. 'from the sons of Hemor, son of Shechem', 'from the sons of Emmor at Shechem', 'from the sons of Emmor (inhabitants of Shechem)'. V. 16 follows a non-biblical tradition.

e. According to Jewish traditions.

f. By raising up Jesus from the dead God has appointed him 'leader', cf. 5:31, and 'judge', cf. 10:42; 17:31.

g. In Ex 2:15 Moses runs away because he is afraid of Pharaoh; here it is because his compatriots reject him.

h. The Bible does not apply this verb to Moses, but in Ac 3:13-14 it is applied to Jesus. Nor does the Bible give the name 'redeemer' to Moses. The image of Christ shades into that of Moses who prefigured him.

and redeemer through the angel who had appeared to him in the bush. •It was 36
 Moses who, after performing miracles and signs in Egypt, led them out across the 37
 Red Sea and through the wilderness for forty years. •It was Moses who told the 38 sons of Israel, "God will raise up a prophet like myself for you from among 39 your own brothers".ⁱ •When they held the assembly^j in the wilderness it was only 40 through Moses that our ancestors could communicate with the angel who had 41 spoken to him on Mount Sinai;^k it was he who was entrusted with words of life^l 42 to hand on to us. •This is the man that our ancestors refused to listen to: they 43 pushed him aside, turned back to Egypt in their thoughts,^m •and said to Aaron, 44
 "Make some gods to be our leaders; we do not understand what has come over this 45 Moses who led us out of Egypt". •It was then that they made a bull calf and offered 46 sacrifice to the idol. They were perfectly happy with something they had made 47 for themselves. •God turned away from them and abandoned them to the 48 worship of the army of heaven,ⁿ as scripture says in the book of the prophets: 49

Did you bring me victims and sacrifices in the wilderness for all those forty years, you House of Israel?

No, you carried the tent of Moloch on your shoulders and the star of the god Rephan, those idols that you had made to adore.

So now I will exile you even further than Babylon.

•While they were in the desert our ancestors possessed the Tent of Testimony 44 that had been constructed according to the instructions God gave Moses, telling 45 him to make an exact copy of the pattern he had been shown. •It was handed 46 down from one ancestor of ours to another until Joshua brought it into the 47 country we had conquered from the nations which were driven out by God as 48 we advanced. Here it stayed until the time of David. •He won God's favour and 49 asked permission to have a temple built for the House^o of Jacob, •though it was 50 Solomon who actually built God's house for him. •Even so the Most High does 51 not live in a house that human hands have built: for as the prophet says: 52

With heaven my throne and earth my footstool,

what house could you build me,

what place could you make for my rest?

Was not all this made by my hand?

•You stubborn people, with your pagan hearts and pagan ears. You are always 51 resisting the Holy Spirit,^p just as your ancestors used to do. •Can you name 52 a single prophet your ancestors never persecuted? In the past they killed those 53 who foretold the coming of the Just One, and now you have become his 54 betrayers, his murderers. •You who had the Law brought to you by angels are 55
 the very ones who have not kept it.^q

They were infuriated when they heard this, and ground their teeth at him. 56

The stoning of Stephen. Saul as persecutor

But Stephen, filled with the Holy Spirit, gazed into heaven and saw the glory 55 of God, and Jesus standing at God's right hand.^r •'I can see heaven thrown open' 56
 he said 'and the Son of Man standing at the right hand of God.' •At this all the 57 members of the council shouted out and stopped their ears with their hands; then 58 they all rushed at him, •sent him out of the city and stoned him. The wit- 59 nesses^r put down their clothes at the feet of a young man called Saul.^s •As they 60 were stoning him, Stephen said in invocation,^t 'Lord Jesus, receive my spirit'.^u Then he knelt down and said aloud, 'Lord, do not hold this sin against them'; 61 and with these words he fell asleep. 8 •Saul entirely approved of the killing. 1

That day a bitter persecution started against the church in Jerusalem, and 2 everyone^b except the apostles fled to the country districts of Judaea and Samaria.^c

- 2 There were some devout people, however, who buried Stephen and made great mourning for him.
- 3 Saul then worked for the total destruction of the Church; he went from house to house arresting both men and women and sending them to prison.

Philip in Samaria

- 4 Those who had escaped went from place to place preaching the Good News. = 11:19
- 5 One of them was Philip who went to a Samaritan town^d and proclaimed the 6:5; 21:8
- 6 Christ to them.^e The people united in welcoming the message Philip preached, 18:5 + 5:16
- 7 either because they had heard of the miracles he worked or because they saw 18:5 + 5:16
- 8 them for themselves. There were, for example, unclean spirits that came shrieking 18:5 +
- 9 out of many who were possessed, and several paralytics and cripples were cured. 18:5 + 5:16
- 10 As a result there was great rejoicing in that town. 18:5 +

Simon the magician

- 9 Now a man called Simon had already practised magic arts in the town and astounded the Samaritan people. He had given it out that he was someone
- 10 momentous, and everyone believed what he said; eminent citizens and ordinary
- 11 people alike had declared, 'He is the divine power that is called Great'.^f They
- 12 had only been won over to him because of the long time he had spent working
- 13 on them with his magic. But when they believed Philip's preaching of the Good
- 14 News about the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were
- 15 baptised, both men and women, and even Simon himself became a believer. 1:5 +
- 16 After his baptism Simon, who went round constantly with Philip, was astonished
- 17 when he saw the wonders and great miracles that took place.
- 18 When the apostles in Jerusalem heard that Samaria had accepted the word
- 19 of God, they sent Peter and John to them, and they went down there, and
- 20 prayed for the Samaritans to receive the Holy Spirit, for as yet he had not come
- 21 down on any of them: they had only been baptised in the name of the Lord Jesus.
- 22 Then they laid hands on them, and they received the Holy Spirit.

i. A messianic text already cited, 3:22. One other than Moses—the Messiah—is to play a similar part, Mt 16:14 +; Jn 1:21 +.

j. Lit. 'at the time of the assembly'. The word also means 'church', cf. 5:11 +. Dt uses 'day of assembly' to mean the final occasion when the Law was promulgated, Ex 19:10-25. From the earliest days Christians have seen the Church as the successor to this solemn 'assembly' of the chosen people in the desert.

k. Moses acted as mediator between 'the angel' and the people. 'The angel of Yahweh' in the earliest texts is identical with Yahweh as manifesting himself, Gn 16:7 +, cf. Mt 1:20 +. Later, a distinction was made between Yahweh and his angel in order to emphasise the divine transcendence. Thus Moses is represented as in immediate touch not with God but with one or several angels. There are traces of this idea in Ga 3:19; Heb 2:2.

l. To obey the Law is to live, Dt 4:1; 8:1, 3; 30:15-16, 19-20; 32:46-47; Lv 18:5, quoted in Ga 3:12; Rm 10:5; the Law therefore is referred to as 'the statutes of life', Ezk 33:15; Ba 3:9. For the Christian, the gospel preaching is 'the word of life', Ph 2:16; cf. Ac 5:20, i.e. 'the word of salvation', Ac 13:26. Since life springs from God's word, this word is itself 'living': cf. Heb 4:12; 1 P 1:23. And Jesus is himself 'the Word of life': 1 Jn 1:1.

m. Cf. Nb 14:3 and Ex 16:3. Cf. Ezk 20:8-14.

n. Biblical phrase for the stars, often worshipped as gods.

o. Var. 'for the God'.

p. Who spoke through Moses and the prophets.

q. Stephen's vision is to be related to his transfiguration, 6:15 +.

r. The false witnesses mentioned in 6:13-14. It was for the hostile witnesses to initiate the execution of the sentence, Dt 17:7.

t. A good example of 'invoking the name of the Lord', 2:21 +.

8 a. Vv. 1-4 are made up of a number of brief remarks: Stephen's burial (v. 2), the natural conclusion of the foregoing narrative; Saul's campaign against the Christians (vv. 1a and 3) which links the account of the stoning of Stephen, cf. 7:58b, with what appears to be its sequel, namely Paul's conversion, 9:1-30; finally a note on the Church persecuted and scattered (vv. 1b-4) which introduces the narrative of Philip's mission, 8:5-40, and that of Peter, 9:32-11:18; v. 4 is found again in 11:19. We have here, therefore, a preliminary sketch of the various themes developed in the following chapters up to ch. 12.

b. 'everyone': a very general statement. The persecution in fact seems to have been directed principally against the Hellenists, cf. 6:1, 5, and it was this group, scattered by persecution, that gave the church its first missionaries, cf. v. 4; 11:19-20.

c. Second stage of the Church's expansion, cf. 1:8. The third begins with the foundation of the church of Antioch, 11:20.

d. Var. 'the town of Samaria', 'the town of Caesarea'. The reference is probably not to the town called Samaria, by this time a hellenistic city and known as Sebaste, but to the province: those who are evangelised are the 'Samaritans' in the Jewish sense of the word, i.e. akin in blood and religion but cut off from Israel's community and living in heresy, cf. Jn 4:9 +; Mt 10:5-6 +.

e. The Samaritans, too, expected the Messiah, cf. Jn 4:25.

f. Or, less probably, 'that is called Megalleh' (Aramaic for 'Revealing'). Evidently it was thought that Simon's supernatural power issued from some indwelling force of the high God.

When Simon saw that the Spirit was given through the imposition of hands 18 by the apostles, he offered them some money. •‘Give me the same power’ he said 19
‘so that anyone I lay my hands on will receive the Holy Spirit.’ •Peter answered, 20 13:10 •‘May your silver be lost forever, and you with it, for thinking that money could Jn 4:10 buy what God has given for nothing!’^g •You have no share, no rights, in this: 21
Mt 10:8 God can see how your heart is warped. •Repent of this wickedness of yours, and 22 pray to the Lord; you may still be forgiven for thinking as you did; •it is plain 23
Dt 29:17 to me that you are trapped in the bitterness of gall and the chains of sin.’^h
Pr 5:22 •‘Pray to the Lord for me yourselves’ Simon replied ‘so that none of the things 24
Jr 4:18 you have spoken about may happen to me.’ⁱ
Heb 12:16

1:8 + Having given their testimony and proclaimed the word of the Lord, they went 25 back to Jerusalem, preaching the Good News to a number of Samaritan villages.

Philip baptises a eunuch

Mt 1:20+ The angel of the Lord^j spoke to Philip saying, ‘Be ready to set out at noon^k 26 along the road that goes from Jerusalem down to Gaza, the desert road’. •So he 27 1 K 8:41f set off on his journey. Now it happened that an Ethiopian^l had been on pilgrimage Ps 68:31 to Jerusalem; he was a eunuch and an officer at the court of the kandake, or Is 56:3-7 queen, of Ethiopia, and was in fact her chief treasurer. •He was now on his way 28 home; and as he sat in his chariot he was reading the prophet Isaiah. •The 29 1:8+ Spirit said to Philip, ‘Go up and meet that chariot’. •When Philip ran up, he 30 heard him reading Isaiah the prophet and asked, ‘Do you understand what you Rm 10:14 are reading?’ •‘How can I’ he replied ‘unless I have someone to guide me?’ So 31 he invited Philip to get in and sit by his side. •Now the passage of scripture he 32 was reading was this:^m

Is 53:7-8 Like a sheep that is led to the slaughter-house, Lk 18:31+ like a lamb that is dumb in front of its shearers, like these he never opens his mouth.
He has been humiliated and has no one to defend him. 33
Who will ever talk about his descendants, since his life on earth has been cut short !

The eunuch turned to Philip and said, ‘Tell me, is the prophet referring to 34
Lk 24:27 himself or someone else?’ •Starting, therefore, with this text of scripture Philip 35 proceeded to explain the Good News of Jesus to him.

Further along the road they came to some water, and the eunuch said, ‘Look, 36
10:47; 16:33 there is some water here; is there anything to stop me being baptised?’ⁿ •He 38
1:5+ ordered the chariot to stop, then Philip and the eunuch both went down into the water and Philip baptised him. •But after they had come up out of the water 39 1 K 18:12+ again Philip was taken away by the Spirit of the Lord,^o and the eunuch never Lk 24:31-32 saw him again but went on his way rejoicing. •Philip found that he had reached 40
2:46+ Azotus and continued his journey proclaiming the Good News in every town as far 21:8 as Caesarea.

The conversion of Saul^a

9 Meanwhile Saul was still breathing threats to slaughter the Lord’s disciples. 1
Ga 1:12-17 He had gone to the high priest •and asked for letters addressed to the 2 9:21; 19:9, 23; 22:4, synagogues in Damascus, that would authorise him to arrest and take to Jerusalem
24:14, 22 any followers of the Way,^b men or women, that he could find.^c
2 P 2:2

Suddenly, while he was travelling to Damascus and just before he reached 3 the city, there came a light from heaven all round him. •He fell to the ground, 4 and then he heard a voice saying, ‘Saul, Saul,^d why are you persecuting me?’
Mt 25:40 •‘Who are you, Lord?’ he asked, and the voice answered, ‘I am Jesus, and you 5
I Co 8:12 are persecuting me.’ •Get up now and go into the city, and you will be told what 6 you have to do.’^e The men travelling with Saul stood there speechless, for 7
Dn 10:7 though they heard the voice they could see no one. •Saul got up from the ground, 8

but even with his eyes wide open he could see nothing at all, and they had to lead him into Damascus by the hand. •For three days he was without his sight, and took neither food nor drink.

- 10 A disciple called Ananias who lived in Damascus had a vision in which he 11 heard the Lord say to him, 'Ananias!' When he replied, 'Here I am, Lord', •the Lord said, 'You must go to Straight Street and ask at the house of Judas for someone called Saul, who comes from Tarsus. At this moment he is praying, 12 having had a vision^f of a man called Ananias coming in and laying hands on him to give him back his sight.'
13 When he heard that, Ananias said, 'Lord, several people have told me about 14 this man and all the harm he has been doing to your saints^g in Jerusalem. •He has only come here because he holds a warrant from the chief priests to arrest 15 everybody who invokes your name.' •The Lord replied, 'You must go all the same, because this man is my chosen instrument to bring my name before pagans 16 and pagan kings and before the people of Israel;^h •I myself will show him how 17 much he himself must suffer for my name'. •Then Ananias went. He entered the house, and at once laid his hands on Saul and said, 'Brother Saul, I have been sent by the Lord Jesus who appeared to you on your way here so that you may 18 recover your sight and be filled with the Holy Spirit'.ⁱ •Immediately it was as though scales fell away from Saul's eyes and he could see again. So he was 19 baptised there and then, •and after taking some food he regained his strength.

Saul's preaching at Damascus

- 20 After he had spent only a few days with the disciples in Damascus, •he began 21 preaching in the synagogues, 'Jesus is the Son of God'.^j •All his hearers were amazed. 'Surely' they said 'this is the man who organised the attack in Jerusalem

g. The Holy Spirit is supremely the Gift of God, cf. 2:38; 10:45; 11:17; Lk 11:9,13; the idea recurs in the Veni Creator.

h. 'Simony' (trafficking in sacred things) gets its name from this incident.

i. Western Text adds 'and he wept bitterly without ceasing'.

j. Referred to as 'the Spirit' in vv. 29 and 39.

k. Or 'towards the south'.

l. 'Ethiopia' began beyond the first cataract of the Nile; Nubia or the Sudan. It was ruled by queens bearing the generic name 'kandake'.

m. Quoted from the LXX, here somewhat obscure and deriving from a Hebr. text itself obscure and probably corrupt. On the use of Is 53 in early Christian preaching, see 3:13+.

n. V. 37 is a very ancient gloss preserved in the Western Text and suggested by the baptismal liturgy "And Philip said, 'If you believe with all your heart, you may'. And he replied, 'I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God'."

o. Var. West. 'the Holy Spirit came down on the eunuch and the angel of the Lord carried Philip away'.

9 a. Crucial event in the Church's history. Luke gives three accounts whose discrepancies of detail are explained by their differing literary forms: the second and third accounts are found in Paul's discourses. See also Ga 1:12-17. The incident took place probably in 36 A.D., about 12 years (14 if we reckon as the ancients did) before the council of Jerusalem', Ga 2:1f; cf. Ac 15, held in 49.

b. The 'Way' is the way of life characteristic of the Christian community; the term is used, by extension, for the community itself. When men follow this 'Way' God is served as he wishes to be served, Mt 22:16p, cf. 7:13-14; 21:32; 1 Co 12:31; 2 P 2:2; Ps 119:1f; Pr 4:10f; Jr 12:16, etc. This unqualified use of the word is peculiar to Ac, 18:25,26; 19:9,23; 22:4; 24:14,22.

c. The Roman authority recognised the high priest's jurisdiction over the members of Jewish communities even outside Palestine; according to 1 M 15:21 this even included right of extradition.

d. Aramaic ('Hebrew', 26:14) form of Saul's name.

e. Whatever is done to the disciples for the sake of the name of Jesus is done to Jesus himself, Mt 10:40+.

f. Lit. 'having seen'; var. 'having seen in a vision'.

g. Since God is the Holy One par excellence, Is 6:3, those consecrated to his service are called 'holy', Lv 17:1+. The term, applied originally to the people of Israel, Ex 19:6+, and in particular to the community of the messianic era, Dn 7:18+, is especially apt for the Christians who are the new 'holy race', 1 P 2:5,9, called, Rm 1:7; 1 Co 1:2; Ep 1:4; 2 Tm 1:9, by their baptismal consecration, Ep 5:26f, to a blameless life, 1 Co 7:34; Ep 1:4; 5:3; Col 1:22, which makes them holy as God is holy, 1 P 1:15f, cf. 1 Jn 3:3, and like Jesus himself, 'the Holy One of God', Mk 1:24+. In the early community it becomes the usual term for the Christians, in Palestine first, Ac 9:13,32,41; Rm 15:26,31; 1 Co 16:1,15; 2 Co 8:4; 9:1,12, and then in all the churches, Rm 8:27; 12:13; 16:2,15; 1 Co 6:1f; 14:33; 2 Co 13:12; Ep 1:15; 3:18; 4:12; 6:18; Ph 4:21f; Col 1:4; 1 Tm 5:10; Phm 5,7; Heb 6:10; 13:24; Jude 3 (and in the introductory formulae of the letters 2 Co 1:1, etc.). In Rv 5:8; 8:3 etc. the word is used more specifically of the Christians who witness by their death. At times its application may be restricted to the leaders, the 'apostles and prophets', Ep 3:5 and Col 1:26; Ep 3:8; 4:12; Rv 18:20. Lastly, as in the O.T., Jb 5:1+, it may indicate the angels, Mk 8:38; Lk 9:26; Ac 10:22; Jude 14; Rv 14:10, and in some cases it is doubtful whether the reference is to angels or to the saints in glory, Ep 1:18; Col 1:12; 1 Th 3:13; 2 Th 1:10.

h. Cf. Jr 1:10. Paul's mission is 'to all men', Ac 22:15, to the pagan nations, 26:17; this agrees with what Paul himself writes in Ga 1:16, cf. Rm 1:5; 11:13; 15:16-18; Ga 2:2,8,9; Ep 3:8; Col 1:27; 1 Tm 2:7. On the 'kings', cf. Ac 26:2+.

i. Characteristic Lucan phrase, Lk 1:15,41,67; Ac 2:4; 4:8,31; 9:17; 13:9. Cf. Lk 4:1+.

j. 'Son of God' corresponds to 'Christ' in v. 22. Cf. Mt 4:3+. We meet the title 'Son of God' only once more in Ac, 13:33. It is characteristic of Pauline Christology, Ga 1:16; 2:20; 4:4,6; Rm 1:3-4,9; 1 Th 1:10; cf. Rm 9:5+.

against the people who invoke this name, and who came here for the sole 9:2 purpose of arresting them to have them tried by the chief priests?' •Saul's power 22 complete confusion by the way he demonstrated that Jesus was the Christ.

Ga 1:18-19 Saul's visit to Jerusalem^m

When he got to Jerusalem he tried to join the disciples, but they were all ²⁶
 4:36-37 afraid of him: they could not believe he was really a disciple. •Barnabas, ²⁷ however, took charge of him, introduced him to the apostles, and explained how the Lord had appeared to Saul and spoken to him on his journey, and how he had preached boldly at Damascus in the name of Jesus. •Saul now started to go ²⁸ 13:46+ round with them in Jerusalem, preaching fearlessly in the name of the Lord.
 5:41+ But after he had spoken to the Hellenists,ⁿ and argued with them, they became ²⁹
 ==22:17-21 determined to kill him. •When the brothers knew, they took him to Caesarea, ³⁰

A lull

Peter visited one place after another and eventually came to the saints living ³²

Peter raises a woman to life at Jaffa

At Jaffa there was a woman disciple called Tabitha, or Dorcas in Greek,^s ³⁶
 13:9+ who never tired of doing good or giving in charity. •But the time came when she ³⁷
 Lk 12:33+ got ill and died, and they washed her and laid her out in a room upstairs. •Lydda ³⁸
 1 K 17:19 is not far from Jaffa, so when the disciples heard that Peter was there, they sent two men with an urgent message for him, 'Come and visit us as soon as possible'.

Peter went back with them straightaway, and on his arrival they took him ³⁹ to the upstairs room, where all the widows stood round him in tears, showing him tunics and other clothes Dorcas had made when she was with them. •Peter ⁴⁰ sent them all out of the room and knelt down and prayed. Then he turned to the dead woman and said, 'Tabitha, stand up'. She opened her eyes, looked at Peter and sat up. •Peter helped her to her feet, then he called in the saints and ⁴¹

10 One of the centurions of the Italica cohort stationed in Caesarea was ¹ called Cornelius. •He and the whole of his household were devout and ² to God.

One day at about the ninth hour he had a vision in which he distinctly saw ³

7 with Simon the tanner whose house is by the sea.' •When the angel who said this had gone, Cornelius called two of the slaves and a devout soldier of his staff, 8 told them what had happened, and sent them off to Jaffa.

9 Next day, while they were still on their journey and had only a short distance 16:9
to go before reaching Jaffa, Peter went to the housetop at about the sixth hour
10 to pray. •He felt hungry and was looking forward to his meal, but before it was 11:5-17 11 ready he fell into a trance •and saw heaven thrown open and something like a big 12 sheet being let down to earth by its four corners;^d •it contained every possible
13 sort of animal and bird, walking, crawling or flying ones. •A voice then said
14 to him, 'Now, Peter; kill and eat!' •But Peter answered, 'Certainly not, Lord;
15 I have never yet eaten anything profane or unclean'. •Again, a second time, the Lv 11 voice spoke to him, 'What God has made clean, you have no right to call Ezk 4:14 16 profane'.^e •This was repeated three times, and then suddenly the container was Gn 1:31 drawn up to heaven again.

17 Peter was still worrying over the meaning of the vision he had seen, when the men sent by Cornelius arrived. They had asked where Simon's house was and 18 they were now standing at the door, •calling out to know if the Simon known as 19 Peter was lodging there. •Peter's mind was still on the vision and the Spirit^f had 1:8 +
20 to tell him, 'Some men^g have come to see you. •Hurry down, and do not hesitate
21 about going back with them; it was I who told them to come.' •Peter went down 22 and said to them, 'I am the man you are looking for; why have you come?' •They said, 'The centurion Cornelius, who is an upright and God-fearing man, highly Lk 7:4-5 regarded by the entire Jewish people, was directed by a holy angel to send for you 23 and bring you to his house and to listen to what you have to say'. •So Peter asked them in and gave them lodging.

Next day, he was ready to go off with them, accompanied by some of the 24 brothers from Jaffa. •They reached Caesarea the following day, and Cornelius was waiting for them. He had asked his relations and close friends to be there, 25 and as Peter reached the house Cornelius went out to meet him, knelt at his feet
26 and prostrated himself. •But Peter helped him up. 'Stand up,' he said 'I am only 3:12; 14
27 a man after all!' •Talking together they went in to meet all the people assembled Rv 19:1 28 there, •and Peter said to them, 'You know it is forbidden for Jews to mix with people of another race and visit them, but God has made it clear to me that 11:3; 1

k. Three years, according to Ga 1:17-18; Paul's stay in Arabia belongs to this period. Luke's statement is not detailed.

l. Var. 'his disciples'.

m. Paul mentions this visit, Ga 1:18-19. He observes that at that time the churches in Judaea did not yet know him by sight, but says nothing of the part Barnabas played. He states that, of the apostles, he saw none but Peter, and James the brother of the Lord; Ac, generalising, speaks vaguely of 'the apostles'.

n. Var. 'the Greeks' (i.e. the pagans); same variant in 11:20. The hellenistic Christians (cf. 6:1+) are the most active proselytisers, just as the hellenistic Jews were the most active opponents of Christian propaganda, 6:9f; 7:58; 9:1; 21:27; 24:19.

10 a. For Luke, Cornelius' conversion has a wide application. Its significance for the Church at large appears from the narrative itself and from its emphasis on the visions of Peter and of Cornelius, but especially from the way the author deliberately links this incident to the decision of the 'Council of Jerusalem', cf. 15: 7-11, 14. There seem to be two separate lessons here. First, God himself has made it clear that the pagans are to be received into the Church without being forced to obey the Law, cf. 10:34-35, 44-48a; 11:1, 15-18; 15:7-11, 14; and Ga 2:1-10. Secondly, God himself has shown Peter that he must accept the hospitality of the uncircumcised. The problem of social relations between Christians converted from Judaism and Christians converted from paganism underlies the narrative, cf. 10:10-16, 28-29; 11:2-14; and Ga 2:11-21.

b. The expressions 'fearing God', -10:2, 22, 35; 13:16, 26, and 'worshipping God', -13:43, 50; 16:14; 17:4, 17; 18:7, are technical terms for admirers and followers of the Jewish religion who stop short of circumcision, cf. 2:11+.

c. Lit. 'has ascended as a memorial before God'. The expression recalls the 'memorial' sacrifice, cf. Lv 2: 2, 9, 16, to which Tb 12:12 compares prayer.

d. Following Western Text.

e. Peter is to throw off his scruples of legal purity, 11:9. Cf. Mt 15:1-20p; Rm 14:14, 17. The immediate practical conclusion is that Peter must not fear contact with the uncircumcised, Ac 10:27-28.

f. The intervention of the Spirit is like that of the angel of the Lord, cf. 8:26, 29.

g. Var. 'Three men', cf. 11:11.

to coming when I was sent for; but I should like to know exactly why you sent for me.' •Cornelius replied, 'Three days ago I was praying^h in my house at the ninth hour, when I suddenly saw a man in front of me in shining robes. He said, "Cornelius, your prayer has been heard and your alms have been accepted as a sacrifice in the sight of God; •so now you must send to Jaffa and fetch Simon known as Peter who is lodging in the house of Simon the tanner, by the sea". •So I sent for you at once, and you have been kind enough to come. Here we all are, assembled in front of you to hear what message God has given you for us.'

Peter's address in the house of Cornelius

Then Peter addressed them: 'The truth I have now come to realise' he said 'is that God does not have favourites, •but that anybody of any nationality who fears God and does what is right is acceptable to him.'

'It is true, God sent his wordⁱ to the people of Israel, and it was to them that the good news of peace was brought by Jesus Christ—but Jesus Christ is Lord of all men. •You must have heard about the recent happenings in Judaea;^k about Jesus of Nazareth and how he began in Galilee, after John had been preaching baptism.^l •God had anointed him with the Holy Spirit and with power, and because God was with him, Jesus went about doing good and curing all who had fallen into the power of the devil. •Now I, and those with me, can witness to everything he did throughout the countryside of Judaea and in Jerusalem itself: and also to the fact that they killed him by hanging him on a tree, •yet three days afterwards God raised him to life^m and allowed him to be seen, •not by the whole people but only by certain witnesses God had chosen beforehand. Now we are those witnesses—we have eaten and drunk with himⁿ after his resurrection from the dead—and he has ordered us to proclaim this to his people^o and to tell them that God has appointed him to judge everyone, alive or dead.^p •It is to him that all the prophets bear this witness: that all who believe in Jesus will have their sins forgiven through his name.'

15:8 Baptism of the first pagans

While Peter was still speaking the Holy Spirit came down^q on all the listeners. Jewish believers who had accompanied Peter were all astonished that the gift of the Holy Spirit should be poured out on the pagans too, •since they could hear them speaking strange languages and proclaiming the greatness of God. Peter himself then said, •'Could anyone refuse the water of baptism to these people, now they have received the Holy Spirit just as much as we have?' •He then gave orders^r for them to be baptised in the name of Jesus Christ. Afterwards they begged him to stay on for some days.^s

Jerusalem: Peter justifies his conduct

11 The apostles and the brothers in Judaea heard that the pagans too had accepted the word of God, •and when Peter came up to Jerusalem the Jews criticised him^a •and said, 'So you have been visiting the uncircumcised and eating with them, have you?' •Peter in reply gave them the details point by point: •'One day, when I was in the town of Jaffa,' he began 'I fell into a trance as I was praying and had a vision of something like a big sheet being let down from heaven by its four corners. This sheet reached the ground quite close to me. I watched it intently and saw all sorts of animals and wild beasts—everything possible that could walk, crawl or fly. •Then I heard a voice that said to me, "Now, Peter; kill and eat!" •But I answered: Certainly not, Lord; nothing profane or unclean has ever crossed my lips. •And a second time the voice spoke from heaven, "What God has made clean, you have no right to call profane". •This was repeated three times, before the whole of it was drawn up to heaven again.

'Just at that moment, three men stopped outside the house where we were

- 12 staying; they had been sent from Caesarea to fetch me, •and the Spirit told me 1:8+ to have no hesitation about going back with them. The six brothers here came 13 with me as well, and we entered the man's house. •He told us he had seen an angel standing in his house who said, "Send to Jaffa and fetch Simon known as Peter; 14 he has a message for you that will save you and your entire household". 2:47+;
16:15+
15 'I had scarcely begun to speak when the Holy Spirit came down on them 10:44+ 16 in the same way as it came on us at the beginning, •and I remembered that the Lord had said, "John baptised with water, but you will be baptised with the Holy 17 Spirit". •I realised then that God^b was giving them the identical thing he gave to us 1:5
when we believed in the Lord Jesus Christ; and who was I to stand in God's way?"^c 15:8-9 18 This account satisfied them, and they gave glory to God. 'God' they said 'can 10:47; 15:9

Foundation of the church of Antioch

19 Stephen travelled as far as Phoenicia and Cyprus and Antioch,^e but they usually 21:3

proclaiming the Good News of the Lord Jesus^g to them as well. •The Lord helped

i. The language of sacrifice (cf. v. 4). The unblemished victim and its offerer are both 'acceptable' to God, Lv 1:3; 19:5; 22:19-27. Isaiah (56:7) had prophesied that when the fullness of time came, the pagans' sacrifices would be 'acceptable' to God; see Mt 1:10-11. Cf. Rm 15:16; Ph 4:18; 1 P 2:5.

j. Var. 'The word that God has sent'.

k. Vv. 37-42 sum up the gospel story, cf. 1:21-22; 2:22+, emphasising the same points as Luke brought out in his own gospel.

l. Lit. 'Jesus from Nazareth, how he began (var. 'how it [all] began') in Galilee after the baptism proclaimed by John'.

m. Lit. 'raised him on the third day': stereotyped formula of the Christian preaching and faith. It appears as early as 1 Co 15:4 (a first stage of the creed) with the addition 'according to the scriptures'. The formula echoes Jon 2:1 (cf. Mt 12:40); see also Ho 6:2. It recurs in Mt 16:21; 17:23; 20:19; 27:64; Lk 9:22; 18:33; 24:7,46.

n. Add. (West.) 'and were his companions for forty days after his resurrection from the dead'.

o. I.e. the Chosen People, Israel. 10:2; 21:28.

p. Those still alive at the glorious coming and those who have died before the coming but then rise for judgement. See 1 Th 4:13-5:10. By raising up Jesus, God has solemnly invested him as supreme Judge, Ac 17:31; Jn 5:22,27; 2 Tm 4:1; 1 P 4:5; to proclaim the resurrection is therefore to invite men to repentance, cf. Ac 17:30-31.

q. 'The Pentecost of the pagans'. As Peter notes, v. 47; 11:15; 15:8, it resembles the first Pentecost.

r. It was not usual for the apostles to administer baptism themselves, cf. 19:5; 1 Co 1:14,17. See also 1 Jn 4:2.

s. That Peter should lodge with the uncircumcised seems to the Jerusalem 'Hebrews' even more shocking and contrary to the Law than that he should authorise their baptism (11:2-3; cf. 10:28). This same question gave rise to the Antioch incident, Ga 2:11f.

11 a. Western Text 'So after some time Peter determined to set out for Jerusalem. After speaking to the brothers and encouraging them, he set out, delivering many sermons throughout the countryside and instructing the people. When he reached them and told them of the favour God had granted, the circumcised brothers remonstrated with him.'

b. 'God' omitted by Western Text (because it is Christ who gives the Spirit).

c. Peter explains why he allowed a pagan to be baptised; he does not answer the objection that he had lodged with the uncircumcised, cf. v. 3, see 10:1+. According to Luke, Peter was considered to have been the first to receive pagans into the Church, in spite of the episode of the Ethiopian eunuch, 8:26-39, and the date of the evangelisation of Antioch to which Luke does not refer till later, vv. 19f. Against this background the council of Jerusalem, 15:5-29, appears as a kind of sequel to, or repetition of, the discussion in 11:1-18.

d. V. 19 takes up from 8:1 and 8:4 and then presents the episode of the Antiochene church's foundation as an immediate sequel to Stephen's martyrdom from which it has been separated by the insertion of the Acts of Philip, 8:5-40, and of Peter, 9:31-11:18. Nevertheless, the narrative presupposes the story of Saul's vocation, 9:1-30, itself concerned with Stephen's martyrdom.

f. Var. 'Hellenists', cf. 9:29. 'Greeks', as opposed to 'Jews', v. 19, includes all the uncircumcised.

g. Not 'Christ', a title more suited to a Jewish audience with its messianic expectation; in preaching to pagans Jesus was called 'Lord', cf. 25:26+. He is 'Lord' because, in virtue of his elevation to the Father's right hand, he rules over the kingdom in this fullness of time, cf. 2:21,36; 7:59-60; 10:36; 1 Th 4:15-17; 2 Th 1:7-12; Rm 10:9-13.

h. Which enjoyed right of supervision over the other churches, cf. 8:14; 11:1, and see Ga 2:2+.

brought him to Antioch. As things turned out they were to live together in that church^k a whole year, instructing a large number of people. It was at Antioch that the disciples were first called 'Christians'.^l

Barnabas and Saul sent as deputies to Jerusalem

While they were there some prophets^m came down to Antioch from Jerusalem,ⁿ 27 and one of them whose name was Agabus, seized by the Spirit, stood up and 28 predicted that a famine would spread over the whole empire. This in fact happened before the reign of Claudius came to an end.^o •The disciples decided to send 29 relief, each to contribute what he could afford, to the brothers living in Judaea. They did this and delivered their contributions to the elders^p in the care of 30 Barnabas and Saul.

Peter's arrest and miraculous deliverance^a

It was about this time that King Herod started persecuting certain members 1 of the Church. •He beheaded James the brother of John, •and when he 2 saw that this pleased the Jews he decided to arrest Peter as well. •This was during 4 the days of Unleavened Bread, and he put Peter in prison, assigning four squads of four soldiers each to guard him in turns. Herod meant to try Peter in public after the end of Passover week. •All the time Peter was under guard the Church 5 prayed to God for him unremittingly.

On the night before Herod was to try him, Peter was sleeping between two 6 soldiers, fastened with double chains,^b while guards kept watch at the main entrance to the prison. •Then suddenly the angel of the Lord stood there, and 7 the cell was filled with light. He tapped Peter on the side and woke him. 'Get up!' he said 'Hurry!'—and the chains fell from his hands. •The angel then said, 'Put 8 on your belt and sandals'. After he had done this, the angel next said, 'Wrap your cloak round you and follow me'. •Peter followed him, but had no idea that 9 what the angel did was all happening in reality; he thought he was seeing a vision. They passed through two guard posts one after the other, and reached the iron 10 gate leading to the city. This opened of its own accord; they went through it^c and had walked the whole length of one street when suddenly the angel left him. It was only then that Peter came to himself. 'Now I know it is all true' he said. 11 'The Lord really did send his angel and has saved me from Herod and from all that the Jewish people were so certain would happen to me.'

As soon as he realised this he went straight to the house of Mary the mother 12 of John Mark,^d where a number of people had assembled and were praying. •He 13 knocked at the outside door and a servant called Rhoda came to answer it. •She 14 recognised Peter's voice and was so overcome with joy that, instead of opening the door, she ran inside with the news that Peter was standing at the main entrance. They said to her, 'You are out of your mind', but she insisted that it was true. 15 Then they said, 'It must be his angel!'^e •Peter, meanwhile, was still knocking, 16 so they opened the door and were amazed to see that it really was Peter himself. With a gesture of his hand he stopped them talking, and described to them how 17 the Lord had led him out of prison. He added, 'Tell James^f and the brothers'. Then he left and went to another place.

When daylight came there was a great commotion among the soldiers, who 18 could not imagine what had become of Peter. •Herod put out an unsuccessful 19 search for him; he had the guards questioned, and before leaving Judaea to take up residence in Caesarea he gave orders for their execution.^g

The death of the persecutor

Now Herod was on bad terms with the Tyrians and Sidonians. However, they 20 sent a joint deputation which managed to enlist the support of Blastus, the king's chamberlain, and through him negotiated a treaty, since their country depended for its food supply on King Herod's territory. •A day was fixed, and Herod, 21 wearing his robes of state and enthroned on a dais, made a speech to them.

 22 The people acclaimed him with, 'It is a god speaking, not a man!', and at 23 that moment the angel of the Lord struck him down, because he had not given the glory to God. He was eaten away with worms and died.^a Mt 1:20+

III. THE MISSION OF BARNABAS AND PAUL THE COUNCIL OF JERUSALEM

The mission sent out

1 13 In the church at Antioch the following were prophets and teachers:^a Bar- 11:27+ nabas, Simeon called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, Manaen, who had 4:36+

k. Meaning doubtful. Possibly 'they worked together', 'they were received (by the church)', i.e. were guests of the church.

l. I.e. supporters or followers of Christ (or Christus). The nickname shows that the pagans of Antioch took the title 'Christ' (anointed) for a proper name.

m. Like the O.T. prophets, Dt 18:18+; 2 P 1:21; Mt 5:12, those of the N.T. are charismatics, 1 Co 12:1+, who speak in God's name, being inspired by his Spirit. Under the New Covenant this charisma is bestowed even more generously, Ac 2:17-18, and at times it is enjoyed by the faithful at large, Ac 19:6; 1 Co 11:4-5; 14:26,29-33,37. But particular individuals are so specially endowed with the charisma that they are always referred to as 'prophets', Ac 11:27; 13:1; 15:32; 21:9,10. These normally occupy the second place after the apostles in the order of charisma, 1 Co 12:28-29; Ep 4:11; but cf. 1 Co 12:10; Rm 12:6; Lk 11:49; this is because they are the appointed witnesses of the Spirit, Rv 2:7, etc., 1 Th 5:19-20, whose 'revelations' they communicate, 1 Co 14:6,26,30; Ep 3:5; Rv 1:1, just as the apostles are witnesses to the risen Christ, Rm 1:1+; Ac 1:8+, and proclaim the kerygma, Ac 2:22+. They do not simply foretell the future, Ac 11:28; 21:11, or read hearts, 1 Co 14:24-25; cf. 1 Tm 1:18. When they 'edify, exhort, console', 1 Co 14:3; cf. Ac 4:36; 11:23-24, they do so by a supernatural revelation; in this they resemble those who 'speak strange languages', Ac 2:4+; 19:6, but their gift is greater because their speech is intelligible, 1 Co 14. Their chief work was evidently to explain the oracles of scripture under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, especially those of the O.T. prophets, 1 P 1:10-12, and thus expound the 'mystery' of the divine plan, 1 Co 13:2; Ep 3:5; Rm 16:25+. For this reason they are named with the apostles as the foundation of the Church, Ep 2:20+. The Revelation of St John is a typical example of this N.T. 'prophecy', Rv 1:3; 10:11; 19:10; 22:7-10,18-19. For all its dignity, the prophetic charisma communicates knowledge that is imperfect and provisional, being bound up with faith, Rm 12:6, which is itself destined to vanish in face of the beatific vision, 1 Co 13:8-12.

n. Western Text adds 'and there was great rejoicing. While we were together, one of them ...' If this reading is correct, this is the first of the 'We-sections', cf. 16:10.

o. In the reign of Claudius (41-54) famine swept through the empire (49-50), through Greece first, and later Rome. Josephus puts it in the time of Tiberius Alexander the procurator (46-48).

p. The apostles are not mentioned, unlike 15:2, etc.; they had perhaps left Jerusalem. According to Ac 9:26; 11:29f; 15:2, it would seem that Paul made three journeys to Jerusalem before his two visits to Galatia, 16:6; 18:23. Paul himself, however, in Ga 1:18; 2:1f; cf. 4:13, mentions only two. The impression produced by Ac arises perhaps from Luke's method of combining his sources. It may be that the journey of 11:29 is the same as that of 15:2. The 'help' which is the purpose of the journey is probably to be distinguished from that which Paul supplied later, Ac 24:17, when the great collection, made at the appeal of the Jerusalem church, was completed, Ga 2:10; cf. 1 Co 16:1+; 2 Co 8:4; 9:1,12,13; Rm 15:31.

12 a. This episode, which 11:30 and 12:25 seem to place at the same time as the visit of Barnabas and Saul to Jerusalem, must in fact have preceded it, for Herod Agrippa I (called 'king' to distinguish him from his uncle Herod Antipas, the tetrarch of the Passion story, and awarded the royal title by Caligula in 37) was not actually king of Judea and Samaria until 41; he died in 44. The events here described took place, therefore, between 41 and 44. The narrative has been rather clumsily fitted into its present literary context.

b. Each one to a soldier on either side.

c. Add, 'went down the seven steps'.

d. John Mark is mentioned again in 12:25; 13:5,13; 15:37,39; he was cousin to Barnabas, Col 4:10. During Paul's first Rome captivity Mark was with him, Col 4:10; Phm 24, and shortly before he died Paul asked for Mark's assistance, 2 Tm 4:11. Mark was also a disciple of Peter, 1 P 5:13, and tradition names him as author of the second gospel.

e. It was popularly believed that guardian angels were a kind of spiritual 'double' of their charges.

f. 'James' without qualification means the 'brother of the Lord'. At the time of Paul's first visit to Jerusalem, Ga 1:19 (i.e. in 38-39, cf. Ac 9:1+) and afterwards, James was leader of the 'Hebrew' section of the Jerusalem Christians. After Peter's departure he was in charge of the mother church. See Ac 15:13; 21:18; 1 Co 15:7. The Letter of James appears under his name.

g. Soldiers were liable to the punishment intended for their escaped prisoners, cf. 16:27; 27:42.

h. Var. 'When he had come down from the tribune he became food for worms even while he still lived; and so he died'.

i. Var. 'to Jerusalem', but cf. 11:29.

13 a. On the 'prophets', see 11:27+. The charisma of the teacher, or didaskalos, was his ability to instruct others on matters of morality and doctrine, instruction usually based on the scriptures. Cf. 1 Co 12-14+. The five prophets and teachers here named represent the governing body of the church of Antioch; cf. the list of the Twelve, Ac 1:13, and of the Seven, 6:5. Like the latter, the Antiochene Five are, it seems, hellenistic Jews.

been brought up with Herod the tetrarch, and Saul. One day while they were offering worship to the Lord and keeping a fast, the Holy Spirit said, 'I want Barnabas and Saul set apart for the work to which I have called them'. So it was that after fasting and prayer they laid their hands on them and sent them off.

Cyprus: the magician Elymas

So these two, sent on their mission by the Holy Spirit, went down to Seleucia and from there sailed to Cyprus. They landed at Salamis and proclaimed the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews. John acted as their assistant.

They travelled the whole length of the island, and at Paphos they came in contact with a Jewish magician called Bar-jesus. This false prophet was one of the attendants of the proconsul Sergius Paulus who was an extremely intelligent man. The proconsul summoned Barnabas and Saul and asked to hear the word of God, but Elymas Magos—as he was called in Greek—tried to stop them so as to prevent the proconsul's conversion to the faith. Then Saul, whose other name is Paul, looked him full in the face and said, 'You utter fraud, you impostor, you son of the devil, you enemy of all true religion, why don't you stop twisting the straightforward ways of the Lord? Now watch how the hand of the Lord will strike you: you will be blind, and for a time you will not see the sun.' That instant, everything went misty and dark for him, and he groped about to find someone to lead him by the hand. The proconsul, who had watched everything, became a believer, being astonished by what he had learnt about the Lord.

They arrive at Antioch in Pisidia

Paul and his friends went by sea from Paphos to Perga in Pamphylia where John left them to go back to Jerusalem. The others carried on from Perga till they reached Antioch in Pisidia. Here they went to synagogue on the sabbath and took their seats. After the lessons from the Law and the Prophets had been read, the presidents of the synagogue sent them a message: 'Brothers, if you would like to address some words of encouragement to the congregation, please do so'. Paul stood up, held up a hand for silence and began to speak:

Paul's preaching before the Jews¹

'Men of Israel, and fearers of God,' listen! The God of our nation Israel chose our ancestors, and made our people great when they were living as foreigners in Egypt; then by divine power he led them out, and for about forty years took care of them in the wilderness. When he had destroyed seven nations in Canaan, he put them in possession of their land for about four hundred and fifty years. After this he gave them judges, down to the prophet Samuel. Then they demanded a king, and God gave them Saul son of Kish, a man of the tribe of Benjamin. After forty years, he deposed him and made David their king, of whom he approved in these words, "I have selected David son of Jesse, a man after my own heart, who will carry out my whole purpose". To keep his promise, God has raised up for Israel one of David's descendants, Jesus, as Saviour, whose coming was heralded by John when he proclaimed a baptism of repentance for the whole people of Israel. Before John ended his career he said, "I am not the one you imagine me to be; that one is coming after me and I am not fit to undo his sandal".

'My brothers, sons of Abraham's race, and all you who fear God, this message of salvation is meant for you. What the people of Jerusalem and their rulers did, though they did not realise it, was in fact to fulfil the prophecies read on every sabbath. Though they found nothing to justify his death, they condemned him and asked Pilate to have him executed. When they had carried out everything that scripture foretells about him they took him down from the tree and buried him in a tomb. But God raised him from the dead, and for many days he

- appeared to those who had accompanied him from Galilee to Jerusalem: and it is these same companions of his who are now his witnesses before our people.
- 32 'We have come here to tell you the Good News. It was to our ancestors that
- 33 God made the promise but •it is to us, their children,^u that he has fulfilled it, by raising Jesus from the dead. As scripture says in the first psalm:^v You are my
- 34 son: today I have become your father.^w •The fact that God raised him from the dead, never to return to corruption, is no more than what he had declared: To
- 35 you I shall give the sure and holy things promised to David.^x •This is explained by
- 36 another text: You will not allow your holy one to experience corruption. •Now when David in his own time had served God's purposes he died; he was buried with
- 37 his ancestors and has certainly experienced corruption. •The one whom God has raised up, however, has not experienced corruption.
- 38 'My brothers, I want you to realise that it is through him that forgiveness of your sins is proclaimed. Through him justification from all sins which the Law
- 39 of Moses was unable to justify •is offered to every believer.
- 40 'So be careful—or what the prophets say will happen to you.

The significance of the rite is not, therefore, exactly the same as that of 6:6 by which the Seven receive their commission from the apostles. Cf. 1 Tm 4:14+.

d. Barnabas' native country, 4:36.

e. Paul's regular policy, 17:2, is to approach the Jews first, cf. 13:14; 14:1; 16:13; 17:10,17; 18:4,19; 19:8; 28:17,23, on the principle that the Jews have first claim, see 3:26; 13:46; Rm 1:16; 2:9-10; Mk 7:27; only after their refusal does Paul turn to the pagans, cf. Ac 13:46; 18:6; 28:28.

f. The Jews, and the eastern peoples in general, adopted names familiar in the Graeco-Roman world: John took 'Mark', 12:12; Joseph-Barsabbas took 'Justus', 1:23; Simeon 'Niger', 13:1; Tabitha 'Dorcas', 9:36, etc. Luke has given Paul his Roman name for the first time and does not use 'Saul' again. He also gives prominence now to Paul who is no longer a subordinate of Barnabas but the real missionary leader, v. 13.

g. I.e. a sermon based upon the scriptures, cf. Rm 15:4. The synagogue custom mentioned here was followed also when Christians met for worship: the sermons were preached by the 'prophets' or teachers, cf. 1 Co 14:3,31; 1 Tm 4:13; Heb 13:22; Ac 11:23; 14:22; 15:32; 16:40; 20:1,2.

h. The great inaugural discourse of Paul which Luke offers as typical of the apostle's preaching to the Jews. It falls into two parts: vv. 16-25 are a summary of the history of salvation (cf. Stephen's sermon, ch. 7) with an appendix recalling John the Baptist's testimony; vv. 26-39 claim that Jesus who died and has risen is the expected Messiah (thus closely resembling Peter's discourses, though this discourse ends with a suggestion of the Pauline doctrine of justification by faith). The conclusion, vv. 40-41, is a grave warning taken from the scriptures, cf. 28:26-27.

i. The two classes of listeners: Jews by birth and 'God-fearers', 10:2+.

j. Lit. 'the God of this people Israel'.

k. Var. 'upheld' (or: 'bore with').

l. Western (and Antiochene) Text 'For about four hundred and fifty years he gave them judges'. The text is obscure.

m. Paul's own name, and he too was of the tribe of Benjamin, Rm 11:1; Ph 3:5.

n. Or 'raised from the dead'. The Greek verb can mean either, and this ambivalence is exploited in the argument, as in 3:20-26: the 'promise' finds fulfilment in Christ's resurrection, vv. 32-33; see also 26:6-8; moreover, it is by his resurrection that Jesus is established as saviour, cf. 5:31; see also 2:21; 4:12; Rm 5:9-10; Ph 3:20, etc. Thus the verb which means 'raise up' in v. 22 unequivocally means 'raise from the dead' from v. 30 onwards. In v. 23 it is transitional and ambiguous.

o. Var. 'what'.

p. Var. 'for us'.

q. Following Western Text. Current text 'For those who live in Jerusalem and their leaders did not recognise him or (understand) the prophecies read on every sabbath: but they fulfilled the prophecies by condemning him'.

r. A recurring element of the Christian plea: the innocence and unjust condemnation of Jesus, cf. 3:13-14; Lk 23:16,22,47; Mt 27:3-10,19,23-24.

s. 'asked Pilate to have him executed', alternatively (the textual witnesses vary) 'that (he) should be executed'; or 'that (they might) execute him'. Var. 'handed him over to Pilate that he might be executed'.

t. Western Text '... foretells about him, after he had been crucified they asked Pilate for permission to take him down from the tree, and when they received it they took him down and buried him in a tomb'.

u. Var. 'for our children'.

v. 'first psalm' Western reading (following the ancient custom of reading Ps 1 and 2 as one); var. 'second psalm'.

w. By his resurrection Christ was enthroned as Messiah, and from then on his human nature enjoyed all the privileges of the Son of God. Cf. Rm 1:4+.

x. The quotation from Is introduces the reference to Ps 16 (the 'holy things promised to—lit. 'of'—David' are explained as the assurance to David in Ps 16 that 'the holy one of God' would not experience corruption).

y. The disbelief and rejection of the Jews (cf. Mt 21:33+; 22:1+) are a favourite theme of Luke, cf. Ac 13:5+; he uses it again as a conclusion to Ac, 28:26-27.

z. Var. 'When they left they felt it appropriate to'.

10:2+; 17:4 sabbath. •When the meeting broke up many Jews and devout converts^{aa} joined 43
Paul and Barnabas.^{bb} and in their talks with them Paul and Barnabas urged

Paul and Barnabas preach to the pagans

The next sabbath almost the whole town assembled to hear the word of God.^{dd} 44
5:17; 17:5 When they saw the crowds, the Jews, prompted by jealousy, used blasphemies 45
1 Th 2:14+ and contradicted everything Paul said. •Then Paul and Barnabas spoke out 46
13:5+; 18: boldly.^{ee} 'We had to proclaim the word of God to you first, but since you have 6; 28:24 rejected it, since you do not think yourselves worthy of eternal life, we must turn
1:8 to the pagans. •For this is what the Lord commanded us to do when he said: 47

Is 49:6
15:14; 26:23

I have made you a light for the nations, so that my salvation may reach the ends of the earth.'^{ff}

2:46-47+ It made the pagans very happy to hear this and they thanked the Lord for his 48
Rm 8:28 message;^{gg} all who were destined for eternal life became believers.^{hh} •Thus the 49
3:15+ word of the Lord spread through the whole countryside.

6:7+ But the Jews worked upon some of the devout women of the upper 50
10:2+ classes and the leading men of the city and persuaded them to turn against Paul 18:6 and Barnabas and expel them from their territory. •So they shook the dust 51
Lk 9:5; 10-11p from their feet in defiance and went off to Iconium; •but the disciples were filled 52
2:46+ Mt 10:14 with joy and the Holy Spirit.

Iconium evangelised

13:5+ 14 At Iconium they went to the Jewish synagogue, as they had at Antioch,^a 1 and they spoke so effectively that a great many Jews and Greeks became believers.^b

17:13 Some of the Jews, however, refused to believe, and they poisoned the minds 2
1 Th 2:14+ of the pagans against the brothers.^c

4:29-30; Accordingly Paul and Barnabas stayed on for some time, preaching fearlessly 3 13:46+ 20:24,32 for the Lord; and the Lord supported all they said about his gift of grace, allowing Mk 16:17-20 signs and wonders to be performed by them.

The people in the city were divided,^d some supported the Jews, others the 4 apostles, •but eventually with the connivance of the authorities a move was 5 2 Tm 3:11 made by pagans as well as Jews to make attacks on them and to stone them.
When the apostles came to hear of this, they went off for safety to Lycaonia where, 6 in the towns of Lystra and Derbe and in the surrounding country,^e •they preached 7 the Good News.

3:1-10 Healing of a cripple

A man sat there^f who had never walked in his life, because his feet were 8 crippled from birth; •and as he listened to Paul preaching, he managed to catch 9 his eye. Seeing that the man had the faith to be cured,^g •Paul said in a loud voice, 10
'Get to your feet—stand up', and the cripple jumped up and began to walk.

When the crowd saw what Paul had done they shouted in the language of 11
28:6 Lycaonia, 'These people are gods who have come down to us disguised as men'.
They addressed Barnabas as Zeus, and since Paul was the principal speaker they 12 called him Hermes.^h •The priests of Zeus-outside-the-Gate,ⁱ proposing that all 13 the people should offer sacrifice with them, brought garlanded oxen to the gates.
When the apostles Barnabas and Paul heard what was happening they tore their 14 clothes,^j and rushed into the crowd, shouting, •'Friends, what do you think you 15 3:12; 10:26 are doing? We are only human beings like you. We have come with good news
2:38+; 3: to make you turn from these empty idols to the living God^k who made heaven
17:22-30+ and earth and the sea and all that these hold.^l •In the past he allowed each nation 16
Ps 147:20 to go its own way; •but even then he did not leave you without evidence of himself 17
Ws 13:1 in the good things he does for you: he sends you rain from heaven, he makes your Jr 5:24

The mission is disrupted

- 19 Then some Jews arrived from Antioch and Iconium, and turned the people against the apostles. They stoned Paul and dragged him outside the town, thinking he was dead. •The disciples came crowding round him but, as they did so, he stood up and went back to the town. The next day he and Barnabas went off to Derbe.

They stoned Paul and dragged him outside the town, thinking he was dead. •The disciples came crowding round him but, as they did so, he stood up and went back to the town. The next day he and Barnabas went off to Derbe.
- 21 Having preached the Good News in that town and made a considerable number of disciples, they went back through Lystra and Iconium to Antioch. •They put fresh heart into the disciples,^m encouraging them to persevere in the faith. 'We all have to experience many hardships' they said 'before we enter the kingdom of God.' •In each of these churches they appointed elders,ⁿ and with prayer and fasting they commended them to the Lord in whom they had come to believe.
- 22 They passed through Pisidia and reached Pamphylia. •Then after proclaiming the word^o at Perga they went down to Attalia •and from there sailed for Antioch, where they had originally been commended to the grace of God for the work they had now completed.
- 23 On their arrival they assembled the church and gave an account of all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith^p to the pagans.
- 24 They stayed there with the disciples for some time.

aa. 'converts' or 'proselytes', here in the wide sense, is equivalent to 'those who feared God' or 'those who worshipped God', cf. 10:2+.

bb. Add. 'considering it fitting to accept baptism'.

cc. Add. West. 'And in this way the word of God spread through the whole town'.

dd. Var. 'the word of the Lord', or '(to hear) Paul who spoke for a long time about the Lord'.

ee. The 'courage' and 'confidence' of the apostles has been already stressed, 4:13,29,31; Luke repeatedly attributes these qualities to Paul, 9:27-28; 14:3; 19:8; 26:26; 28:31, and Paul himself lays emphasis on them, 1 Th 2:2; 2 Co 3:12; 7:4; Ph 1:20; Ep 3:12; 6:19-20.

ff. LXX text quoted freely. The words may be taken either as referring to Paul himself (cf. 26:17-18), apostle and teacher of the pagans (cf. Rm 11:13; 1 Tm 2:7; Ep 3:8, etc.), or to the risen Christ (see Ac 26:23 which also, it seems, is based on Is 49:6; and see Lk 2:32, dependent on Is 49:6,9): Christ is the light of the pagans, but since only the apostles' witness can spread this light, cf. Ac 1:8+, Paul considers this prophecy as a command that he must carry out.

gg. Var. 'the word of God'.

hh. 'eternal life', cf. v. 46, i.e. the life of the world to come, cf. 3:15+; only those achieve it whose names are 'written in heaven', Lk 10:20, in 'the book of life', Ph 4:3; Rv 20:12+. 'Destined for the life of the world to come' was a common rabbinic expression. In Christian teaching the first prerequisite of this predestination to glory is faith in Christ. See Jn 10:26+; Rm 8:28-30, and earlier in Ac 2:39.

14 a. Lit. 'At Iconium they went to the Jewish synagogue in the same way (or: together)'.

b. V. 1 is continued in v. 3.

c. Refusal to believe becomes in a short time active opposition, cf. 19:9; 28:24 and 9:23; 13:45,50; 17:5-8,13; 18:6,13.

d. Continuation of v. 2.

e. Lystra, a Roman colony, Timothy's home town, cf. 16:1-2. The events of vv. 8-19 take place in Lystra; Paul is not in Derbe until v. 20.

f. All the MSS have 'in Lystra' but this is evidently an addition, cf. v. 20b.

g. Others translate 'to be saved'. The condition for the miracle is faith, cf. Mt 8:10+.

h. Hermes (the Latin 'Mercury') was the gods' mouthpiece.

i. His temple was outside the walls.

j. Sign of displeasure, cf. Mt 26:65.

k. In preaching against polytheism it was customary to contrast the true God with the false, the living God with helpless idols, and to make an appeal for conversion. For a summary of Paul's preaching to the pagans see 1 Th 1:9-10 and Ga 4:9; cf. Ac 15:19; 26:18,20.

l. That God creates the universe shows that he is a living God: this proposition is found in Jewish creeds. Cf. Ex 20:11; Ne 9:6; Ps 146:6; Ac 4:24; 17:24; Rv 10:6; 14:7.

m. Cf. Rm 1:11; 1 Th 3:2,13; Lk 22:32.

n. The elders, cf. 11:30+, are here chosen by the apostles, not by the community; so also Tt 1:5.

o. Add. 'of the Lord' or 'of God'.

p. Paul uses a 'similar metaphor', 1 Co 16:9; 2 Co 2:12; Col 4:3.

15 a. The events of this chapter raise several difficulties: 1. vv. 5-7a repeat vv. 1-2a as if the author, having two different accounts of how the controversy started, decided to give both as they stood. 2. V. 6 gives the impression that the community leaders held a private meeting, but vv. 12,22 suggest the debate took place before the whole Christian assembly. 3. The meeting issues a decree about how Christian converts from paganism must observe purity rites, and it entrusts this decree to Paul, vv. 22f; later, however (in 21:25), James seems to assume that Paul was then being informed of this decree for the first time. Paul himself does not speak of the decree either in Ga 2:6 (speaking of the Jerusalem meeting) or in 1 Co 8-10; Rm 14 (discussing similar problems). 4. Though the decree of Ac 15:29 was primarily intended for the churches of Syria and Cilicia, 15:23, Luke has nothing to say about Paul publishing it when he travelled through those saved'. • This led to disagreement, and after Paul and Barnabas had had a long argument with these men it was arranged that Paul and Barnabas and others of the church^c should go up to Jerusalem and discuss the problem with the apostles^d and elders.

All the members of the church saw them off,^e and as they passed through 3 Phoenicia and Samaria they told how the pagans had been converted, and this news was received with the greatest satisfaction by the brothers. • When they 4 arrived in Jerusalem they were welcomed by the church and by the apostles and elders, and gave an account of all that God had done with them.

Controversy at Jerusalem

15:1 But certain members of the Pharisees' party who had become believers 5 objected,^f insisting that the pagans should be circumcised and instructed to keep the Law of Moses.^g • The apostles and elders^h met to look into the matter, • and 6 2:14+ after the discussion had gone on a long time, Peter stood upⁱ and addressed them.

Peter's speech

10:1-11:18+ 'My brothers,' he said 'you know perfectly well that in the early days God made his choice among you: the pagans were to learn the Good News from me and so become believers. • In fact God, who can read everyone's heart, showed his 8 10:44-47; 11:15-17 approval of them by giving the Holy Spirit to them just as he had to us. • God 9 11:17+ made no distinction between them and us, since he purified their hearts by faith.^j It would only provoke God's anger^k now, surely, if you imposed on the disciples 10 the very burden that neither we nor our ancestors were strong enough to support? Remember, we believe that we are saved in the same way as they are: through 11 the grace of the Lord Jesus.'^l

This silenced the entire assembly,^m and they listened to Barnabas and Paul 12 14:3,27; 21:19 describing all the signs and wonders God had worked through them among the pagans. Ga 2:7

James' speech

12:17+ When they had finished it was Jamesⁿ who spoke. 'My brothers,' he said 13 13:47; 18:10 'listen to me. • Simeon^o has described how God first arranged to enlist a people 14 for his name out of the pagans. • This is entirely in harmony with the words of the 15 15:9-12; 16:26 prophets, since the scriptures say:^p

Am 9:11-12 *After that I shall return and rebuild the fallen House of David;
I shall rebuild it from its ruins and restore it.
Then the rest of mankind,
all the pagans who are consecrated to my name,^q will look for the Lord, says the Lord who made this •known so long ago.^r*

3:19+; 21:25 'I rule, then,^s that instead of making things more difficult for pagans who 19 turn to God, • we send them a letter telling them merely to abstain from anything 20 polluted by idols,^t from fornication,^u from the meat of strangled animals and from blood.^v • For Moses has always had his preachers in every town, and is 21 13:27 read aloud in the synagogues every sabbath.'

The apostolic letter

Then the apostles and elders decided to choose delegates to send to Antioch 22 with Paul and Barnabas; the whole church concurred with this. They chose Judas known as Barsabbas^w and Silas,^x both leading men in the brotherhood, and gave them this letter to take with them:

15:40 1 Th 1 2 Th 1:1 1 P 5:12 16:4 'The apostles and elders, your brothers, send greetings to the brothers of pagan 23

42 birth in Antioch, Syria and Cilicia. •We hear that some of our members have 25 disturbed you with their demands and have unsettled your minds. They acted 26 without any authority from us, •and so we have decided unanimously to elect 27 delegates and to send them to you with Barnabas and Paul, men we highly respect 28 who have dedicated their lives to the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. •According-29 ingly we are sending you Judas and Silas, who will confirm by word of mouth what we have written in this letter. •It has been decided by the Holy Spirit and by ourselves not to saddle you with any burden beyond these essentials: •you are to abstain from food sacrificed to idols, from blood, from the meat of strangled animals and from fornication. Avoid these, and you will do what is right.^y Farewell.’

The delegates at Antioch

30 The party left and went down to Antioch, where they summoned the whole 31 community and delivered the letter. •The community read it and were delighted 32 with the encouragement it gave them. •Judas and Silas, being themselves prophets, 33 spoke for a long time, encouraging and strengthening the brothers. •These two 34 spent some time there, and then the brothers wished them peace and they went 35 back to those who had sent them.^z •Paul and Barnabas, however, stayed on in Antioch, and there with many others they taught and proclaimed the Good News, the word of the Lord.

provinces, 15:41. Luke does mention it when speaking about Lycaonia, 16:4, but the terms of 15:19-21; 21:25 suggest that the decree was for all regions. All these difficulties may be explained by supposing that Luke has combined two distinct controversies and their varying solutions (Paul distinguishes them more clearly in Ga 2). One controversy was about the obligations of convert pagans to observe the Law, and Peter and Paul both took part, cf. Ga 2:1-10; the other controversy which took place later was about the social relations between the groups of Christian converts, those from Judaism and those from paganism, cf. Ga 2:11-14. In this James, in Peter's absence, took the leading part. Any contact with pagans involved legal impurity for Jews: cf. Ac 15:20+.

15 b. In Ga 2:12 there are several of them and they come from James.

c. Ga 2:1-3 mentions Titus who had pagan blood.
 d. The apostles, who are not mentioned either in 11:30 or in 21:18, are grouped here with the elders, cf. Ga 2:2-9 where Peter and John are grouped with James, 'brother of the Lord', as authorities in the Jerusalem church.

e. Others translate 'provided them with all they needed for the journey', cf. 1 Co 16:11; Tt 3:13.

f. In the current text there seems to be no connection between the Pharisees' intervention at Jerusalem and the events that happened at Antioch. The Western Text links them together 'But those who had told them to go up to the elders then stood up...'

g. According to Ga 2:3-5 they are thinking particularly of Titus who had accompanied Paul to Jerusalem.

h. Add. West. 'and the assembly', cf. v. 12.

i. Add. West. '(inspired) by the Spirit'.

j. An interpretation of God's message to Peter, 10:15; 11:9; cf. 10:28; Si 38:10.

k. Lit. 'put God to the test': i.e. to ask God for a miracle to prove his will when this has been made known already—a blasphemous frame of mind. In the present case God had made his attitude clear by sending the Spirit to Cornelius and his family.

l. A straight answer to the assertion in v. 1. The doctrine is that of Ga 2:15-21; 3:22-26; Rm 11:32; Ep 2:1-10; etc. On this score the Jews' position is not privileged, cf. Ac 13:38; Ga 5:6; 6:15.

m. Western Text 'When the elders had expressed their agreement with what Peter had said, this silenced...'

n. Ga 2:9 witnesses to the importance of the part played by James.

o. Simon Peter's semitic name, cf. 2 P 1:1.

p. The text is quoted according to the LXX; the argument depends on variants peculiar to that version and probably comes from hellenistic circles, though here it is ascribed to the leader of the 'Hebrew' party.

q. Lit. 'on whom my name has been invoked' (or 'over whom ... pronounced'). To invoke the name of Yahweh over a people, cf. 2 Ch 7:14, or over a place, cf. 2 Ch 6:34, is to consecrate it to him.

r. Lit. 'says the Lord who makes these things known from of old'. Yaw. 'says the Lord who does these things. From of old the Lord knows his work.'

s. James settles the discussion, and the terms of the apostolic letter are those of his own pronouncement. Ga 2:9 also suggests that James at this period occupied the first place in the Jerusalem church, cf. Ac 12:17+. A variant reduces this impression 'And so, for my part...'

t. The flesh of animals slain for pagan sacrifice, cf. v. 29 and 21:25. See 1 Co 8:10.

u. This word probably refers to all the irregular marriages listed in Lv 18.

v. Western Text omits 'the meat of strangled animals' and adds, after 'blood', 'and not to do to others what one would not have done to oneself' (so also in v. 29). Another omits 'fornication'. The ritual exceptions mentioned by James show clearly the sort of thing that was at issue and answer the question asked in Ac 11:3 and Ga 2:12-14: what must hellenistic Christians do for Judeao-Christians to mix with them without incurring legal impurity? James decides to keep only those prescriptions for purity that have a fundamentally religious meaning: 1. to eat idol-meats implies sharing in sacrilegious worship, cf. 1 Co 8:10. 2. Blood symbolises life, and that belongs to God alone. The severity with which the Law forbids it, Lv 1:5+, explains the Jews' reluctance to dispense pagans from this prohibition. 3. As blood remains in strangled animals, this is part of the previous prohibition. 4. The table of irregular marriages is only included here because they involved legal impurity, not by way of moral judgement.

w. Not mentioned elsewhere, cf. 1:23.

x. Silas, missionary companion of Paul, 15:40-18:5, is the same as the Silvanus mentioned in 1 Th 1:1; 2 Th 1:1; 2 Co 1:19; 1 P 5:12.

y. Western Text adds 'under the guidance of the Holy Spirit'.

z. Western Text adds v. 34 'But Silas decided to stay there'. Several MSS further add 'Judas set out by himself'.

IV. PAUL'S MISSIONS

Paul separates from Barnabas and recruits Silas

On a later occasion Paul said to Barnabas, 'Let us go back and visit all the towns where we preached the word of the Lord, so that we can see how the brothers are doing'. •Barnabas suggested taking John Mark, •but Paul was not in favour of taking along the very man who had deserted them in Pamphylia and had refused to share in their work.

After a violent quarrel they parted company, and Barnabas sailed off with Mark to Cyprus. •Before Paul left, he chose Silas to accompany him and was commended by the brothers to the grace of God.^{aa}

Lycaonia: Paul recruits Timothy

He travelled through Syria and Cilicia, consolidating the churches.^{bb} From there he went to Derbe, and then on to Lystra. Here there was a disciple called Timothy,^a whose mother was a Jewess who had become a believer; but his father was a Greek. •The brothers at Lystra and Iconium spoke well of Timothy, •and Paul, who wanted to have him as a travelling companion, had him circumcised. This was on account of the Jews in the locality^b where everyone knew his father was a Greek.

As they visited one town after another, they passed on the decisions reached by the apostles and elders in Jerusalem, with instructions to respect them. So the churches grew strong in the faith, as well as growing daily in numbers.

The crossing into Asia Minor

They travelled through Phrygia and the Galatian country,^c having been told by the Holy Spirit not to preach the word in Asia. •When they reached the frontier of Mysia they thought to cross it into Bithynia, but as the Spirit of Jesus^d would not allow them, •they went through^e Mysia and came down to Troas.

One night Paul had a vision: a Macedonian appeared and appealed to him in these words, 'Come across to Macedonia and help us'. •Once he had seen this vision we^f lost no time in arranging a passage to Macedonia, convinced that God had called us to bring them the Good News.

Arrival at Philippi

Sailing from Troas we made a straight run for Samothrace; the next day for Neapolis, •and from there for Philippi, a Roman colony and the principal city of that particular district of Macedonia.^g After a few days in this city •we went along the river outside the gates as it was the sabbath and this was a customary place for prayer.^h We sat down and preached to the women who had come to the meeting. •One of these women was called Lydia, a devout woman from the town of Thyatira who was in the purple-dye trade. She listened to us, and the Lord opened her heart to accept what Paul was saying. •After she and her household had been baptisedⁱ she sent us an invitation: 'If you really think me a true believer in the Lord,' she said 'come and stay with us'; and she would take no refusal.^j

Imprisonment of Paul and Silas

One day as we were going to prayer, we met a slave-girl who was a soothsayer^k and made a lot of money for her masters by telling fortunes. •This girl started following Paul and the rest of us and shouting, 'Here are the servants of the Most High God; they have come to tell you how to be saved!' •She did this every day afterwards until Paul lost his temper one day and turned round and said to the spirit, 'I order you in the name of Jesus Christ to leave that woman'. The spirit went out of her then and there.

When her masters saw that there was no hope of making any more money out of her, they seized Paul and Silas and dragged them to the law courts in the market place •where they charged them before the magistrates and said, 'These people are causing a disturbance in our city. They are Jews •and are advocating practices which it is unlawful for us as Romans to accept or follow.'¹ The crowd joined in and showed its hostility to them, so the magistrates had them stripped and ordered them to be flogged. •They were given many lashes and then thrown into prison, and the gaoler was told to keep a close watch on them. •So, following his instructions, he threw them into the inner prison and fastened their feet in the stocks.

The miraculous deliverance of Paul and Silas

Late that night Paul and Silas were praying and singing God's praises, while the other prisoners listened. •Suddenly there was an earthquake that shook the prison to its foundations. All the doors flew open and the chains fell from all the prisoners. •When the gaoler woke and saw the doors wide open he drew his sword and was about to commit suicide, presuming that the prisoners had escaped. •But Paul shouted at the top of his voice, 'Don't do yourself any harm; we are all here'.

Col 3:16

The gaoler called for lights, then rushed in, threw himself trembling^m at the feet of Paul and Silas, •and escorted them out, saying, 'Sirs, what must I do to be saved?' •They told him, 'Become a believer in the Lord Jesus, and you will be saved, and your household too'. •Then they preached the word of the Lordⁿ to him and to all his family. •Late as it was, he took them to wash their wounds, and was baptised then and there with all his household. •Afterwards he took them home and gave them a meal, and the whole family celebrated their conversion to belief in God.

When it was daylight the magistrates sent the officers with the order: 'Release those men'.^o •The gaoler reported the message to Paul, 'The magistrates have sent an order for your release; you can go now and be on your way'.^p •'What!' Paul replied 'They flog Roman citizens^q in public and without trial and throw us into prison, and then think they can push us out on the quiet! Oh no! They must come and escort us out themselves.'

The officers reported this to the magistrates, who were horrified to hear the men were Roman citizens. •They came and begged them to leave the town.^r

aa. Var. 'the grace of the Lord'.

bb. Western Text adds 'passing on to them the injunctions of the elders', cf. 16:4.

16 a. Timothy became Paul's constant companion, cf. 17:14f; 18:5; 19:22; 20:4; 1 Th 3:2,6; 1 Co 4:17; 16:10; 2 Co 1:19; Rm 16:21, and one of his most faithful disciples to the very end (see 1 Tm and 2 Tm which are addressed to him).

b. Paul opposed circumcision for converts from paganism, Ga 2:3; 5:1-12, but Timothy had a Jewish mother and so, by Jewish law, was an Israelite.

c. Galatia strictly so called, cf. Introduction to the Letters of St Paul. When he left Iconium therefore, Paul intended to travel westwards to Ephesus. But the Spirit intervened and he turned N, into Phrygia, then in a north-westerly direction to 'Galatian country', where illness kept him for a time, Ga 4:13-15, preached the gospel in these places and returned later to visit the disciples there, Ac 18:23.

d. Om. 'of Jesus'.

e. Preferable to 'they skirted'.

f. Sudden transition to first person plural: the first 'We-section' of Ac, but see 11:27+. Cf. Introduction.

g. Philippi, a town in the principal district of the province of Macedonia; it had become a Roman colony and was a completely Latin city, its administration modelled on that of Rome.

h. The Jews had no synagogue in Philippi; they met by the side of the river (for ritual ablutions).

i. Lydia's conversion brought her household to the faith; cf. 10:33; 16:31,34; 18:8; 1 Co 1:16.

j. Unusual for Paul: cf. 20:33-35; 1 Th 2:9; 2 Th 3:8; 1 Co 9, though on a later occasion the Philippians persuaded him to accept help again, cf. Ph 4:10-18. He would have accepted it from no one else; it is the greatest compliment to the charity of Lydia and the other Philippian Christians.

k. Lit. 'who had a Python-spirit', so called from the serpent Python of the ancient Delphic oracle.

l. The practices referred to are Jewish, cf. 6:14; 15:1; 21:21; 26:3; 28:17; Jn 19:40: the accusers make no distinction between Christian and Jew. The precise charge is proselytism: though the Jews were allowed to practise their religion, they had no right to proselytise Romans. Christian propaganda was therefore against the law.

m. This new fear comes from his realising that he has treated as criminals men who are envoys of God.

n. Var. 'the word of God'.

o. Var. 'When it was daylight the magistrates met in the market place; remembering the earthquake that had taken place they were afraid and sent the officers to say: Release the men you arrested yesterday.'

p. Add. 'in peace'.

q. The lex Porcia forbade (under heavy penalties) the scourging of a Roman citizen.

r. Alex. (and Antiochene) Text 'They came to apologise, and when they had taken them out they asked them to leave the town'. Western Text 'And going with a number of friends to the prison, they urged them to go out, saying: We had not realised what you wanted and that you were holy men. When they had taken them out, they begged them: Get out of this town in case those who shouted against you get another mob together.'

From the prison they went to Lydia's house where they saw all the brothers and gave them some encouragement; then they left. 40

Thessalonika: difficulties with the Jews

Ph 4:16 17 Passing through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they eventually reached 1 13:5 + Thessalonika, where there was a Jewish synagogue. •Paul as usual intro- 2
Lk 24:25-27, 46-47 duced himself and for three consecutive sabbaths developed the arguments from 3
2:23 +; 18: 5+ scripture for them, •explaining and proving how it was ordained that the Christ 4
13:43 I am proclaiming to you.' •Some of them^a were convinced and joined Paul and 5 10:2 + Silas, and so did a great many God-fearing people and Greeks,^b as well as a number 6 of rich women.

13:45 + The Jews, full of resentment, enlisted the help of a gang from the market place, 5
1 Th 2:14 + stirred up a crowd, and soon had the whole city in an uproar. They made for 6
Rm 16:21 Jason's house,^c hoping to find them there and drag them off to the People's 7
Assembly; •however, they only found Jason and some of the brothers, and these 8 24:5 they dragged before the city council, shouting, 'The people who have been 9
Lk 23:2 turning the whole world upside down have come here now; •they have been 10
Jn 19:12-15 staying at Jason's. They have broken every one of Caesar's edicts by claiming 11 that there is another emperor,^d Jesus.' •This accusation alarmed the citizens 12 and the city councillors •and they made Jason and the rest give security before 13 setting them free. 14

Fresh difficulties at Beroea

13:5 + When it was dark the brothers immediately sent Paul and Silas away to Beroea,^e 10 where they visited the Jewish synagogue as soon as they arrived. •Here the Jews 11
Jn 5:39 were more open-minded than those in Thessalonika, and they welcomed the word 12 very readily; every day they studied the scriptures to check whether it was true. 13
Many Jews became believers, and so did many Greek women from the upper 14 classes and a number of the men. 15

14:2 + When the Jews of Thessalonika heard that the word of God was being preached 13
1 Th 3:2 by Paul in Beroea as well, they went there to make trouble and stir up the people. 14
18:5 So the brothers arranged for Paul to go immediately as far as the coast, leaving 15
Silas and Timothy behind. •Paul's escort took him as far as Athens, and went 16 back with instructions for Silas and Timothy to rejoin Paul as soon as they could.^f 17

Paul in Athens

13:5 + Paul waited for them in Athens and there his whole soul was revolted at the 16
10:2 + sight of a city given over to idolatry.^g •In the synagogue he held debates with the 17
Jews and the God-fearing, but in the market place he had debates every day with 18 anyone who would face him.^h •Even a few Epicurean and Stoic philosophersⁱ 19 argued with him. Some said, 'Does this parrot know what he's talking about?'^j 20
And, because he was preaching about Jesus and the resurrection,^k others said, 21
'He sounds like a propagandist for some outlandish gods'.^l 22

1 Co 1:22 They invited him to accompany them to the Council of the Areopagus,^m where 19 they said to him, 'How much of this new teaching you were speaking about are 20
we allowed to know? •Some of the things you said seemed startling to us and we 21 2 Tm 3:7 would like to find out what they mean.' •The one amusement the Athenians and 22 the foreigners living there seem to have, apart from discussing the latest ideas, 23 is listening to lectures about them.

So Paul stood before the whole Council of the Areopagus and made this 24 speech: 25

Paul's speech before the Council of the Areopagusⁿ

'Men of Athens, I have seen for myself how extremely scrupulous you are 26 in all religious matters, •because I noticed, as I strolled round admiring your 27 sacred monuments, that you had an altar inscribed: To An Unknown God.^o Well, the God whom I proclaim is in fact the one whom you already worship without knowing it.

- 24 'Since the God who made the world and everything in it^p is himself Lord of heaven and earth, he does not make his home in shrines made by human hands. 1 K 8:27
25 Nor is he dependent on anything that human hands can do for him, since he can Is 42:5
never be in need of anything; on the contrary, it is he who gives everything— 14:15+ 26 including life and breath—to everyone. •From one single stock^q he not only 7:48-50 created the whole human race so that they could occupy the entire earth, but he 2 M 7:23; decreed how long each nation should flourish and what the boundaries of its 14:35 territory should be.^r •And he did this so that all nations might seek the deity^s Ps 50:12 27 and, by feeling their way towards him, succeed in finding him. Yet in fact he is not 28 far from any of us, •since it is in him that we live, and move, and exist,^t as indeed some of your own writers^u have said:

"We are all his children".^v

2 P 1:4

- 29 'Since we are the children of God, we have no excuse for thinking that the deity looks like anything in gold, silver or stone that has been carved and designed by a man.^w 19:26
30 'God overlooked that sort of thing when men were ignorant, but now he is Rm 3:25-26
31 telling everyone everywhere that they must repent, •because he has fixed a day 2:38+ when the whole world will be judged, and judged in righteousness,^x and he has Lk 24:47 appointed a man to be the judge. And God has publicly proved this by raising this man from the dead.^y 10:42+
32 At this mention of rising from the dead, some of them burst out laughing; 24:25
33 others said, 'We would like to hear you talk about this again'.^z •After that Paul

17 a. Aristarchus, one of Paul's most faithful companions, cf. 20:4; Col 4:10, was probably one of them.

b. Var. 'Greek worshippers of God'. The reading here preferred distinguishes 'those who worship God', 10:2+, from 'Greeks' not previously influenced by Jewish proselytism. Most of the conversions in Thessalonika were made from paganism, cf. 1 Th 1:9-10, etc.

c. Possibly the Jason of Rm 16:21.

d. Actually, the Christians deliberately avoided calling Jesus by the emperor's title basileus ('king'); they preferred 'Christ' (Messiah) and 'Lord'.

e. Despite their departure the persecution at Thessalonika went on, cf. 1 Th 2:14.

f. Luke is summarising and simplifying. Timothy must have gone with Paul because Paul later sends him from Athens to Thessalonika, 1 Th 3:1f.

g. Athens was the intellectual metropolis of pagan hellenism, and to Luke was a symbol. This is evident from the fact that Paul's sermon there, the only sample of his preaching to the pagans, is the only one in which he argues philosophically.

h. The one explicit mention in Ac of this kind of preaching (though cf. 14:7f).

i. The two prevailing philosophical systems.

j. Lit. 'What does this seed-picker want to say?' The local Athenian word spermologos was used of birds that peck, crows etc. It came to mean 'beggar', one who picks up food wherever he can find it, and also a garrulous man who speaks in clichés, parrot-wise.

k. Cf. v. 32. They assume Anastasis ('Resurrection') is the name of a goddess, consort of Jesus.

l. Socrates was accused of the same thing.

m. A hill to the S. of the Agora. The word means also the Athenian supreme council which held its sessions there. The text may be understood in two ways: either the philosophers lead Paul 'on to (the hill of) the Areopagus', away from the city centre for easier listening, or (preferably) they lead him 'before (the Council of) the Areopagus'.

n. Paul preaches on the knowledge of God, a theme very popular in the propaganda of contemporary hellenistic Judaism. The pagans are accused of not knowing God, v. 23, the proof being that they worship idols v. 29. This ignorance is culpable, v. 30, since all men are capable of knowing God as creator and controller of the cosmos, vv. 24-29. Cf. the same line of argument in 14:15-17; Ws 13-14; Rm 1:19-25; Ep 4:17-19.

o. The pagans used to dedicate altars 'to the unknown gods' lest they provoke the vengeance of gods whose names they did not know. Paul turns the practice to his own purpose and thus parries the charge of preaching 'outlandish gods'.

p. This idea was common in Greek thought and hellenistic Judaism; it is a form of the old biblical theme in Am 5:21f; 1 Ch 29:10f; Ps 50:9-13, etc.

q. Var. 'of one blood', 'of one nation', 'of one race'.

r. Alternative translations 'determining the division of times' or 'determining the order of the seasons' (cf. 14:17) and the bounds of human habitation' (man was not to occupy the whole earth but only part of it). The general meaning is the same: the order of the cosmos is enough to lead to a knowledge of God.

s. Var. 'God' or 'the Lord'.

t. Expression suggested by the poet Epimenides of Cnossos (6th c. B.C.).

u. Lit. 'of your people'. Var. 'of your poets' or 'of your sages'.

v. Quotation from the Phainomena of Aratus, a poet of Cilician origin (3rd c. B.C.). Cleanthes the Stoic (3rd c.) used almost identical language.

w. This form of attack on idolatry has ancient precedent, cf. Is 40:20+.

x. Cf. Ps 9:8; 96:13; 98:9. The apostles set their appeal for repentance against the background of judgement, cf. especially 10:42-43; 1 Th 1:10.

y. Christ's resurrection justifies belief in his coming as judge and saviour at the end of time, cf. Rm 14:9; 2 Tm 4:1; 1 P 4:5.

z. In the Greek world, even among Christians, the doctrine of the resurrection met stubborn resistance from preconceived ideas, cf. 1 Co 15:12f. The Jerusalem Sanhedrists condemned and attacked this Christian dogma; the Athenians of the Areopagus were content to mock. Paul's failure in Athens was all but complete; from now on he refuses to use the devices of Greek philosophy, 1 Co 2:1-5.

left them, •but there were some who attached themselves to him and became 34 believers, among them Dionysius the Areopagite^{aa} and a woman called Damaris, and others besides.

Foundation of the church of Corinth

18 After this Paul left Athens and went to Corinth,^a •where he met a Jew ¹ called Aquila whose family came from Pontus. He and his wife Priscilla^b had recently left Italy because an edict of Claudius had expelled all the Jews from Rome.^c Paul went to visit them, •and when he found they were tentmakers, of the 3 same trade as himself, he lodged with them, and they worked together.^d •Every 4 sabbath he used to hold debates in the synagogues, trying to convert Jews as well as Greeks.

After Silas and Timothy had arrived from Macedonia,^e Paul devoted all his 5 time to preaching, declaring to the Jews that Jesus was the Christ.^f •When they 6 turned against him and started to insult him, he took his cloak and shook it out in front of them,^g saying, 'Your blood be on your own heads; from now on I can go to the pagans with a clear conscience'. •Then he left the synagogue and moved 7 to the house next door that belonged to a worshipper of God called Justus.^h Crispus, president of the synagogue, and his whole household, all became believers 8 in the Lord. A great many Corinthians who had heard him became believers and were baptised.ⁱ •One night the Lord spoke to Paul in a vision, 'Do not be afraid 9 to speak out, nor allow yourself to be silenced: •I am with you. I have so many 10 people on my side in this city that no one will even attempt to hurt you.' •So Paul 11 stayed there preaching the word of God among them for eighteen months.

The Jews take Paul to court

But while Gallio was proconsul of Achaia,^j the Jews made a concerted attack 12 on Paul and brought him before the tribunal. •'We accuse this man' they said 13
'of persuading people to worship God in a way that breaks the Law.'^k •Before 14 Paul could open his mouth, Gallio said to the Jews, 'Listen, you Jews. If this were a misdemeanour or a crime, I would not hesitate to attend to you; •but if it is 15 only quibbles about words and names, and about your own Law, then you must deal with it yourselves—I have no intention of making legal decisions about things like that.' •Then he sent them out of the court, •and at once they all turned on 16
Sosthenes,^l the synagogue president, and beat him in front of the court house. 17
Gallio refused to take any notice at all.

Return to Antioch and departure for the third journey

After staying on for some time, Paul took leave of the brothers and sailed for 18 Syria,^m accompanied by Priscilla and Aquila. At Cenchreae he had his hair cut off, because of a vow he had made.ⁿ

When they reached Ephesus, he left them, but first he went alone to the 19 synagogue to debate with the Jews. •They asked him to stay longer but he declined, 20 though when he left he said, 'I will come back another time, God willing'. Then 21 he sailed from Ephesus.

He landed at Caesarea, and went up to greet the church.^o Then he came down 22 to Antioch •where he spent a short time before continuing his journey 23 through the Galatian country and then through Phrygia, encouraging all the followers.

19:1 Apollos

An Alexandrian Jew named Apollos^p now arrived in Ephesus. He was an 24 eloquent man, with a sound knowledge of the scriptures, and yet, •though he had 25 been given instruction in the Way of the Lord and preached with great spiritual earnestness and was accurate in all the details he taught about Jesus, he had only experienced the baptism of John. •When Priscilla and Aquila heard him speak 26 boldly in the synagogue, they took an interest in him and gave him further instruction about the Way.^a 13:46+

Rm 7:3

- 27 When Apollos thought of crossing over to Achaia, the brothers encouraged him and wrote asking the disciples to welcome him.^r When he arrived there he was 2 Co 3:1
28 able by God's grace to help the believers considerably •by the energetic way he refuted the Jews in public and demonstrated from the scriptures that Jesus was the Christ. 9:22; 18:5+

The disciples of John at Ephesus

- 1 19 While Apollos was in Corinth,^a Paul made his way overland as far as 18:24
2 Ephesus,^b where he found a number of disciples. •When he asked, 'Did you receive the Holy Spirit when you became believers?' they answered, 'No, 8:15-17
3 we were never even told there was such a thing as a Holy Spirit'.^c •Then how Jn 7:39
4 were you baptised?' he asked. 'With John's baptism' they replied. •John's baptism Mt 3:6+
5 said Paul 'was a baptism of repentance; but he insisted that the people should believe in the one who was to come after him—in other words Jesus.' 1:5+; 2:38+; 13:24-25+
6 When they heard this, they were baptised in the name of the Lord Jesus, •and 1:5+
7 the moment Paul had laid hands on them the Holy Spirit came down on them, 8:15-17+ and they began to speak with tongues and to prophesy. •There were about twelve 1 Tm 4:14+ of these men. Ac 2:4+; 11:27+

Foundation of the church of Ephesus^d

- 8 He began by going to the synagogue, where he spoke out boldly and argued 13:5+; 46+ 9 persuasively about the kingdom of God. He did this for three months, •till the 1:3+; 20:25

aa. Luke's readers must have known him. He became the subject of legend, especially since the 5th c. when an author (the 'pseudo-Dionysius') published various mystical writings under his name. Later legend identifies him with St Denys, first Bishop of Paris (3rd c.).

18 a. Corinth, rebuilt by Julius Caesar, became capital of the Roman province of Achaia. Its population was largely Roman and Latin-speaking, but brisk trade had attracted people of all nations. It had a considerable Jewish colony. The immorality of Corinth was proverbial.

b. Also called Prisca, Rm 16:3; 1 Co 16:19; 2 Tm 4:19.

c. This edict, mentioned by Suetonius, was issued in 49 or 50. It was effective for a very short time, cf. Rm 16:3; Ac 28:17.

d. Though Paul acknowledges the missionary's right to sustenance, 1 Co 9:6-14; Ga 6:6; 2 Th 3:9; cf. Lk 10:7, he himself always practised a trade, 1 Co 4:12, not wishing to be a burden on anyone, 1 Th 2:9; 2 Th 3:8; 2 Ce 12:13f, and in order to prove his singleness of purpose, Ac 20:33f; 1 Co 9:15-18; 2 Co 11:7-12. Only from the Philippians did he accept help, Ph 4:10-18; 2 Co 11:8f, cf. Ac 16:15+. He recommended his followers to do the same to supply their own needs, 1 Th 4:11f; 2 Th 3:10-12, and those of the poor, Ac 20:35; Ep 4:28.

e. It was after this that Paul wrote his two letters to the Thessalonians.

f. That Jesus was Messiah was the distinctive theme of the preaching to the Jews, cf. 2:36; 3:18,20; 5:42; 8:5,12; 9:22; 17:3; 18:28; 24:24; 26:23.

g. Symbolically breaking off relations. The following sentence is biblical, cf. Lv 20:9-16; 2 S 1:16, and means that the Jews must accept full responsibility for the consequences. Their 'blood', i.e. their punishment, is not Paul's affair; his conscience is clear (lit. 'I am clean').

h. Var. 'Titus Justus' or 'Titius Justus'.

i. Western Text add. 'believing in God through the name of our Lord Jesus Christ', cf. 8:36+. The converts had therefore been pagans.

j. An inscription from Delphi puts Gallio's proconsulate in 52. Paul's arraignment before Gallio must have been towards the end (v. 18) of his eighteen-month stay (v. 11) in Corinth: probably the spring of 52.

k. Ambiguous term capable of meaning the Roman law, cf. 16:21; 17:7, or the Jewish Law which was itself guaranteed by Roman law. Gallio chooses to see the charge as a question of the interpretation of Jewish Law (v. 15) in which he claims no competence.

l. Possibly the Sosthenes of 1 Co 1:1.

m. Back to Antioch, his headquarters.

n. The Greek is obscure, but apparently it was Paul, not Aquila, who took the vow. To take a vow was to be nazir, cf. Nb 6:1+, for the period it covered, usually thirty days, and among other obligations it meant leaving the hair uncut during that time. It is not known whether the vow was taken by Paul at Cenchreae or whether it expired there. Cf. Ac 21:23-27 where Paul and four other Jews perform the rites for the fulfilment of a vow.

o. Perhaps the church in Jerusalem.

p. For further information, cf. 1 Co: when he went to Corinth his enormous popularity soon developed into partisanship, cf. 1 Co 1:12; 3:4-11,22; see also Tt 3:13. These remarks about Apollos have something in common with the description of John the Baptist's admirers at Ephesus in the following passage: combining these two descriptions of an imperfectly informed Christianity, we may possibly get some idea of Christianity in the church of Alexandria at this time.

q. Add. 'of God'.

r. On the use of letters of reference in the early Christian communities, cf. Rm 16:1; 2 Co 3:1f; Col 4:10; 3 Jn 9-10,12.

19 a. An editorial link joining two items of information which are inserted in the account of the journey. The Western Text has 'When Paul, pursuing his own plan, wanted to set out for Jerusalem, the Spirit told him to go back to Asia. Consequently, he made his way...'

b. Ephesus at this time was regarded, with Alexandria, as one of the finest cities in the empire; it was a religious, political and commercial centre of mixed population.

c. They were unaware, not that the Spirit existed (evident from the O.T. to the most casual reader) but that the messianic promises had been fulfilled and the Spirit given in abundance, cf. 2:17-18,33.

d. Resumption of the narrative interrupted by the remarks about Apollos and the followers of John the Baptist: 19:8 follows on 18:23 and 19:1.

attitude of some of the congregation hardened into unbelief. As soon as they 9:2+ began attacking the Way in front of the others, he broke with them and took his disciples apart to hold daily discussions in the lecture room of Tyrannus.^e •This 10 went on for two years,^f with the result that people from all over Asia,^g both Jews and Greeks, were able to hear the word of the Lord.

The Jewish exorcists

So remarkable were the miracles worked by God at Paul's hands •that 11
 5:15 handkerchiefs or aprons which had touched him were taken to the sick, and they 12
 Rm 8:44-47D were cured of their illnesses, and the evil spirits came out of them.

But some itinerant Jewish exorcists^h tried pronouncing the name of the Lord 13
 3:16+ Jesus over people who were possessed by evil spirits; they used to say, 'I command 14
 Lk 9:49D you by the Jesus whose spokesman is Paul'. •Among those who did this were 15
 16:17 seven sons of Sceva, a Jewish chief priest. •The evil spirit replied, 'Jesus 15
 I recognise, and I know who Paul is, but who are you?' •and the man with the 16 evil spirit hurled himself at them and overpowered first one and then another,ⁱ and handled them so violently that they fled from that house naked and badly 9:35,42 mauled. •Everybody in Ephesus, both Jews and Greeks, heard about this episode; 17
 3:10 they were all greatly impressed, and the name of the Lord Jesus came to be held 18
 Lk 5:26 in great honour.

Some believers, too, came forward to admit in detail how they had used spells^j 18 and a number of them who had practised magic collected their books and made 19 a bonfire of them in public. The value of these was calculated to be fifty thousand silver pieces.

6:7+ In this impressive way the word of the Lord spread more and more widely 20 and successfully.^k

V. A PRISONER FOR CHRIST

Paul's plans

When all this was over Paul made up his mind to go back to Jerusalem through 21
 11:30+; Macedonia and Achaia. 'After I have been there' he said 'I must go on to see 22
 Rm 1:13 Rome as well.' •So he sent two of his helpers, Timothy and Erastus, ahead of 22 1 Co 4:17 him to Macedonia, while he remained for a time in Asia.

Ephesus: the silversmiths' riot^l

It was during this time that a rather serious disturbance broke out in connection 23
 9:2+ with the Way. •A silversmith called Demetrius, who employed a large number 24
 16:19 of craftsmen making silver shrines of Diana, •called a general meeting of his own 25
 Ws 15:12 men with others in the same trade. 'As you men know,' he said 'it is on this industry that we depend for our prosperity. •Now you must have seen and heard 26 how, not just in Ephesus but nearly everywhere in Asia, this man Paul has per-17:29+ suaded and converted a great number of people with his argument that gods made by hand are not gods at all. •This threatens not only to discredit our trade, but 27 also to reduce the sanctuary of the great goddess Diana to unimportance. It could end up by taking away all the prestige of a goddess venerated all over Asia, yes, and everywhere in the civilised world.' •This speech roused them to fury, and they 28 started to shout,^m 'Great is Diana of the Ephesians!' •The whole town was in an 29 uproar and the mob rushed to the theatre dragging along two of Paul's 20:4; Macedonian travelling companions, Gaius and Aristarchus.ⁿ •Paul wanted to 30
 27:2 make an appeal to the people, but the disciples refused to let him; •in fact, some 31
 1 Co 4:10 of the Asiarchs,^o who were friends of his, sent messages imploring him not to take the risk of going into the theatre.

By now everybody was shouting different things till the assembly itself had 32 no idea what was going on; most of them did not even know why they had been

33 summoned. •The Jews pushed Alexander to the front, and when some of the crowd shouted encouragement² he raised his hand for silence in the hope of being 34 able to explain things to the people. •When they realised he was a Jew, they all started shouting in unison, 'Great is Diana of the Ephesians!' and they kept this 35 up for two hours. •When the town clerk eventually succeeded in calming the crowd, he said, 'Citizens of Ephesus! Is there anybody alive who does not know
 36 that the city of the Ephesians is the guardian of the temple of great Diana and of her statue that fell from heaven? •Nobody can contradict this and there is no
 37 need for you to get excited or do anything rash. •These men you have brought here are not guilty of any sacrilege or blasphemy against our goddess. •If Demetrius and the craftsmen he has with him want to complain about anyone, there are 38 the assizes and the proconsuls; let them take the case to court. •And if you want to ask any more questions you must raise them in the regular assembly. •We could easily be charged with rioting for today's happenings: there was no ground for it 40 all, and we can give no reason for this gathering.' •When he had finished this speech he dismissed the assembly.

Paul leaves Ephesus

1 20 When the disturbance was over,^a Paul sent for the disciples and, after speaking words of encouragement to them, said good-bye and set out for
 2 Macedonia. •On his way through those areas^b he said many words of encouragement to them and then made his way into Greece, •where he spent three months.^c He was leaving by ship for Syria when^d a plot organised against him by the Jews
 4 made him decide to go back by way of Macedonia. •He was accompanied^e by Sopater, son of Pyrrhus, who came from Beroea; Aristarchus and Secundus who came from Thessalonika; Gaius from Doberus, and Timothy, as well as Tychicus
 5 and Trophimus who were from Asia.^f •They all went on to Troas where they waited for us.^g •We ourselves left Philippi by ship^h after the days of Unleavened Breadⁱ and met them five days later at Troas, where we stopped for a week.^j

Troas: Paul raises a dead man to life

7 On the first day of the week^k we met to break bread. Paul was due to leave

e. Western Text adds 'from the fifth to the tenth hour' (11 a.m. to 4 p.m.).

f. 20:31 says three years. During this stay, Paul wrote the first Letter to the Corinthians, the Letter to the Galatians and, probably, the Letter to the Philippians.

g. Not the whole of proconsular Asia (the W. half of Asia Minor) but the region centred on Ephesus and including the seven towns of Rv 1:11. Epaphras of Colossae had been appointed by Paul to evangelise his own city, and his mission had spread to Laodicea and Hierapolis, Col 1:7; 4:12-13. Paul was also assisted by Timothy and Erastus, Ac 19:22, Gaius and Aristarchus, 19:29, Titus, whom Ac never mentions, and others, cf. 2 Co 12:18. Luke credits Paul with the achievements of his subordinates.

h. On Jewish exorcisms, cf. Mt 12:27. Jesus himself, and his apostles after him, cf. Ac 5:16; 16:18, frequently exorcised, cf. Mt 8:29+.

i. Or 'both' (two of their number).

j. Occult practices for which Ephesus was well-known.

k. Alex. Text 'Thus, through the power of the Lord, the word spread even more widely and impressively'.

l. The literary style of this narrative is unusual in Luke; he has taken it from a special source and linked it with his story of the evangelisation of Ephesus.

m. Western Text adds 'rushing into the street'.

n. Aristarchus, a native of Thessalonika, 20:4, was a companion of Paul during his imprisonment, 27:2; Col 4:10; Phm 24. Gaius is probably the one mentioned in Ac 20:4.

o. Members of the 'Asiatic assembly' which supervised the cult of Rome and the emperor on behalf of the cities of Asia.

p. Others translate 'they made him stand away from the crowd'.

20 a. The narrative is resumed from 19:22.

b. From here he sent his second letter to the Christians in Corinth.

c. Paul was therefore able to carry out the proposal of 1 Co 16:5-6. During this period in Corinth he wrote the Letter to the Romans. Western Text 'When he had been there for three months and the Jews had plotted against him, he intended to set out for Syria, but the Spirit told him to go back through Macedonia'.

d. To take the proceeds of the collection to Jerusalem, cf. 19:21 and Rm 15:25+.

e. Add. 'as far as Asia'. Sopater is perhaps the Jew, Sosipater, of Rm 16:21. 'Doberus'; var. 'Derbe'.

f. Trophimus was an Ephesian, 21:29, cf. 2 Tm 4:20. Tychicus is mentioned several times in the letters, Ep 6:21; Col 4:7; 2 Tm 4:12; Tt 3:12.

g. Narrative in the first person: Paul met Luke again at Philippi; from then on they stayed together, cf. 16:10+.

h. From the port of Neapolis, cf. 16:11.

i. Passover week, cf. Ex 12:1+.

j. On Paul's previous ministry in this town (when on the way from Ephesus to Corinth: vv. 1-2) cf. 2 Co 2:12.

k. The first day of the Jewish week, which had become the Christians' day of assembly, cf. Mt 28:1+; 1 Co 16:2, 'the Lord's day' (dies dominica) Rv 1:10. This Sunday meeting was held when the dies dominica began, i.e. on the Saturday evening, because the day was reckoned in the Jewish fashion.

the next day, and he preached a sermon that went on till the middle of the night. A number of lamps were lit in the upstairs room where we were assembled, •and⁸ as Paul went on and on, a young man called Eutychus who was sitting on the window-sill grew drowsy and was overcome by sleep and fell to the ground three⁹ floors below. He was picked up dead. •Paul went down and stooped to clasp the¹⁰ boy to him. 'There is no need to worry,' he said 'there is still life in him.' •Then¹¹ he went back upstairs where he broke bread and ate and carried on talking till he left at daybreak. •They took the boy away alive, and were greatly¹² encouraged.

From Troas to Miletus

We were now to go on ahead by sea, so we set sail for Assos, where we were¹³ to take Paul on board; this was what he had arranged, for he wanted to go by road. When he rejoined us at Assos we took him aboard and went on to Mitylene. •The¹⁴ next day we sailed from there and arrived opposite Chios. The second day we¹⁵ touched at Samos and, after stopping at Trogyllium, made Miletus the next day. Paul had decided to pass wide of Ephesus so as to avoid spending time in Asia,¹⁶ since he was anxious to be in Jerusalem, if possible, for the day of Pentecost.

Farewell to the elders of Ephesus

From Miletus he sent for the elders of the church of Ephesus. •When they¹⁷ arrived he addressed these words to them:¹⁸

'You know what my way of life has been ever since the first day I set foot among you in Asia, •how I have served the Lord in all humility, with all the¹⁹ sorrows and trials that came to me through the plots of the Jews. •I have not²⁰ hesitated to do anything that would be helpful to you; I have preached to you, and instructed you both in public and in your homes, •urging both Jews and²¹ Greeks to turn to God and to believe in our Lord Jesus.^m

'And now you see me a prisoner already in spirit;ⁿ I am on my way to Jeru-²² salem, but have no idea what will happen to me there, •except that the Holy Spirit,²³ in town after town, has made it clear enough that imprisonment and persecution await me. •But life to me is not a thing to waste words on,^o provided that when²⁴ I finish my race I have carried out the mission the Lord Jesus gave me—and that²⁵ was to bear witness to the Good News of God's grace.

'I now feel sure that none of you among whom I have gone about proclaiming²⁶ the kingdom will ever see my face again.^p •And so here and now I swear that my²⁷ conscience is clear as far as all of you are concerned, •for I have without faltering²⁸ put before you the whole of God's purpose.

'Be on your guard for yourselves and for all the flock of which the Holy Spirit²⁹ has made you the overseers, to feed the Church of God^q which he bought with his own blood.^r •I know quite well that when I have gone fierce wolves will invade³⁰ you and will have no mercy on the flock. •Even from your own ranks there will³¹ be men coming forward with a travesty of the truth on their lips to induce the disciples to follow them. •So be on your guard, remembering how night and day³² for three years I never failed to keep you right, shedding tears over each one of you. •And now I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace that has³³ power^s to build you up and to give you your inheritance among all the sanctified.

'I have never asked anyone for money or clothes; •you know for yourselves³⁴ that the work I did earned enough to meet my needs and those of my companions. •I did this to show you that this is how we must exert ourselves to support³⁵ the weak, remembering the words of the Lord Jesus, who himself said, "There is more happiness in giving than in receiving".^t

When he had finished speaking he knelt down with them all and prayed. •By³⁶ now they were all in tears; they put their arms round Paul's neck and kissed him;³⁷ what saddened them most was his saying they would never see his face again. ³⁸ Then they escorted him to the ship.

The journey to Jerusalem

- 1 21 When we had at last torn ourselves away from them and put to sea, we set 2 a straight course and arrived at Cos; the next day we reached Rhodes, and 3 from there went on to Patara.^a •Here we found a ship bound for Phoenicia, so we 4 went on board and sailed in her. •After sighting Cyprus and leaving it to port,
 5 we sailed to Syria and put in at Tyre, since the ship was to unload her cargo there.
 6 We sought out the disciples and stayed there a week. Speaking in the Spirit,^b
 7 they kept telling Paul not to go on to Jerusalem, •but when our time was up we set 8 off. Together with the women and children they all escorted us on our way till we 9 were out of the town. When we reached the beach, we knelt down and prayed;
 10 then, after saying good-bye to each other, we went aboard and they returned 11 home.
 12 The end of our voyage from Tyre came when we landed at Ptolemais, where 13 we greeted the brothers and stayed one day with them. •The next day we left and 14 came to Caesarea. Here we called on Philip the evangelist, one of the Seven, and 15 stayed with him. •He had four virgin daughters who were prophets. •When we 16 had been there several days a prophet called Agabus arrived from Judaea •to see 17 us. He took Paul's girdle, and tied up his own feet and hands,^c and said, 'This 18 is what the Holy Spirit says, "The man this girdle belongs to will be bound like 19 this by the Jews in Jerusalem, and handed over to the pagans"'.^d •When we heard 20 this, we and everybody there implored Paul not to go on to Jerusalem. •To 21 this he replied, 'What are you trying to do—weaken my resolution by your tears?
 22 For my part, I am ready not only to be tied up but even to die in Jerusalem for 23 the name of the Lord Jesus.' •And so, as he would not be persuaded, we gave up 24 the attempt, saying, 'The Lord's will be done'.

Paul's arrival in Jerusalem

- 15 After this we packed and went on up to Jerusalem. •Some of the disciples 16 from Caesarea accompanied us and took us to the house of a Cypriot with whom 17 we were to lodge;^e he was called Mnason and had been one of the earliest disciples.
 18 On our arrival in Jerusalem the brothers gave us a very warm welcome. •The 19 next day Paul went with us^f to visit James, and all the elders were present. •After 20 greeting them he gave a detailed account of all that God had done among the 21 pagans through his ministry. •They gave glory to God when they heard this.

1. The third great discourse of Paul in Ac. The first, ch. 13, exemplified his preaching to the Jews; the second, ch. 17, his preaching to the pagans; the third, 20:18-35, is as it were the last testament of the departing pastor. Many of the details of this third discourse are found in his letters; its tone is that of the Pastoral Letters. After referring to his mission in Asia, vv. 18-21, he speaks of this as a final parting and seems to hint at his death, vv. 22-27. Paul's last advice to the elders of Ephesus (and through them to all the pastors in every church) is vigilance, vv. 28-32, selflessness, charity, vv. 33-35. In all of this Paul appeals to his own example: the discourse therefore draws a faithful portrait of the apostle himself.

m. Summary of Pauline preaching, to be compared with 17:30-31; 1 Th 1:9-10; 1 Co 8:4-6. Faith and conversion must go together, cf. Mk 1:15.

n. On his way to captivity Paul speaks of himself as a prisoner; in his heart he is one already. Others translate 'a prisoner of the Spirit', i.e. impelled by the Holy Spirit.

o. Cf. 15:26; 21:13; 1 Th 2:8; Ph 1:21-23. Others translate 'But I do not count my life of any value, as if it were precious to me'.

p. Cf. v. 38. From Jerusalem Paul intended to visit Spain, Rm 15:24-28. His long imprisonment affected his plans and he did in fact revisit Ephesus despite the presentiment expressed here, cf. Ac 28:31+.

q. Var. 'the Church of the Lord'. 1 P 2:9-10 speaks of the people which God made his own (following Is 43:21; cf. Ac 18:10+); this people was the 'Congregation (= Church) of God', 5:11, one of Paul's favourite expressions, cf. 1 Co 1:2; 10:32; 11:22, etc.

r. A difficult phrase sometimes rendered 'acquired by him at the price of the blood of his own Son', cf. Rm 8:32; Jn 3:16. But we may see underlying the expression a certain flexibility of thought, since the work of the Father (= 'God') and of the Son is so inseparably one (cf., for example, Rm 8:31-39). For the doctrine, cf. Ep 5:25-27; Heb 9:12-14; 13:12.

s. 'to God', var. 'to the Lord'. 'that has power', or 'who has power', referring to God, cf. Rm 16:25.

t. The gospels have not recorded this saying.

21 a. Add. 'and Myra'.

b. The command does not come from the Spirit, but the Spirit has revealed to them Paul's fate which their love for him seeks to avert.

c. Prophecy in mime like that used by the prophets in the past, cf. Jr 18:1+.

d. The forecast (cf. 28:17) only approximately corresponds to the narrative of Paul's arrest (cf. 21:31-33) but it resembles the prophecy of Christ's Passion in Lk 18:31-34; cf. Col 1:24; Ph 3:10, etc.

e. The Western Text indicates, perhaps correctly, that this was half-way to Jerusalem.

f. The last 'we' until 27:1 (the departure for Rome): Luke followed Paul as far as Jerusalem and was to accompany him again from Caesarea to Rome.

believers, all of them staunch upholders of the Law,^g and •they have heard that 21 you instruct all Jews living among the pagans to break away from Moses,^h authorising them not to circumcise their childrenⁱ or to follow the customary 22 practices. •What is to be done? Inevitably there will be a meeting of the whole 22 body, since they are bound to hear that you have come.^j •So do as we suggest. 23
 We have four men here who are under a vow; •take these men along and be 24 purified with them and pay all the expenses connected with the shaving of their 24 heads.^k This will let everyone know there is no truth in the reports they have heard about you and that you still regularly observe the Law. •The pagans who have 25 become believers, as we wrote when we told them our decisions, must abstain from things sacrificed to idols, from blood, from the meat of strangled animals and from fornication.^l

So the next day Paul took the men along and was purified with them, and he 26 visited the Temple to give notice of the time when the period of purification would be over and the offering would have to be presented on behalf of each of them.^m

Paul's arrest

The seven days were nearly over when some Jews from Asia caught sight of 27 him in the Temple and stirred up the crowd and seized him, •shouting, 'Men of 28 Israel, help! This is the man who preaches to everyone everywhere against our people, against the Law and against this place.ⁿ Now he has profaned this Holy Place by bringing Greeks into the Temple.' •They had, in fact, previously seen 29 Trophimus the Ephesian in the city with him, and thought that Paul had brought him into the Temple.

This roused the whole city; people came running from all sides; they seized 30
 Paul and dragged him out of the Temple, and the gates were closed behind them. 30
 They would have killed him if a report had not reached the tribune of the cohort^o 31 that there was rioting all over Jerusalem. •He immediately called out soldiers 32 and centurions, and charged down on the crowd, who stopped beating Paul when they saw the tribune and the soldiers. •When the tribune came up he arrested 33
 Paul, had him bound with two chains and enquired who he was and what he had 34 done. •People in the crowd called out different things, and since the noise made it impossible for him to get any positive information, the tribune ordered Paul 35 to be taken into the fortress. •When Paul reached the steps, the crowd became 35 so violent that he had to be carried by the soldiers; •and indeed the whole mob 36 was after them, shouting, 'Kill him!'

Just as Paul was being taken into the fortress, he asked the tribune if he could 37 have a word with him. The tribune said, 'You speak Greek, then? •So you are 38 not the Egyptian who started the recent revolt and led those four thousand cut-throats^p out into the desert?' •I?" said Paul 'I am a Jew and a citizen of the well- 39 known city of Tarsus in Cilicia. Please give me permission to speak to the people.'
 The man gave his consent and Paul, standing at the top of the steps, gestured to 40 the people with his hand. When all was quiet again he spoke to them in Hebrew.^q

Paul's address to the Jews of Jerusalem^a

22 'My brothers, my fathers, listen to what I have to say to you in my defence.' 1
 When they realised he was speaking in Hebrew, the silence was even greater 2 than before. •I am a Jew,' Paul said 'and was born at Tarsus in Cilicia. I was 3 brought up here in this city. I studied under Gamaliel and was taught the exact observance of the Law of our ancestors. In fact, I was as full of duty towards God as you are today. •I even persecuted this Way^b to the death, and sent women as 4 well as men to prison in chains •as the high priest and the whole council of elders 5 can testify, since they even sent me with letters to their brothers in Damascus.
 When I set off it was with the intention of bringing prisoners back from there to Jerusalem for punishment.

'I was on that journey and nearly at Damascus when about midday a bright 6

7 light from heaven suddenly shone round me. •I fell to the ground and heard a voice
8 saying, "Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting me?" •I answered: Who are you, Lord? and he said to me, "I am Jesus the Nazarene, and you are persecuting 9 me". •The people with me saw the light but did not hear his voice as he spoke 10 to me. •I said: What am I to do, Lord? The Lord answered, "Stand up and go into Damascus, and there you will be told what you have been appointed to do".
11 The light had been so dazzling that I was blind and my companions had to take me by the hand; and so I came to Damascus.

12 'Someone called Ananias, a devout follower of the Law and highly thought 13 of by all the Jews living there,^c •came to see me; he stood beside me and said, "Brother Saul, receive your sight". Instantly my sight came back and I was able 14 to see him. •Then he said, "The God of our ancestors has chosen you to know to be his witness before all mankind, testifying to what you have seen and heard.^e 16 And now why delay? It is time you were baptised and had your sins washed away while invoking his name."

19 once; they will not accept the testimony you are giving about me."^g •Lord,
I answered, it is because they know that I used to go from synagogue to syna-20 gogue, imprisoning and flogging those who believed in you; •and that when the blood of your witness^h Stephen was being shed, I was standing by in full agreement 21 with his murderers, and minding their clothes. •Then he said to me, "Go! I am sending you out to the pagans far away."ⁱ

Paul the Roman citizen

22 So far they had listened to him, but at these words they began to shout, 'Rid 23 the earth of the man! He is not fit to live!' •They were yelling, waving their 24 cloaks and throwing dust into the air, •and so the tribune had him brought into the fortress and ordered him to be examined under the lash, to find out the reason 25 for the outcry against him. •But when they had strapped him down Paul said to the centurion on duty, 'Is it legal for you to flog a man who is a Roman citizen

g. For its observance by others as well as by themselves, cf. 11:2; 15:1,5; Ga 2:12; 5:1f.

h. Paul's doctrine of faith as the one source of justification, cf. Rm 1:16+; 3:22+, did indeed lead to this, since it meant that the Mosaic Law no longer gave the Jew superiority over the gentile. But Paul's purpose in expounding this principle was to leave converts from paganism free of Jewish observance, cf. Ga 2:11f, not to dissuade devout Jews from it.

i. Cf. Rm 2:25-29; 4:9-12; 1 Co 7:17-20.

j. Var. 'What is to be done? They will in any case hear that you have come.'

k. The determination of the nazirite vow had to be celebrated with expensive sacrifices, Nb 6:14-15.

l. Western Text 'Of the pagans who have become believers they have nothing to say to you. For our part, we have sent our decisions, namely that they have no observance to practise but that of abstaining from things sacrificed to idols, from blood, and from fornication.'

m. Text obscure: it seems to presuppose before the nazirite sacrifice a period of seven days devoted to certain rites of purification; there is no other evidence for this practice.

n. Cf. the charges against Stephen, 6:11-14, and against Jesus, Mt 26:61; 27:40.

o. A Roman garrison consisting of an auxiliary cohort was stationed in the Antonia overlooking the Temple area from the N.W. corner.

p. Or 'four thousand Assassins'; the term, sikarioi, strictly means extreme nationalists. This revolt is mentioned by Josephus.

q. I.e. Aramaic: Hebrew was not spoken after the Exile.

22 a. After the three discourses which sum up the preaching of Paul, ch. 13, 17, 20, Ac records three apologies: before the Jewish people in Jerusalem, ch. 22, before the procurator Felix, ch. 24, before King Agrippa, ch. 26; each is cleverly adapted to the audience, cf. 9:1+. Before the people Paul defends his conduct as being that of a devout Jew.

b. The Church, cf. 9:2+. On Paul's career as persecutor, cf. 7:58; 8:1,3; 9:1,21; 22:19-20; 26:11; 1 Co 15:9; Ga 1:13,23; Ph 3:6; 1 Tm 1:13.

c. Paul describes Ananias simply as a pious Jew without adding that he was a Christian, 9:10 or mentioning his vision, 9:10-16.

d. Christ, cf. 3:14; 7:52.

e. Cf. 9:15. Ananias here speaks in the name of 'the God of our ancestors', like an O.T. prophet. Paul is to be a witness 'before all mankind', but the pagans are not explicitly mentioned until v. 21.

f. Paul passes over the three years which elapsed before their return, cf. 9:23+. The trance he speaks of is not mentioned elsewhere; it is not to be confused with that of 2 Co 12:1-4.

g. The narrative of Paul's apostolic work emphasises this, cf. 13:46-48; 18:6; 28:25-28.

h. The Greek word, martyr, had not yet acquired its restricted meaning but was beginning to: the supreme testimony being that of blood. Cf. Rv 2:13; 6:9; 17:6.

i. Since 'apostle' means 'envoy', Christ's words imply that Paul is now an apostle, cf. Ga 1:1; 1 Co 9:1; 2 Co 12:11-12, and, in particular, an apostle of the pagans, Ga 1:16; 2:7-8, though Ac (with the exception of 14:4,14) reserves the term 'apostle' to the Twelve.

and has not been brought to trial?' •When he heard this the centurion went and told the tribune; 'Do you realise what you are doing?' he said 'This man is a Roman citizen'. •So the tribune came and asked him, 'Tell me, are you a Roman citizen?' 'I am' Paul said. •The tribune replied, 'It cost me a large sum to acquire this citizenship'. 'But I was born to it' said Paul. •Then those who were about to examine him hurriedly withdrew, and the tribune himself was alarmed when he realised that he had put a Roman citizen in chains.^f

His appearance before the Sanhedrin^g

The next day, since he wanted to know what precise charge the Jews were bringing, he freed Paul and gave orders for a meeting of the chief priests and the entire Sanhedrin; then he brought Paul down and stood him in front of them.

23 Paul looked steadily at the Sanhedrin and began to speak, 'My brothers, to this day I have conducted myself before God with a perfectly clear conscience'.^a •At this the high priest Ananias^b ordered his attendants to strike him on the mouth. •Then Paul said to him, 'God will surely strike you, you whitewashed wall! How can you sit there to judge me according to the Law, and then break the Law by ordering a man to strike me?' •The attendants said, 'It is God's high priest you are insulting!' •Paul answered, 'Brothers, I did not realise it was the high priest, for scripture says: You must not curse a ruler of your people'.

Now Paul was well aware that one section was made up of Sadducees and the other of Pharisees, so he called out in the Sanhedrin, 'Brothers, I am a Pharisee and the son of Pharisees. It is for our hope in the resurrection of the dead that I am on trial.' •As soon as he said this a dispute broke out between the Pharisees and Sadducees, and the assembly was split between the two parties. •For the Sadducees say there is neither resurrection, nor angel, nor spirit,^c while the Pharisees accept all three. •The shouting grew louder, and some of the scribes from the Pharisees' party stood up and protested strongly, 'We find nothing wrong with this man. Suppose a spirit has spoken to him, or an angel?'^d •Feeling was running high, and the tribune, afraid that they would tear Paul to pieces, ordered his troops to go down and haul him out and bring him into the fortress.

Next night, the Lord appeared to him and said, 'Courage! You have borne witness for me in Jerusalem, now you must do the same in Rome.'

The conspiracy of the Jews against Paul

When it was day, the Jews held a secret meeting at which they made a vow^e not to eat or drink until they had killed Paul. •There were more than forty who took part in this conspiracy, •and they went to the chief priests and elders, and told them, 'We have made a solemn vow to let nothing pass our lips until we have killed Paul. •Now it is up to you and the Sanhedrin together to apply to the tribune to bring him down to you, as though you meant to examine his case more closely; we, on our side, are prepared to dispose of him before he reaches you.'

But the son of Paul's sister heard of the ambush they were laying and made his way into the fortress and told Paul, •who called one of the centurions and said, 'Take this young man to the tribune; he has something to tell him'. •So the man took him to the tribune, and reported, 'The prisoner Paul summoned me and requested me to bring this young man to you; he has something to tell you'. •Then the tribune took him by the hand and drew him aside and asked, 'What is it you have to tell me?' •He replied, 'The Jews have made a plan to ask you to take Paul down to the Sanhedrin tomorrow, as though they meant to inquire more closely into his case. •Do not let them persuade you. There are more than forty of them lying in wait for him, and they have vowed not to eat or drink until they have got rid of him. They are ready now and only waiting for your order to be given.' The tribune let the young man go with this caution, 'Tell no one that you have given me this information'.

Paul transferred to Caesarea

- 23 Then he summoned two of the centurions and said, 'Get two hundred soldiers 24 ready to leave for Caesarea by the third hour of the night with seventy cavalry and 25 two hundred auxiliaries; •provide horses for Paul, and deliver him unharmed 26 to Felix the governor'.^f •He also wrote a letter in these terms: •'Claudius Lysias
27 to his Excellency the governor Felix, greetings. •This man had been seized by the 21:31-33 Jews and would have been murdered by them but I came on the scene with my troops and got him away, having discovered that he was a Roman citizen. 22:25-29 28 Wanting to find out what charge they were making against him, I brought him 29 before their Sanhedrin. •I found that the accusation concerned disputed points of their Law,^g but that there was no charge deserving death or imprisonment.^h 18:15; 25; 30 My information is that there is a conspiracy against the man, so I hasten to send 18-19; 26;
him to you, and have notified his accusers that they must state their case against 31; 28:18
him in your presence.'ⁱ
31 The soldiers carried out their orders; they took Paul and escorted him by night 32 to Antipatris. •Next day they left the mounted escort to go on with him and 33 returned to the fortress. •On arriving at Caesarea the escort delivered the letter 34 to the governor and handed Paul over to him. •The governor read the letter and asked him what province he came from. Learning that he was from Cilicia 35 he said, •'I will hear your case as soon as your accusers are here too'. Then he ordered him to be held in Herod's praetorium.

The case before Felix

- 1 24 Five days later the high priest Ananias came down with some of the elders and an advocate named Tertullus, and they laid information against 2 Paul before the governor. •Paul was called, and Tertullus opened for the prosecution, 'Your Excellency, Felix, the unbroken peace we enjoy and 3 the reforms this nation owes to your foresight •are matters we accept, always 4 and everywhere, with all gratitude. •I do not want to take up too much of your 5 time, but I beg you to give us a brief hearing. •The plain truth is that we find this man a perfect pest; he stirs up trouble among Jews the world over, and is a 16:20; 17:6 6 ringleader of the Nazarene sect.^a •He has even attempted to profane the Temple. Lk 23:2
7 We placed him under arrest, intending to judge him according to our Law,^b •but Mt 2:23+
8 the tribune Lysias intervened and took him out of our hands by force, •ordering 21:28 his accusers to appear before you; if you ask him^c you can find out for yourself 9 the truth of all our accusations against this man.' •The Jews supported him, asserting that these were the facts.
10 When the governor motioned him to speak, Paul answered:^d

j. Nevertheless, Paul is left in chains, v. 30; 23:18; 24:27; 26:29. Possibly a distinction is to be made between the heavy chains, a torture in themselves (of which Paul may have been relieved), and the lighter chains to prevent the prisoner from escaping.

k. As Jesus foretold to his disciples, Mt 10:17-18 = Mk 13:9-10; Lk 21:12. Paul is to appear before 'councils' Ac 22:30-23:10, 'governors' (Felix, ch. 24), 'kings' (Agrippa, ch. 25-26).

23 a. The 'clear conscience' is a feature of Paul's moral teaching: 1 Co 4:4; 2 Co 1:12; 1 Tm 1:5,19; 3:9; 2 Tm 1:3; cf. Heb 13:18.

b. Ananias son of Nedeibaos became high priest in about 47 A.D. He was arrested, sent to Rome and probably deprived of office in 51 or 52, then reinstated; he was assassinated in 66 at the beginning of the Jewish War.

c. The resurrection of the body, cf. 2 M 7:9+, and the doctrine of angels, cf. Tb 5:4+, were not part of Jewish teaching until a comparatively late date. From the text it appears that the Sadducees rejected the latter as well as the former (they certainly denied the doctrine of retribution in the world to come). On both questions Paul and the Pharisees were in agreement, cf. Ac 4:1f+.

d. The conjecture is apparently intended to explain the apparition on the Damascus road.

h. Luke emphasises such statements which attest Paul's innocence, cf. v. 9; 25:18,25; 26:31; 28:18, as he did in the case of Jesus, cf. 3:13; 13:28; Lk 23:14-15,22.

i. Add. 'Farewell'.

24 a. Christianity was, for its opponents, merely a 'sect', cf. 5:17, within Judaism, cf. v. 14; 28:22.

b. The Jews claim that this is their affair. Cf. 25:9; Jn 18:31+. Alex. Text omits 'intending... before you'.

c. 'him' is Lysias in the text adopted here (cf. v. 22), Paul according to the shorter text.

d. Paul denies the charge of inciting to riot (cf. v. 5), vv. 11-13. He then explains how being a 'Nazarene' (cf. v. 5) in no way prevents him being a faithful Jew, vv. 14-16. He goes on to refute the charge of profaning the Temple, vv. 17-19. Finally he reminds them that it had been found impossible to convict him when he appeared before the Sanhedrin, vv. 20-21.

Paul's speech before the Roman governor

I know that you have administered justice over this nation for many years, and I can therefore speak with confidence in my defence. •As you can verify for 11 11:30+; 20:16 yourself, it is no more than twelve days since I went up to Jerusalem on pilgrimage,^e •and it is not true that they ever found me arguing with anyone or 12 stirring up the mob, either in the Temple, in the synagogues, or about the town; neither can they prove any of the accusations they are making against me now. 13 9:2+ 'What I do admit to you is this: it is according to the Way which they describe 14
 25:8+ as a sect that I worship the God of my ancestors, retaining my belief in all points
 Mt 5:17+ of the Law and in what is written in the prophets;^f •and I hold the same hope 15
 Rm 3:31; 10:4 in God as they^g do that there will be a resurrection of good men and bad men
 Jn 5:29+ alike. •In these things, I, as much as they, do my best to keep a clear conscience 16 23:1+6 at all times before God and man.
 21:24 'After several years^h I came to bring alms to my nationⁱ and to make offerings;^j 17
 it was in connection with these that they found me in the Temple; I had been 18 21:27 purified, and there was no crowd involved, and no disturbance. •But some Jews 19 from Asia...—these are the ones who should have appeared before you and accused me of whatever they had against me. •At least let those who are present 20 say what crime they found me guilty of when I stood before the Sanhedrin, •unless 21 4:2; 23:6 it were to do with this single outburst, when I stood up among them and called out: It is about the resurrection of the dead that I am on trial before you today.'^k

Paul's captivity at Caesarea

9:2+ At this, Felix, who knew more about the Way than most people, adjourned 22 the case, saying, 'When Lysias the tribune has come down I will go into your case'. •He then gave orders to the centurion that Paul should be kept under arrest 23
 but free from restriction, and that none of his own people should be prevented from seeing to his needs.^l

Some days later Felix came with his wife Drusilla who was a Jewess.^m He sent 24 for Paul and gave him a hearing on the subject of faith in Christ Jesus. •But when 25 Mk 6:17-20 he began to treat of righteousness, self-control and the coming Judgement, Felix 17:32 took frightⁿ and said, 'You may go for the present; I will send for you when I find it convenient'. •At the same time he had hopes of receiving money from Paul, 26 and for this reason he sent for him frequently and had talks with him.

When the two years^o came to an end, Felix^p was succeeded by Porcius Festus^p 27
 25:9 and, being anxious to gain favour with the Jews, Felix left Paul in custody.^q

Paul appeals to Caesar

25 Three days after his arrival in the province,^a Festus went up to Jerusalem 1 from Caesarea. •The chief priests and leaders of the Jews informed him of 2 23:12-15 the case against Paul,^b urgently •asking him to support them rather than Paul, 3 and to have him transferred to Jerusalem. They were, in fact, preparing an ambush to murder him on the way. •But Festus replied that Paul would remain in custody 4 in Caesarea, and that he would be going back there shortly himself. •'Let your 5 authorities come down with me' he said 'and if there is anything wrong about the man, they can bring a charge against him.'

After staying with them for eight or ten days at the most, he went down to 6
 Caesarea and the next day he took his seat on the tribunal and had Paul brought 7 in. •As soon as Paul appeared, the Jews who had come down from Jerusalem 7 Mt 26:59-61p; 27:12-14p surrounded him, making many serious accusations which they were unable to Lk 23:10 substantiate. •Paul's defence was this, 'I have committed no offence whatever 8 21:28+; 24:14+ against either Jewish law, or the Temple, or Caesar'. •Festus was anxious to gain 9 favour with the Jews, so he said to Paul, 'Are you willing to go up to Jerusalem and be tried on these charges before me there?'^c •But Paul replied, 'I am standing 10 before the tribunal of Caesar and this is where I should be tried. I have done the Jews no wrong, as you very well know. •If I am guilty of committing any capital 11 crime, I do not ask to be spared the death penalty. But if there is no substance in the accusations these persons bring against me, no one has a right to surrender 12 me to them. I appeal to Caesar.'^d • Then Festus conferred with his advisers and 28:19 replied, 'You have appealed to Caesar; to Caesar you shall go'.

Paul appears before King Agrippa

13 Some days later King Agrippa and Bernice^e arrived in Caesarea and paid 14 their respects to Festus. • Their visit lasted several days, and Festus put Paul's case before the king. 'There is a man here' he said 'whom Felix left behind in 15 custody, •and while I was in Jerusalem the chief priests and elders of the Jews 16 laid information against him, demanding his condemnation. •But I told them that Romans are not in the habit of surrendering any man, until the accused confronts his accusers and is given an opportunity to defend himself against the 17 charge. •So they came here with me, and I wasted no time but took my seat on 18 the tribunal the very next day and had the man brought in. •When confronted with him, his accusers did not charge him with any of the crimes I had expected; 19 but they had some argument or other with him about their own religion and about 18:15; 23:29
 20 a dead man called Jesus whom Paul alleged to be alive. •Not feeling qualified 23:6; 26:6f
 1 Co 15:4
 to deal with questions of this sort, I asked him if he would be willing to go to 21 Jerusalem to be tried there on this issue. •But Paul put in an appeal for his case to be reserved for the judgement of the august emperor,^f so I ordered him to be 22 remanded until I could send him to Caesar.' •Agrippa said to Festus, 'I should like to hear the man myself'.^g 'Tomorrow' he answered 'you shall hear him.' 23 So the next day Agrippa and Bernice arrived in great state and entered the audience chamber attended by the tribunes and the city notables; and Festus 24 ordered Paul to be brought in. •Then Festus said, 'King Agrippa, and all here present with us, you see before you the man about whom the whole Jewish community has petitioned me, both in Jerusalem and here, loudly protesting 25 that he ought not to be allowed to remain alive. •For my own part I am satisfied that he has committed no capital crime, but when he himself appealed to the 26 august emperor I decided to send him. •But I have nothing definite that I can write to his Imperial Majesty^h about him; that is why I have produced him before
 22:22

f. Christianity is not a different religion, it is Judaism with its ancient hope fulfilled. If the Jews reject Christ, they reject their own religious tradition. This would mean that, since sentence had not meanwhile been pronounced, Paul must have been set free when the period expired. This is probably what happened in Rome, cf. 28:30. By 'detaining Paul, Felix was breaking the law.

d. Since Festus has disclaimed jurisdiction, Paul cannot escape trial before the Sanhedrin except by claiming the Roman citizen's privilege of trial before the imperial tribunal.

e. Agrippa, Bernice and Drusilla (cf. 24:24) were children of Herod Agrippa I, cf. 12:1+. The eldest, later Agrippa II, was born in 27. 26 Then Agrippa said to Paul, 'You have leave to speak on your own behalf'. 1 And Paul held up his hand and began his defence:

Paul's speech before King Agrippa^a

'I consider myself fortunate, King Agrippa, in that it is before you I am to 2 answer today all the charges made against me by the Jews, •the more so because^b 3 you are an expert in matters of custom and controversy among the Jews. So I beg you to listen to me patiently.

22:3+ Ga 1:14 'My manner of life from my youth, a life spent from the beginning among 4 my own people and in Jerusalem, is common knowledge among the Jews. •They 5 have known me for a long time and could testify, if they would, that I followed the strictest party in our religion and lived as a Pharisee. •And now it is for my 6 hope in the promise made by God to our ancestors that I am on trial, •the promise 7 that our twelve tribes, constant in worship night and day, hope to attain.^c For that hope, Sire, I am actually put on trial by Jews! •Why does it seem incredible 8 to you that God should raise the dead?^d

It shone brilliantly round me and my fellow travellers. •We all fell to the ground, 14 and I heard a voice saying to me in Hebrew, "Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting me? It is hard for you, kicking like this against the goad."^e •Then I said: Who 15 are you, Lord? And the Lord answered, "I am Jesus, and you are persecuting me. •But get up and stand on your feet, for I have appeared to you for this 16 reason: to appoint you as my servant and as witness of this vision in which you have seen me, and of others in which I shall appear to you. •I shall deliver you 17 from the people and from the pagans, to whom I am sending you •to open their 18 eyes, so that they may turn from darkness to light,^f from the dominion of Satan to God, and receive, through faith in me, forgiveness of their sins^g and a share in the inheritance of the sanctified."

But I was blessed with God's help, and so I have stood firm to this day, testifying 22 to great and small alike, saying nothing more than what the prophets and Moses himself said would happen: •that the Christ was to suffer and that, as the first 23 to rise from the dead, he was to proclaim that light now shone for our people and 24 for the pagans too.'

His hearers' reactions

He had reached this point in his defence when Festus shouted out, 'Paul, you 24 are out of your mind; all that learning of yours is driving you mad'.^h •'Festus, 25 your Excellency,' answered Paul 'I am not mad: I am speaking nothing but the sober truth. •The king understands these matters, and to him I now speak with 26

The departure for Rome

1 27 When it had been decided that we^a should sail for Italy, Paul and some other prisoners were handed over to a centurion called Julius, of the 2 Augustan cohort. •We boarded a vessel from Adramyttium bound for ports on the 19:29+ Asiatic coast, and put to sea; we had Aristarchus with us, a Macedonian of 3 Thessalonika. •Next day we put in at Sidon, and Julius was considerate enough to allow Paul to go to his friends to be looked after.

4 From there we put to sea again, but as the winds were against us we sailed
 5 under the lee of Cyprus, •then across the open sea off Cilicia and Pamphylia, 6 taking a fortnight^b to reach Myra in Lycia. •There the centurion found an Alexandrian ship leaving for Italy and put us aboard.

7 For some days we made little headway, and we had difficulty in making Cnidus. The wind would not allow us to touch there, so we sailed under the lee 8 of Crete off Cape Salmone •and struggled along the coast until we came to a place called Fair Havens, near the town of Lasea.

Storm and shipwreck

9 A great deal of time had been lost, and navigation was already hazardous since it was now well after the time of the Fast,^c so Paul gave them this warning, 10 'Friends, I can see this voyage will be dangerous and that we run the risk of losing 11 not only the cargo and the ship but also our lives as well'. •But the centurion took more notice of the captain and the ship's owner than of what Paul was 12 saying; •and since the harbour was unsuitable for wintering, the majority were for putting out from there in the hope of wintering at Phoenix—a harbour in Crete, facing south-west and north-west.

 14 they weighed anchor and began to sail past Crete, close inshore. •But it was not

Paul then describes the circumstances of his conversion, vv. 9-18; cf. 9:1-18; 22:3-16, and ends with a summary of his preaching which presents the Christian faith simply as the fulfilment of the scriptures, vv. 19-23; cf. 13:15-41. Behind the immediate quarrel lay the whole question of the relationship of Christianity to Judaism, cf. 24:14+.

j. The word is still a nickname, cf. 11:26⁺. Var. 'In a little while you will persuade me to become a Christian!' or, 'In a little while you will persuade yourself you have made me a Christian!'

k. A play on Agrippa's phrase.

27 a. Luke reappears on the scene. The precision of the narrative suggests a carefully kept diary.

b. Lit. 'for fifteen days', Western Text.

c. Another name for the feast of Atonement, the only fast-day prescribed by the Law, Lv 16:29-31. It was celebrated about the time of the autumn equinox.

long before a hurricane, the 'north-easter' as they call it, burst on them from across the island. •The ship was caught and could not be turned head-on to the wind, so we had to give way to it and let ourselves be driven. •We ran under the lee of a small island called Cauda and managed with some difficulty to bring the ship's boat under control. •They hoisted it aboard and with the help of tackle bound cables round the ship; then, afraid of running aground on the Syrtis banks, they floated out the sea-anchor and so let themselves drift. •As we were making very heavy weather of it, the next day they began to jettison the cargo, •and the third day they threw the ship's gear overboard with their own hands. •For a number of days both the sun and the stars were invisible and the storm raged unabated until at last we gave up all hope of surviving.

Then, when they had been without food for a long time,^d Paul stood up among the men. 'Friends,' he said 'if you had listened to me and not put out from Crete, you would have spared yourselves all this damage and loss. •But now I ask you not to give way to despair. There will be no loss of life at all, only of the ship. Last night there was standing beside me an angel of the God to whom I belong and whom I serve, •and he said, "Do not be afraid, Paul. You are destined to appear before Caesar,"^e and for this reason God grants you the safety of all who are sailing with you." •So take courage, friends; I trust in God that things will turn out just as I was told; •but we are to be stranded on some island.'

On the fourteenth night we were being driven one way and another in the Adriatic,^f when about midnight the crew sensed that land of some sort was near. They took soundings and found twenty fathoms; after a short interval they sounded again and found fifteen fathoms. •Then, afraid that we might run aground somewhere on a reef, they dropped four anchors from the stern and prayed for daylight. •When some of the crew tried to escape from the ship and lowered the ship's boat into the sea as though to lay out anchors from the bows, Paul said to the centurion and his men, 'Unless those men stay on board you cannot hope to be saved'. •So the soldiers cut the boat's ropes and let it drop away.

Just before daybreak Paul urged them all to have something to eat. 'For fourteen days' he said 'you have been in suspense, going hungry and eating nothing. •Let me persuade you to have something to eat; your safety is not in doubt. Not a hair of your heads will be lost.' •With these words he took some bread, gave thanks to God in front of them all, broke it and began to eat.^g •Then they all plucked up courage and took something to eat themselves. •We were in all two hundred and seventy-six souls on board that ship. •When they had eaten what they wanted they lightened the ship by throwing the corn overboard into the sea.

When day came they did not recognise the land, but they could make out a kind of bay with a beach; they planned to run the ship aground on this if they could. •They slipped the anchors and left them to the sea, and at the same time loosened the lashings of the rudders; then, hoisting the foresail to the wind, they headed for the beach. •But the cross-currents carried them into a shoal and the vessel ran aground. The bows were wedged in and stuck fast, while the stern began to break up with the pounding of the waves.

The soldiers planned to kill the prisoners for fear that any should swim off and escape. •But the centurion was determined to bring Paul safely through, and would not let them do what they intended. He gave orders that those who could swim should jump overboard first and so get ashore, •and the rest follow either on planks or on pieces of wreckage. In this way all came safe and sound to land.

Waiting in Malta

28 Once we had come safely through, we discovered that the island was called Malta. •The inhabitants treated us with unusual kindness. They made us all welcome, and they lit a huge fire because it had started to rain and

- 3 the weather was cold. •Paul had collected a bundle of sticks and was putting them on the fire when a viper brought out by the heat attached itself to his hand.
 4 When the natives saw the creature hanging from his hand they said to one another, 'That man must be a murderer; he may have escaped the sea, but divine
 5 vengeance^a would not let him live'. •However, he shook the creature off into the Mk 16:18
 6 fire and came to no harm, •although they were expecting him at any moment Lk 10:19 to swell up or drop dead on the spot. After they had waited a long time without seeing anything out of the ordinary happen to him, they changed their minds 14:11 and began to say he was a god.
 7 In that neighbourhood there were estates belonging to the prefect of the island, whose name was Publius. He received us and entertained us hospitably
 8 for three days. •It so happened that Publius' father was in bed, suffering from feverish attacks and dysentery. Paul went in to see him, and after a prayer he laid Lk 10:9p
 9 his hands on the man and healed him. •When this happened, the other sick 9:12 10 people on the island came as well and were cured; •they honoured us with many 5:15-16; marks of respect, and when we sailed they put on board the provisions we 8:7-8 needed. Lk 4:40
 1 Tm 4:14+

From Malta to Rome

- 11 At the end of three months we set sail in a ship that had wintered in the 12 island; she came from Alexandria and her figurehead was the Twins. •We put in 13 at Syracuse and spent three days there; •from there we followed the coast up to Rhegium. After one day there a south wind sprang up and on the second day we 14 made Puteoli,^b •where we found some brothers and were much rewarded by staying a week with them. And so we came to Rome.
 15 When the brothers there heard of our arrival they came to meet us, as far as the Forum of Appius and the Three Taverns. When Paul saw them he thanked 16 God and took courage. •On our arrival in Rome Paul was allowed to stay in lodgings of his own with the soldier who guarded him.^c

Paul makes contact with the Roman Jews^d

- 17 After three days he called together the leading Jews. When they had assembled, he said to them, 'Brothers, although I have done nothing against our people or the customs of our ancestors, I was arrested in Jerusalem and handed over to the Romans. •They examined me and would have set me free, since they found 18 me guilty of nothing involving the death penalty; •but the Jews lodged an objection, and I was forced to appeal to Caesar, not that I had any accusation to make 19 against my own nation.^e •That is why I have asked to see you and talk to you, for it is on account of the hope of Israel that I wear this chain.'
 20 They answered,^f 'We have received no letters from Judaea about you, nor has any countryman of yours arrived here with any report or story of anything to 21 your discredit. •We think it would be as well to hear your own account of your position; all we know about this sect is that opinion everywhere con-22 demns it.'

d. Paul's second speech (vv. 33f) would follow naturally on this observation. This first speech (vv. 21-26) seems to have been rather clumsily introduced into this context and to be partly a repetition of the second.

e. Not before Nero in person but before his tribunal.

f. The name was used for all that part of the Mediterranean between Greece, Italy and Africa.

g. Western Text add. 'giving it to us also'. All Jews pronounced a blessing when about to eat; nevertheless, the terms Luke uses seem to suggest the Eucharist, cf. 2:42+.

already a Christian colony in this busy port.

c. Western Text (adopted by the Antiochene recension) '... Rome, the centurion handed the prisoners over to the commander. But Paul was allowed to live outside the (Praetorian) camp.' This additional information agrees with what in fact must have happened. By the concession of custodia militaris the prisoner had his own lodgings, but his right arm was chained to the left of the soldier in charge.

d. Paul wants to establish good relations with the Jews of Rome as soon as possible. He gives a brief account of his trial, and for the last time protests his loyalty to Judaism.

e. Western Text add. 'but merely wished to escape death'.

f. The reply is cautious.

28 a. Lit. 'justice', diké, the divine justice personified.

b. Pozzuoli on the Gulf of Naples. There was

Paul's declaration to the Roman Jews^g

So they arranged a day with him and a large number of them visited him at his lodgings. He put his case to them, testifying to the kingdom of God and trying to persuade them about Jesus, arguing from the Law of Moses and the prophets. This went on from early morning until evening, and some were convinced by what he said, while the rest were sceptical. So they disagreed among themselves and, as they went away, Paul had one last thing to say to them,^h 'How aptly the Holy Spirit spoke when he told your ancestors through the prophet Isaiah:

Mt 13:14

Go to this nation and say:

*You will hear and hear again but not understand,
see and see again, but not perceive.*

*For the heart of this nation has grown coarse, their ears are dull of hearing and they have shut their eyes,
for fear they should see with their eyes,
hear with their ears,
understand with their heart,
and be converted
and be healed by me.*

18:6 'Understand, then, that this salvation of God has been sent to the pagans; they will listen to it.'ⁱ

Epilogue^j

Paul spent the whole of the two years^k in his own rented lodging. He welcomed all who came to visit him, proclaiming the kingdom of God and teaching the truth about the Lord Jesus Christ with complete freedom and without hindrance from anyone.^l

28 g. In Rome also Paul preaches the gospel first to the Jews, cf. 13:5+. The summary of this preaching should be compared with the opening discourse in Pisidian Antioch, 13:15-41.

h. Paul's words are reminiscent of those following his discourse at Antioch, 13:46-47. They constitute the finale of Ac, and sound its dominant note, cf. 13:41+. They recall the vision of the future offered by Jesus at the end of his discourse in Nazareth, Lk 4:23-27, and in his last words to the apostles, Lk 24:47. The text from Is, 6:9-10 (LXX), is also used in Mt 13:14-15 (cf. Mk 4:12p) and, in part, in Jn 12:40. Both theme and text are commonplace of early Christianity.

i. The Western Text (followed by the Antiochene recension) adds v. 29 'And when he had said this, the Jews left, arguing hotly between themselves'.

j. Thus Paul arrived in Rome, which brings one period of evangelisation to a close, cf. Lk 24:47; Ac 1:8+, and is presented as the starting-point for a further advance of Christianity. Before Luke had finished his gospel he had opened up wide horizons to the apostolic mission; his Book of Acts ends with the same prospect for the future.

k. The same technical term as in 24:27. Paul, therefore, has been under the custodia militaris for the legal period during which his case should have been tried. This suggests that the trial did not in fact take place, probably because there was no one to accuse him. The legal period over, Paul must have been released; Phm 22 looks forward to his approaching liberation. During these two years Paul wrote his letters to the Colossians and to the Ephesians as well as his note to Philemon.

l. Western Text add. 'saying that this is he, Jesus, the son of God, by whom the whole world is destined to be judged', cf. 17:31. On Paul's ministry after his discharge, his second imprisonment, and his death, see the Introduction to the Letters of St Paul.

THE LETTERS OF SAINT PAUL

INTRODUCTION TO THE LETTERS OF SAINT PAUL

CHRONOLOGY

Through the Acts of the Apostles and through his own letters Saint Paul is more familiar to us than any other figure of the New Testament. These two mutually independent sources confirm and complement each other in spite of certain discrepancies of detail. We are also able to construct a fairly exact chronology of Paul's life from references to dated events such as Gallio's proconsulate in Corinth, Ac 18:12, and the year Festus succeeded Felix, Ac 24:27-25:1.

Paul, born at Tarsus in Cilicia, Ac 9:11; 21:39; 22:3, about 10 A.D. of a Jewish family of the tribe of Benjamin, Rm 11-1; Ph 3:5, was a Roman citizen, Ac 16:37f; 22:25-28; 23:27. As a young man he was educated in Jerusalem by Gamaliel who gave him a thorough grounding in religious doctrine of the school of the Pharisees. He became a bitter persecutor of the infant Church, Ac 22:4f; 26:9-12; Ga 1:13; Ph 3:6, and played some part in Stephen's martyrdom, Ac 7:58; 22:20; 26:10; but on the road to Damascus, c. 34 A.D., a vision of the risen Jesus changed his whole life. The risen Lord opened his mind to the truth of the Christian faith and revealed that he had chosen him to be the apostle of the pagans, Ac 9:3-16p; Ga 1:12, 15f; Ep 3:2f. From then on, Paul dedicated his life to serving Christ who had personally chosen him as his follower, Ph 3:12. After spending some time in Arabia he returned to Damascus, Ga 1:17, and began his preaching there, Ac 9:20. In about 39 A.D. after a brief visit to Jerusalem, Ga 1:18; Ac 9:26-29, Paul went to Syria and Cilicia, Ga 1:21; Ac 9:30, till Barnabas fetched him back to Antioch where they preached together, Ac 11:25f and cf. 9:27. During Paul's first missionary journey (45-49) to Cyprus, Pamphilia, Pisidia and Lycaonia, Ac 13-14, he started using his Greek name Paul instead of his Jewish name Saul, Ac 13:9, and, because he preached better, started to become more famous than Barnabas, Ac 14:12. In 49 A.D., fourteen years after his conversion, Ga 2:1, he went to Jerusalem to take part in the apostles' council, and it was partly through his influence that the council agreed that the Jewish Law was not binding on Christian converts from paganism, Ac 15; Ga 2:3-6. His mission as apostle to the pagans was formally sanctioned, Ga 2:7-9, and he set out once more. The dates of his second (50-52; Ac 15:36-18:22) and third missionary journeys (53-58; Ac 18:23-21:17) are discussed later under the letters he wrote at intervals during those journeys. In 58, Paul was arrested in Jerusalem, Ac 21:27-23:22, and imprisoned at Caesarea Palestinae until 60 A.D., Ac 23:23-26:32. In the autumn of 60, Festus the procurator sent him to Rome under escort, Ac 27:1-28:16, where, after the statutory two years (61-63), Ac 28:30, Paul's case was dismissed for want of evidence and he was set free. It is possible that he went to Spain, as he had hoped to do, Rm 15:24,28; but the pastoral letters suggest that he travelled again in the east. A subsequent imprisonment in Rome ended, according to a very ancient tradition, in martyrdom, probably in the year 67.

THE CHARACTER OF PAUL

As well as this chronology, it is possible to recover quite a detailed portrait of Paul from his letters and from Acts.

He was a person of great dedication, capable of pursuing an ideal with a complete disregard for the cost. For him, the only thing that mattered was God, and as God's servant, Paul refused any sort of compromise. It was with equally single-minded determination that he had persecuted those he considered God's enemies, 1 Tm 1:13, cf. Ac 24:5, 14, and later preached Christ as the one, universal saviour. This saviour he served passionately and selflessly for the rest of his life. He knew what work he had been given to do, 1 Co 9:16, and he let nothing stop him doing it: hard work, exhaustion, suffering, poverty, danger of death, 1 Co 4:9-13; 2 Co 4:8f; 6:4-10; 11:23-27. Far from letting these things weaken his love for God or Christ, Rm 8:35-39, he welcomed them, since they helped him to grow into the image of his suffering and crucified Master, 2 Co 4:10f; Ph 3:10f. The knowledge that his vocation was unique gave him an enormous ambition, but it did not make him arrogant. It was with holy humility that Paul felt a personal pride in being responsible for so many churches, 2 Co 11:28, cf. Col 1:24, and claimed to have done more missionary work than others, 1 Co 15:10, cf. 2 Co 11:5, and offered himself as a model to his converts, 2 Th 3:7 +. He never forgot that having persecuted the Church of Christ, he was the unworthiest of all the apostles. All the great things he succeeded in doing he attributed to God's grace working through him, 1 Co 15:10; 2 Co 4:7; Ph 4:13; Col 1:29; Ep 3:7.

Paul had a sensitive temperament that showed itself in his attitude to those he had converted. He had a childlike trust in the converts at Philippi, Ph 1:7f; 4:10-20, a deep affection for those at Ephesus, Ac 20:17-38; he was furious with those in Galatia who were on the verge of apostasy, Ga 1:6; 3:1-3, and deeply upset when he thought that the Christians in Corinth had become vain and unstable, 2 Co 12:11-13:10. When he was being ironical with people he considered superficial, 1 Co 4:8; 2 Co 11:7; 12:13, or when he was outspoken, Ga 3:1-3; 4:11; 1 Co 3:1-3; 5:1-2; 6:5; 11:17-22; 2 Co 11:3f, it was only for their own good, 2 Co 7:8-13, and after these outbursts he soon became tender, 2 Co 11:1-2; 12:14f, and fatherly, 1 Co 4:14f; 2 Co 6:13, cf. 1 Th 2:11; Phm 10, even motherly, 1 Th 2:7; Ga 4:19, and anxious to restore the earlier affection, Ga 4:12-20; 2 Co 7:11-13.

Paul's fiercest outbursts of indignation were directed against everybody who tried to seduce his converts, whether they were Jews, who opposed him wherever he went, Ac 13:45,50; 14:2,19; 17:5,13; 18:6; 19:9; 21:27, or Judaising Christians who wanted all followers of Christ to follow the Law, Ga 1:7; 2:4; 6:12f. He never minced his words with either of these groups, 1 Th 2:15f; Ga 5:12; Ph 3:2, and, however unprepossessing, he felt himself to be an irresistible weapon wielded by divine power against ambitious, arrogant and unspiritual opponents, 2 Co 10:1-12:12. God's weapon was Paul's selfless sincerity, Ac 18:3+. It has been suggested that the people against whom he inveighs were in fact the senior apostles in Jerusalem, but this is impossible. Some of the Judaeo-Christians, who remained faithful to the Law, invoked Peter, 1 Co 1:12, and James, Ga 2:12, in an attempt to discredit Paul, but Paul always respected the authority of these apostles, Ga 1:18; 2:2, though he claimed to be just as much a witness to Christ as they were, Ga 1:11f; 1 Co 9:1; 15:8-11. Even when Paul had his disagreement with Peter, Ga 2:11-14, his attitude was conciliatory, Ac 21:18-26, and he organised a collection for the poor Christians of Jerusalem, Ga 2:10, since he considered this would be the best possible proof that his pagan converts were truly one with the Christians of the mother church, 2 Co 8:14; 9:12-13; Rm 15:26f.

PAUL AS PREACHER

What Paul proclaimed was in all essentials the apostolic 'kerygma', Ac 2:22+, i.e. that Christ had been crucified and had risen from the dead and that this had been foretold in the scriptures, 1 Co 2:2; 15:3-4; Ga 3:1. What he calls 'his' Good News, Rm 2:16; 16:25, was identical with the faith commonly held, Ga 1:6-9; 2:2; Col 1:5-7, but emphasised the conversion of pagans, Ga 1:16; 2:7-9, in line with the missionary policy initiated at Antioch. Paul accepts and sometimes appeals to the apostolic tradition, 1 Co 11:23; 15:3-7, to which he was deeply indebted. Though he probably never met Jesus during his earthly life, cf. 2 Co 5:16+, Paul was familiar with his teaching, 1 Th 4:15; 1 Co 7:10f; Ac 20:35, and confidently claimed to have seen the risen Christ, not only on the Damascus road, Ac 9:17; 22:14f; 26:16; 1 Co 9:1; 15:8, but on several occasions subsequently, Ac 22:17-21; 26:16. He also had revelations and ecstasies, 2 Co 12:1-4, but everything he had received from apostolic tradition he could also attribute, and justly, to direct communication from the Lord, Ga 1:12; 1 Co 11:23.

These mystical experiences have sometimes been attributed to Paul's excitable and morbid temperament, yet this is hardly likely. The disease that detained him in Galatia, Ga 4:13-15, was probably an attack of malaria, and the 'thorn in my side', 2 Co 12:7, may well be the persistent hostility of Jews, his brothers 'according to the flesh', Rm 9:3. Paul does not seem to have had a very vivid imagination judging by his sparing and pedestrian use of imagery: the sports-ground, 1 Co 9:24-27; Ph 3:12-14; 2 Tm 4:7f, and the sea, Ep 4:14. Two images, farming, 1 Co 3:6-8, and building, 1 Co 3:10-17; Rm 15:20; Ep 2:20-22, are so basic that he often mixes them, 1 Co 3:9; Col 2:7; Ep 3:17, cf. Col 2:19; Ep 4:16. His genius was much more intellectual than imaginative, his enthusiasm was never divorced from the rigid logic with which he explains his teaching and adapts it to the needs of his audience. It is to this intellectual need to adapt his teaching to the occasion that we owe the remarkable theological analysis to which he repeatedly submits the kerygma. His logic, which is based on the rabbinical method in which he had been trained, may seem strange to some people today (e.g. Ga 3:16; 4:21-31). His genius, however, was never restricted by these scholastic conventions, so that however unattractive some people may find the method, it does not obscure the profundity of his teaching.

Paul was a Jew with a Greek cultural background which he had possibly begun to acquire when a boy in Tarsus and which was certainly reinforced by repeated contact with the Graeco-Roman world; this influence is obvious not only in his logical method but also in his language and style. He sometimes quotes Greek writers, 1 Co 15:33; Tt 1:12; Ac 17:28, and was familiar with popular Stoic-based philosophy from which he borrows concepts (e.g. of the soul separated from the body and bound for another world, 2 Co 5:6-8; the cosmic pleroma in Col and Ep) and clichés (1 Co 8:6; Rm 11:36; Ep 4:6). From the Cynics and Stoics he borrowed the rapid question and answer method (the diatribe), Rm 3:1-9, 27-31, and the rhetorical device of heaping word on word, 2 Co 6:4-10. Even his use of long, packed phrases in wave after wave, Ep 1:3-14; Col 1:9-20, has a precedent in hellenistic religious literature. The Greek that was a second mother tongue to Paul (cf. Ac 21:40), that he was able to use so familiarly with only occasional semitisms, was a cultured form of the koiné, i.e. the Greek of his own day. Paul never attempted Attic elegance, and he deliberately avoided rhetoric so that his audience would be convinced not by the form but by the content of his message of faith and by the signs the Spirit had promised to provide to confirm it, 1 Th 1:5; 1 Co 2:4f; 2 Co 11:6; Rm 15:18. This is one reason why his grammar is sometimes wrong and his sentences unfinished, 1 Co 9:15; another is that he sometimes thought too fast or too emotionally; a third is that with rare exceptions, Phm 19, he normally dictated his letters, Rm 16:22, (a common practice at the time) and only wrote the final greeting by way of signature, 2 Th 3:17; Ga 6:11; 1 Co 16:21; Col 4:18. Some passages in his letters were obviously written only after long and careful thought, e.g. Col 1:15-20, but mostly his letters suggest spontaneity and lack of revision, and this is why Paul's sentences sound dynamic, and why he seems to pack so much into them. He is not easy to read, 2 P 3:16; profound thoughts expressed by an urgent writer never are; however, some passages have an extraordinary religious and literary power.

It is important to remember that Paul's letters were not meant as theological treatises: they are simply his response to a particular situation in a particular church. They begin according to the usual epistolary convention, Rm 1:1+, but cannot be classed either as private letters, or as literary 'epistles'; they are Pauline dissertations intended for a specific circle of readers and, in a general way, for all the faithful. Paul's letters do not give any systematic and exhaustive exposition of his teaching, they are all commentaries on certain points of sermons that he preached, and the existence of these sermons must always be remembered by the reader. This does not detract from their value: the depth and range of his letters give us all the essentials of Paul's message. No matter what the reason was for writing or who the people were to whom he was writing, his basic teaching remained the same: that Christ died and rose from the dead. The apostle who was all things to all men, 1 Co 9:19-22, adapts this, his one basic doctrine, to the listener; he develops and enriches it. Paul has sometimes been accused of being an eclectic, in the sense of adopting not only different but contradictory opinions according to the circumstances in which he found himself, of being interested less in truth than in persuading people to believe in Christ. He has also been accused of not having an open mind, of being obsessed by the vision that converted him, and of never having allowed his ideas to develop. The truth between these two extremes seems to be that Paul's theology does remain homogeneous but that it did develop under the guidance of the Spirit, who inspired everything he did as an apostle, and that Pauline thought reached its highest development in the letter to the Christians at Ephesus. To show this development of Paul's thought, his letters have to be read in the same order in which they were written; the order, however, in which they are printed here is the traditional one that arranges them in order of diminishing length.

PAUL'S JOURNEYS AND LETTERS

1 and 2 Thessalonians. 50-51 A.D.

The first letters to be written were to the converts Paul had made in Thessalonika in the summer of 50 A.D. during his second missionary journey, Ac 17:1-10. As a result of the hostility of some Jews he went on to Berea, and from there to Athens and Corinth where, it seems, he wrote 1 Th during the winter of 50-51. When he wrote this letter, his companions were Silas and Timothy. Timothy had paid a second visit to Thessalonika, and brought back the good news of their faith under persecution, hence the affectionate tone of the opening chapters, 1-3; these are followed by a series of practical recommendations, 4:1-12; 5:12-28, interrupted by an opportune instruction on the destiny of the dead and on Christ's parousia, 4:13-5:11. 2 Th was probably written at Corinth a few months later, making further practical recommendations, 1; 2:13-3:15, and offering fresh instruction on the time of the parousia and the signs that were to come before it, 2:1-12.

The literary resemblance between 1 and 2 Th is so close that some critics consider 2 Th a forgery made by one who had absorbed Paul's ideas and style, but it is hard to explain why this should have been done; a more obvious explanation is that when, about a year later, Paul had deepened his eschatological thought, he wrote this second letter but repeated various expressions from the first. The two are not contradictory but complementary and the earliest authorities believed that they were both written by Paul.

These two letters are particularly important because of their eschatological teaching, but they also introduce many points elaborated in subsequent letters. At this earlier stage, Paul's ideas were structured around the question of how the resurrection and parousia of Christ can bring salvation to his followers whether alive or dead, 1 Th 4:13-18. Paul described this parousia in the traditional terms of Jewish and the earliest Christian apocalyptic literature (i.e. the 'eschatological discourse' of the Synoptics, and particularly of Mt). Like Jesus himself he sometimes so emphasised, 1 Th 5:1-11, the unpredictable imminence of the Coming and the necessity for vigilance, as to give the impression that he and his readers would live to see it, 1 Th 4:17; but in 2 Th 2:1-12 he tried to allay the anxiety naturally aroused and reminded his readers that the day could not come till certain signs had preceded it. What these signs were to be is not as clear to us as it must have been to the first readers. Paul seems to consider the 'Adversary' to be an individual person who had to wait till the end of the age before he could appear; some writers consider that by the phrase 'that which at present holds him back', 2 Th 2:6, Paul meant the Roman empire, others that he meant the preaching of the gospel; no conclusion has been reached.

1 and 2 Corinthians. 57 A.D.

Paul wrote the letters to Thessalonika during the eighteen months he spent evangelising Corinth, Ac 18:1-15, from the end of 50 to the middle of 52 A.D. His policy was always to establish the Christian faith in a centre of population, and here he chose the great and populous port of Corinth, so that it could spread from there into the whole of Achaia, 2 Co 1:1; 9:2. The Christian community he established grew strong, and was composed mostly of poor people, 1 Co 1:26-28, but Corinth was not only a great centre of hellenism and a magnet to every sort of philosophy and religion, it was also a notorious centre of immorality; it was a milieu that could only create awkward problems for those newly converted to a faith that had only recently been introduced. It was to the solution of these problems that Paul addressed himself when he wrote his two letters to the Christians of Corinth.

How these two letters came to be written now seems clear enough, though some details are still disputed. There had been an earlier letter than these two canonical ones, 1 Co 5:9-13, but the date at which this first letter was written is unknown and it has not survived. Before the end of the two-and-a-half years he spent at Ephesus (54-57) on his third missionary journey, Ac 19:1-20:1, a Corinthian delegation arrived to ask Paul certain questions, 1 Co 16:17; and as he had also received news of Corinth from Apollos, Ac 18:27f; 1 Co 16:12, and from Chloe's household, 1 Co 1:11, he felt obliged to write a second letter. This is 1 Co, and it was written sometime near Easter, 57 (1 Co 5:7f; 16:5-9; compare Ac 19:21). Shortly afterwards, some sort of crisis developed in Corinth and Paul was forced to pay a brief and painful visit, 2 Co 1:23-2:1; 12:14; 13:1-2; while there he promised another and a longer visit, 2 Co 1:15-16, which never in fact took place. Instead, Paul sent a representative to whom he delegated his authority : all that happened was that a second crisis developed; Paul's authority, committed to this delegate, had been flouted, 2 Co 2:5-10; 7:12. Paul still did not pay the promised visit, but sent a severe letter written 'with many tears', 2 Co 2:3f, 9; this third letter had the desired effect, 2 Co 7:8-13. This good news that he heard from Titus only reached Paul after he had gone to Macedonia, 2 Co 2:12f; 7:5-16, after leaving Ephesus as a result of serious disturbances of which we know little, 1 Co 15:32; 2 Co 1:8-10; Ac 19:23-40. At this stage, towards the end of 57, he wrote 2 Co. He must subsequently have travelled via Corinth, Ac 20:1f, cf. 2 Co 9:5; 12:14; 13:1,10, to Jerusalem where he was arrested at Whitsun.

It has been suggested that 2 Co 6:14-7:1 is a fragment of the lost first letter, and 2 Co 10-13 part of the letter written 'in tears'. It would be hard to prove that they were parts of these two particular letters, but it is quite certain that these two sections are not in their original contexts. The first section reads like an insertion, 2 Co 7:2 follows naturally on 6:13, and the whole insertion, 6:14-7:1, has remarkable affinity with some of the Essene literature discovered at Qumran. The vehemence of the second section, 2 Co 10-13, is certainly not in place after the friendly tone of the first nine chapters. To these two dislocations should be added the fact that 9:1 does not make sense after what has been said in ch. 8 about the collection, and is probably part of a completely different note on the subject. These are probably fragments of things Paul wrote on different occasions, that were later put in their present place as part of the process of preserving a collection of the apostle's writings.

In these letters to Corinth, even the details about Paul and the way he treated his converts are important doctrinally. 1 Co in particular contains a great deal of information about urgent problems that faced the church and about the decisions made to meet them : internally there were questions of moral conduct, 1 Co 5:1-13, 6:12-20, of marriage and virginity, 7:1-40, of liturgical and eucharistic meetings, of the charismata, 12:1-14:40; externally, questions of appeals to civil courts, 6:1-11, and eating foods sacrificed to idols, ch. 8-10. It was Paul's religious genius to turn what might have remained cases of conscience or liturgical instruction into a vehicle for the profound doctrine of Christian liberty, the sanctification of the body, the supremacy of love, union with Christ. When forced to defend his apostolate, 2 Co 10-13, he does so in a style of immense power, 2 Co 1:12-6:10; and when he brings up the business of collecting money, 2 Co 8-9, he discusses the collection in the light of the ideal of union between the churches. The eschatological basis of his doctrine is always present in Paul's mind, and provides the perspective in which he explains the resurrection of the body, 1 Co 15; here, however, the apocalyptic imagery of 1 and 2 Th gives place to a philosophical method of justifying a doctrine that the Greek mind found so unsympathetic. As Paul penetrates this new Greek environment, he tries to adapt the Good News he proclaims, and this he does with particular skill when presenting the folly of the cross to Greek wisdom. The apostle's converts at Corinth had split into factions, each proud of its own leader and boasting about his talents; Paul reminded them that there is only one master, Christ, and only one message, the cross, and that there is no wisdom outside that message, 1 Co 1:10-4:13. The importance of this is that quite naturally through the way events had developed, without surrendering anything of the primacy of his eschatological thought, the inner development of Paul's ideas led him to the point where he had to stress how the life we lead here and now is already a life of union between Christ and his followers and that this union is achieved by faith which is the only way to know him. Later, when the Galatian crisis developed, Paul had to relate this teaching to Judaism, and in doing so he explored further depths of this new life into which people are born by faith.

Galatians. Romans. 57-58 A.D.

The letters Paul wrote to the Christians of Galatia and Rome need to be treated together, since both letters analyse the same problem. The first was Paul's immediate reaction to a particular situation, but the second, which is his more considered opinion, is more like a theological treatise than a letter, and in it Paul systematically arranges all his new ideas that had emerged from the argument. This close relationship between the two letters is really the strongest reason against the early dating of Ga (pre-49 A.D., the council of Jerusalem) which some scholars have suggested. They argue that Paul's second visit to Jerusalem, Ga 2:1-10, was the second visit mentioned in Ac 11:30; 12:25, not the third, Ac 15:2-30, since several details here differ from Paul's account, and that, as Paul seems unaware of the decree of the council, Ac 15:20,29 (cf. Ga 2:6), this letter must have been written before it. All difficulties disappear if it is supposed that the 'Galatians' are the Christians of Lycaonia and Pisidia, evangelised by Paul on his first missionary journey when he returned by the way he had come; this would explain the double visit that Ga 4:13 seems to imply. This hypothesis does not have very much to support it apart from the fact that Lycaonia and Pisidia had been part of the province of Galatia in 36-25 B.C.; in the 1st century A.D., however, 'Galatia' normally referred to Galatia properly so called which lay to the north of Lycaonia and Pisidia, and it is unlikely that the inhabitants of each district were both called 'Galatians', Ga 3:1. This 'South-Galatia' hypothesis would not even be necessary if the second visit of Ga 2:1-10 could be identified with the third visit of Ac 15; and in fact this third visit of Ac seems to resemble the visit in Ga much more closely than it does the second, Ac 11:30; 12:25, which could have been sufficiently unimportant for Paul to have been justified in leaving it out of the discussion in Ga, in spite of his assurance, Ga 1:20. It is even possible that this second visit of Ac never took place but is simply one of Luke's literary doublets; cf. Introduction to Acts and Ac 11:30+. In this view, then, (that the letter to the Christians of Galatia was probably written eight years after the council of Jerusalem) the reason Paul does not mention the decree could be that the date of the decree was later than that of Ga (cf. Ac 15:1+). This would explain Peter's conduct that Paul says he criticised, Ga 2:11-14. The converts to whom the letter was addressed would then be the inhabitants of the 'Galatian territory' (i.e. North Galatia) through which Paul passed on his second and third journeys, Ac 16:6; 18:23. The letter may have been written at Ephesus, or even in Macedonia, about the year 57.

The letter to the Christians of Rome must, in this case, have been written soon after. In the winter of 57-58 Paul was at Corinth preparing to go to Jerusalem and from there to visit Rome on the way to Spain, Rm 15:22-32; cf. 1 Co 16:3-6; Ac 19:21; 20:3. He had not founded the Roman church, and any information he had about it (from people like Aquila, Ac 18:2) was not considerable: all we learn from occasional allusions in the letter is that it was a mixed community and that there was a danger of Jewish and non-Jewish converts looking down on each other. In view of this danger, Paul thought it would be prudent to pave the way for his visit by sending a letter (through Phoebe the deaconess, Rm 16:1) in which he stated systematically his ideas about the problem of how Judaism and Christianity were related to each other; these ideas were the ones he had been forced to develop by the Galatian crisis. In Rm he reassembled all the ideas he had expressed in Ga and by doing so made them even more precise. Ga has a mixed personal and emotional appeal, 1:12-2:21, with doctrinal argument, 3:1-4:31, and earnest admonition, 5:1-6:18. Rm on the other hand is a carefully planned whole: it has only a few main sections and these are shown to be all parts of one whole by a preliminary section in which Paul outlines all the subjects that are subsequently developed.

Like Co and Ga, the authenticity of the letter to Roman Christians is not seriously disputed though it is suggested that ch. 15 and 16 are later insertions. Chapter 16 has many greetings, and it may quite easily have been a separate note for the church at Ephesus, but in spite of certain MSS ch. 15 cannot be amputated so easily. Critics who keep ch. 16 as part of the original letter suggest that it was quite possible for Paul to have met a great many Christians who, as Jews, had eight years previously been expelled under Claudius and then later on gone back to Rome, and that it was diplomatic for him to mention their names in a letter to a church he had not yet visited. The unusual style of the doxology, 16:25-27, certainly suggests that it could be a later insertion, but this in itself is not sufficient argument against its authenticity.

The letter to Corinth contrasted Christ as the Wisdom of God with the human wisdom of philosophers, but in the letters to Galatia and Rome, Paul contrasted the perfection people can achieve by purely human effort with Christ who is the Perfection of God. What Paul was trying to do was to correct the unbalance of the Greek outlook that relied too exclusively on reason, just as in the earlier letters he had tried to correct the unbalance of the Jewish outlook that relied too heavily on the Law. Judaising Christians who had visited Galatia advised the pagan converts to have themselves circumcised to ensure their salvation. This would have meant adopting all the prescriptions of the Law, Ga 5:2f, the implications of which, to Paul, made nonsense of Christ's redemptive work, Ga 5:4, and it was for this reason that he opposed the circumcision of his converts so violently. He maintained that the true value of the Law could be appreciated only by seeing its place in the development of God's plan, Ga 3:23-25. The Mosaic Law was good and holy, Rm 7:12, because it really did convey God's will to the Jews, but as law it was unable to provide anyone with the spiritual power necessary to obey it: all the Law could do was make people aware of sin and of the need they have for God to help them, Ga 3:19-22; Rm 3:20; 7:7-13. All human beings need this help, and it is necessarily a gift from God: it was promised to Abraham long before the Law was formulated, Ga 3:16-18; Rm 4, and has now been given in Jesus Christ: his death and resurrection have created the human race anew: once polluted by Adam's sin, it now has Christ himself as its prototype, Rm 5:12-21. All human beings united to Christ by faith, and living the new life by sharing the Spirit of Christ, are made perfect gratuitously and so enabled to live in the way God wants human beings to live, Rm 8:1-4. This faith must result in the human person doing 'good works', but these will not be at all the same as those 'good works', commanded by the Law, on which Jews were so proud to rely; they will be works prompted by the presence of the Spirit, Ga 5:22-25; Rm 8:5-13, and they will be open to all who have faith, whether Jew or pagan, Ga 3:6-9, 14. The preparatory or Mosaic stage of religion is over, and Jews who claim they are continuing to fulfil the Law are in fact putting themselves outside the pale of salvation. Had God not permitted their blindness, however, the pagans would not have found themselves invited inside. This cannot be taken as meaning that God has failed to keep his promise to the Jews, it means that their failure to live up to God's original choice will not be permanent: some of them, the 'remnant' foretold by the prophets, have already become believers, and one day all of them will, Rm 9-11. Meanwhile, all converts without exception, whether they are Jews or not, must love and help each other as one family, Rm 12:1-15:13. The general outlines of this thesis were sketched in Ga; the details added in Rm are much deeper insights into mysteries such as the position of the human race as waiting for salvation, Rm 1:18-3:20; the spiritual struggle of each individual to be saved, Rm 7:14-25; God's gift of salvation, Rm 3:24 and passim; what the death and resurrection of Jesus actually achieved, Rm 4:24f; 5:6-11, and how Christians share in this by dying and rising in faith and baptism, Ga 3:26f; Rm 6:3-11; the vocation of the whole human race to be children of God, Ga 4:1-7; Rm 8:14-17; the love and wisdom of God who, being perfect and faithful to his promises, only reveals his salvific will stage by stage, Rm 3:21-26; 8:31-39. Paul's thought is still basically eschatological — we are saved 'in hope', Rm 5:1-11; 8:24 — but, as in his letters to Corinth, the stress is on the already present reality of salvation: the Spirit that was promised is already possessed, as 'first-fruits', Rm 8:23, by the Christian who from now on lives in Christ, Rm 6:11, and Christ in him, Ga 2:20.

The letter to the Romans is a magnificent though incomplete synthesis of Paul's theology: it does not exhaust his doctrine. The Lutheran controversy showed it was the most important of Paul's letters, but it would be a pity if this led people to neglect the other letters which are necessary to complete a really adequate review of all Paul's theological ideas.

Philippians. 56-57 A.D.

The Roman colony of Philippi was one of the principal cities of Macedonia; it had been evangelised by Paul in 50 A.D. during his second missionary journey, Ac 16:12-40, and he revisited it twice during his third: in the autumn of 57, Ac 20:1-2, and at Passover 58, Ac 20:3-6. His converts there had proved their affection by contributing to his support first at Thessalonika, Ph 4:16, then at Corinth, 2 Co 11:9, and later still had commissioned Epaphroditus to take further contributions to him, Ph 4:10-20. Paul wrote a letter (Ph) to thank them, and to say that he accepted their gifts. Normally, Paul was afraid of doing anything that might give the impression that he was trying to make money out of his preaching, Ac 18:3+, so it seems he was on terms of special intimacy with his converts at Philippi.

At the time of writing, Paul was under arrest, Ph 1:7, 12-17, and for a long time this was assumed to be the first Roman captivity. Rome, however, was so far away that it seems unlikely that communications between Paul (with whom Epaphroditus was staying) and Philippi could have been as frequent or as easy as they appear to have been, 2:25-30. Nor is it clear why, if Paul were under arrest in Rome or in Caesarea, Ac 23:23, the Philippians should say that the contribution brought by Epaphroditus was the first chance they had had since the second missionary journey (cf. the gifts mentioned in 4:10,16) of helping the apostle, since Paul had visited them twice on his third journey. It may be easier to suppose that Paul actually wrote this letter during the third journey, before reaching Philippi, i.e. while he was at Ephesus, the capital of Roman Asia, in 56-57 hoping to visit Macedonia after his liberation (compare Ph 1:26; 2:19-24 and Ac 19:21f; 20:1; 1 Co 16:5). The 'Praetorium', Ph 1:13, and 'Caesar's household', 4:22, do not necessarily refer to Rome, since there were praetoria in all the major cities and there were most certainly detachments of the praetorian guard in Ephesus. It is true that there is no reference anywhere to an Ephesian captivity; but Luke says very little about Paul's three years there, Ac 19:1-20:1, and Paul himself mentions having fought with beasts at Ephesus, 1 Co 15:32, and troubles and imminent death in Roman Asia, 2 Co 1:8-10.

If we accept this hypothesis we shall have to dissociate Ph from Col, Ep and Phm and group it with the 'great letters', notably with 1 Co. The style and content of the letter are quite consistent with this. It is not particularly doctrinal, it is just a friendly letter, giving some news to his converts at Philippi, warning them against the 'bad workmen' who are ruining his work in other places and might turn on them next, and, above all, appealing for the unity of corporate humility. As part of this appeal Paul gives us, 2:6-11, the poem on the humility of the Messiah; and whether he wrote it or is quoting it, this poem is our chief proof that the early Church believed in the divine pre-existence of Jesus.

The authenticity of the letter is generally accepted, and it is quite possible, as some writers suggest, that it may be made up of several originally separate notes.

Ephesians. Colossians. Philemon. 61-63 A.D.

The letters to the Christians of Ephesus and Colossae (both in Roman Asia) and the letter to Philemon are closely related: the mission on which Onesimus is sent in Col 4:9 is the same as that in Phm 12; the same is true of Tychicus in Col 4:7f and Ep 6:21f; Paul's companions in Col 4:10-14 are the same as in Phm 23-24; Col and Ep are very similar in style and doctrine. All three were written while Paul was under arrest, Phm 1, 9f, 13, 23; Col 4:3,10,18; Ep 3:1; 4:1; 6:20, and this is almost certainly his arrest (61-63) in Rome rather than (58-60) in Caesarea where it would be difficult to account for the presence of Mark and of Onesimus, or (56-57) in Ephesus since there is nothing to suggest that Luke was ever there with Paul. The degree to which Paul's style has changed, and his doctrine developed, suggests some interval between Col, Ep and the 'great letters' Co, Ga, Rm. This interval (57-61) came to an end when Epaphras, Col 1:7, Paul's delegate, arrived from Colossae (a church Paul had not founded) 1:4; 2:1, with disturbing news. Paul promptly wrote a letter to the Christians there, and gave it to Tychicus to deliver. The inherent dangers of this new situation stimulated Paul to rethink things at a deeper level, and just as Rm had systematised the ideas outlined in Ga, so now, at about the same time as Col, Paul wrote another letter in which he restructured his teaching from the new angle that he had been forced to adopt by the recent developments at Colossae. This new synthesis of Paul's thought is referred to as the letter he wrote to the Christians at Ephesus. The title, however, is misleading, and has very scanty MS support, cf. Ep 1:1. This is a general letter in which Paul is speaking to the whole Church and not just to the church at Ephesus where he had spent three years, Ep 1:15; 3:2-4, though it was meant in a special way for Colossae and the other Christian communities of the Lycus valley among whom he asks for it to be circulated, Col 4:16.

Critics have often disputed who the authors are of these two letters: for Col the balance now is in favour of Paul, since not only does it retain his basic ideas but the new ideas in it are such as seem to be satisfactorily explained by the circumstances mentioned above. There is, however, no such agreement that Ep, in the form in which we have it, is a letter of Paul's. Among arguments in favour of Paul are: 1. that Ep is not the work of any derivative thinker like a disciple, but of someone with a genius for creative thinking; 2. that the leisurely, rich and extravagant style of Col and Ep which contrasts so much with the quick, jerky discussions of earlier letters, can probably be explained by these wide new horizons that Paul was opening for himself; 3. that the style of the earlier letters is not at all consistent, and two early examples of this later contemplative, semi-liturgical manner can be found in 2 Co 9:8-14, Rm 3:23-26; 4. that the slavish and awkward borrowing by Ep of phrases from Col might be due to the fact that Paul was not in the habit of composing every word of his letters, and on this occasion he may have allowed a disciple to play a greater part than usual.

The danger at Colossae was due to the basically Jewish (Col 2:16) speculations they had taken up about the celestial or cosmic powers. These were the powers thought to be responsible for the regular movement of the cosmos, and the speculations about them, much influenced by hellenistic philosophy, attached an importance to these powers that threatened the supremacy of Christ. Paul accepts these cosmological premisses and, far from expressing any doubts about these powers, he associates them with the angels of Jewish tradition, 2:15; all he is concerned about is to show their subordinate place in the scheme of salvation. Their task had been to 'mediate' the Law and to administer it and that task is now accomplished: Christos Kyrios, Christ the Lord, has established a new order of things and he now governs the cosmos. Raised up to heaven, he is above all the cosmic powers and has stripped them of their ancient dignities, 2:15. Because he is the Son, the Father's image, he was their lord already when the world was made; now in the new creation he is their confirmed and absolute master, for gathered into him is the pleroma, the fulness of Being, that is to say the fulness both of God and of all that exists through God's creative power, 1:13-20. Christians have been set free from these 'elements of the world', 2:8,20, through being united with their Master and thus sharing in his fulness, 2:10, Christians must never again accept their tyranny by submitting to an old and now impotent law, 2:16-23. United to the dead and risen Christ by baptism, 2:11-13, they are parts of his Body and live a new life, his life, because as Head of his body he communicates his life to it, 2:19. Paul had always taught that salvation consisted of sharing the life of Christ in this way; the new perspective in which the arguments at Colossae forced him to see things was one in which he saw the effects of Christ's work on the entire cosmos. Since the human race forms part of the cosmos, the cosmos itself must be influenced by the salvific act of the one and only Lord of all creation. In this perspective, Paul is able to widen his whole concept of the 'Body of Christ', which was an idea that, five years or so before in 1 Co 12:12f, he had only touched on. Three aspects of this broader view, which focusses on the function of Christ as Head, are: that the scope of salvation is seen to be cosmic; that Christ, into whom the Church has to structure itself, is this same victor who has triumphed over the whole cosmos; and finally that the concept of the future, eschatological, promise, as already realised, becomes very much more central, cf. Ep 2:6+.

When Paul wrote the letter we know as Ephesians, it was along the same lines, but this time he can assume the conclusions of the previous letter about the subordinate place of the Powers, Ep 1:20-22, and give further thought to how the Church as the Body of Christ embraces the whole of the new Universe, 'the fulness of him who is filled, all in all', 1:23. This concept of the pleroma is the innermost depth of Paul's vision, the central statement of everything he wrote. It forms the new focus round which he can synthesise many of his previous insights. In particular he reconsiders some of the problems he had already dealt with in Rm, which is the most important statement of Paul's previous period of thought. In a few phrases he recalls his survey of humanity under the shadow of sin and of how salvation is a gift given by God through Christ, 2:1-10. Next, he re-examines the problem of Jew and pagan that had so troubled him before, Rm 9-11; but this time, in the calm eschatological light of the cosmic Christ, he is aware of the unity of Jews and pagans, who are now reconciled since each is equally part of the New Humanity, and who, together, advance toward the Father, Ep 2:11-22. That it should be the non-Jew who should be benefited by the Messiah who came to save Israel is the 'mystery', 1:9; 3:3-6,9; 6:19; Col 1:27; 2:2; 4:3, which occupies his thoughts for the last five years or so of his life and which he writes about in the inimitable Pauline way. He writes about the infinite wisdom of this 'mystery', 3:9f; Col 2:3, about how it proves Christ's love to be inexhaustible, Ep 3:18f, and about how, out of all possible people, God had made the unexpected choice of Paul, who was 'the least of all', to proclaim this mystery, Ep 3:2-8. That the full truth, about salvation being for the whole human race, was not revealed before, was itself part of the very scheme God had for realising this salvation, Ep 1:3-14, the culmination of which was the salvific act of marriage between Christ and the human race which is his bride, the Church, 5:22-32.

The short letter Paul wrote at about the same time as Col and Ep is to tell Philemon of Colossae, v.19, one of Paul's converts, that Onesimus, a runaway slave belonging to Philemon, and also one of Paul's converts, had returned. It is a very short note, and Paul wrote it in his own handwriting, v. 19. The letter reveals a gentle, affectionate side of the apostle, and also shows how he applies his views on slavery to a particular case, Rm 6:15+: as far as society is concerned, the master still owns his slave, but the two of them should remember that they are brothers serving the same Master, v. 16; cf. Col 3:22; 4:1.

Paul's two letters to Timothy and his letter to Titus are all three of them closely related in substance, form and historical background. 1 Tm and Tt both seem to have been written from Macedonia, Timothy being at that time in Ephesus, 1 Tm 1:3, where Paul hoped to join him in the near future, 3:14; 4:13, while Titus was in Crete where he had been left by Paul, Tt 1:5, who planned to winter at Nicopolis in Epirus where Titus was to join him, Tt 3:12. By the time he wrote 2 Tm, Paul was a prisoner in Rome, 1:8; 16f; 2:9, but had visited Troas, 4:13, and Miletus, 4:20. The position is not hopeful, 4:16, and Paul feels sure he will die soon, 4:6-8,18; he is lonely and would like Timothy to come to him as soon as possible, 4:9-16,21. In spite of certain similarities, this is not the situation either of the Roman captivity, 61-63, or of the journey that preceded it. Some critics have concluded that the letters were written not by Paul, but by a forger who put in these details to make the letter seem more authentic and as Pauline as possible. There is, however, no proof that Paul died at the end of his first captivity, in fact Ac 28:30 suggests he was set free. It is not impossible, therefore, for Paul to have made another journey, not necessarily to Spain as he had once planned seven or eight years before, Rm 15:24,28, but in the east as he had planned a year or so ago, Phm 22. It is possible then that 1 Tm and Tt were written about 65 A.D. on that journey through Crete, Asia Minor, Macedonia and Greece. The background of 2 Tm seems to be a fresh captivity, ending in Paul's death; in that case, this letter would be Paul's last will and testament, and must have been written shortly before his martyrdom in 67.

Paul wrote these letters in order to instruct two of his most loyal followers, Ac 16:1+; 2 Co 2:13+, how to organise and govern the communities he had confided to their care; since the 18th century they have generally been grouped as the 'pastoral letters'. Some critics suggest that they presuppose a stage in the evolution of the Church's hierarchy that only occurred after Paul's death;

others think that the situation they do suppose would not have been at all unlikely towards the end of Paul's lifetime. The titles 'episcopus' and 'presbyter', Tt 1:5-7, are still, cf. Ac 20:17,28, practically synonymous, as they had been in the earliest communities governed by a college of elders, Tt 1:5+. There is no trace in these letters of the monarchic bishops of whom Ignatius of Antioch writes forty years later. There are signs, however, that this development is taking place: Timothy and Titus are empowered to act as delegates of Paul; they are responsible for several communities though they are not attached to any of them, Tt 1:5; they are living in an interim period when apostolic authority was in the process of being transmitted, since the apostles themselves were dying. Not long after the death of Paul this authority became vested in the head of the college of presbyters, the 'bishop'. To invent the interim period represented in the pastoral letters would seem to be so pointless that its presence is a valuable indication of their authenticity. It should also be noticed that these episcopoi-presbyteroi are not just administrative officials; they are that, but they are also primarily responsible for teaching and governing, 1 Tm 3:2,5; 5:17; Tt 1:7,9, and as such they are the ancestors of our 'bishops' and 'priests'.

Many critics have thought the insistence on 'sound teaching', 1 Tm 1:10, etc., and on keeping the deposit of faith, 1 Tm 6:20; 2 Tm 1:14, uncharacteristic of a bold original thinker like Paul. On the other hand it must be remembered that Paul felt his end was near and that he probably felt it his duty to warn his young helpers against the sort of speculation he had seen developing. There were new ideas going round which, if believed in, would make shipwreck of the faith, 1 Tm 1:19. There is no need to assume that these ideas were 2nd century Gnostic teachings being attacked by someone writing under Paul's name. These idle questions, 1 Tm 6:4, empty problems, 'myths and endless genealogies', 1 Tm 1:4, 'Jewish myths', Tt 1:14, 'disputes about the Law', Tt 3:9, and the various ascetical practices they seemed to involve, 1 Tm 4:3, would all appear to belong to those groups of hellenised and syncretistic ideas affecting Judaism, which had formed part of the crisis in Colossae.

These letters are certainly not written in Paul's distinctive style: they flow smoothly without any of the fire and exuberance of the early letters, and the vocabulary used is very different. Some critics have tried to explain this by saying that Paul was getting old, and that being in prison affected him; but Col, Ep, Ph were written less than five years before, and Paul was not under arrest when he wrote 1 Tm and Tt. Attempts have been made to separate the authentic sections from later additions, but these have not proved very satisfactory. The alternative would appear to be that Paul, as in the case of Ep but to a greater degree, must have given someone who was both disciple and secretary an unprecedented amount of freedom. Luke was with Paul at the time, 2 Tm 4:11, and critics have occasionally maintained that they could detect similarities between his style and that of the pastoral letters.

Hebrews. 67 A.D.

The question of who wrote this letter to the Jewish Christians has, unlike the disputed authorship of the pastoral letters, been a subject of debate from the earliest times. Not that its canonical status was often questioned, but up to the end of the 4th century the Western Church denied that Paul had written it, and the Eastern Church only affirmed it with many reservations about its literary composition (Clement of Alexandria; Origen). Its vocabulary and style have a simplicity and a distinction quite uncharacteristic of Paul; the way in which it quotes and uses the Old Testament is different from Paul's; the usual Pauline greetings and introduction are lacking, and though its doctrine has Pauline overtones, it is so original that its immediate attribution to Paul is difficult. Most critics agree that Paul could not have been its author in the same sense as he was author of the other letters, but he is felt to have had sufficient influence, direct or (more likely) indirect, to warrant its inclusion from early times in the corpus Paulinum.

No sort of agreement exists as to who actually wrote the letter; Barnabas, Silas, Aristion, etc. have been suggested; perhaps the most likely is Apollos, the Alexandrian Jew who is praised by Luke for his eloquence, apostolic zeal and knowledge of the scriptures, Ac 18:24-28. Not only are these qualities reflected in the letter itself, but its language and thought, by having sufficient affinity with Philo, also suggest Alexandrian culture. The argument of the letter, pleaded with rhetorical skill, is founded entirely on the Old Testament.

The place and date of writing are equally uncertain, and who it was intended for is unknown. But the author seems to be writing from Italy, 13:24, and he speaks as if the Temple were still open for worship, 8:4f, warning his readers against the temptation of going back to it, and, when he emphasises the transitory nature of the Mosaic cult, he makes no reference to the destruction of the Temple. This suggests he was writing before 70 A.D. On the other hand, he certainly makes use of Paul's letters from prison and therefore wrote after 63. If the crisis behind the author's urgent appeal for unshakeable faith, 10:25 etc., is the first threat of the Jewish War, the letter could be dated 67 A.D.

The title 'to the Hebrews' dates from the 2nd century and is well chosen. The letter clearly assumes not only that its readers are thoroughly familiar with the Old Covenant but that they are Jewish Christians, perhaps even Jewish priests, cf. Ac 6:7, to judge by the emphasis on public worship and ceremonial. Having become Christians, they seem to have left Jerusalem and gone for shelter to some coastal town like Caesarea or Antioch. They are tired of exile and think longingly of the splendour of Temple worship and of the part they played in it; their new faith is not very strong, and they have not yet properly understood it; persecution discourages them and they are tempted to go back.

The letter was written to them to try to prevent this happening, 10:19-39. To these exiles the author presents Christian life in the perspective of the Exodus, marching to the Place of Rest, the Promised Land of heaven, an exodus led not by Moses but by Christ, 3:1-6, and led by the same light of faith and hope that had accompanied their ancestors on the Exodus and had illumined all the saints of old, 3:7-4:11; 11 passim. Christ himself replaces the old priesthood and, being a priest like Melchisedek, he is higher than Aaron, 4:14-5:10; 7. The ineffectual sacrifices of levitical worship are replaced by the one uniquely efficacious sacrifice of Christ himself, 8:1-10:18. To prove this, the author shows how Jesus Christ, the incarnate Son of God, is, as Leader and Priest, higher than all the angels and ruler of all things, ch. 1-2.

In this letter, strictly theological and exegetical passages alternate with passages of exhortation, but the main themes themselves are interwoven in a very intricate and oriental way, as disconcerting to some modern western readers as its method of using scripture. These are the reasons why this letter can tell us so much about typology, about the way the earliest Christians conceived the harmony of the Old and New Testaments, and about the way they understood the redemptive work of Jesus in terms of God's whole plan of salvation. Add to all that it tells us its deep intuitions into the centre of Christian belief, and it will be clear why this semi-Pauline unsigned document is one of the most important books of the New Testament.

1 a. Adopting the convention of his time Paul begins letters with an introductory paragraph (names of sender and receiver, good wishes) followed by thanks and a wish. He colours this, however, with his own Christian spirit, and often manages to fit theological ideas into it so as to anticipate the principal themes of each letter. In Rm these themes are: God's freedom to choose his people; the connection between faith and being made holy; salvation through Christ's death and resurrection; the harmony of the two Testaments.

b. A Jewish title that means 'envoy', cf. Jn 13:16; 2 Co 8:23; Ph 2:25, sometimes used in the N.T. for the Twelve chosen by Christ, Mt 10:2; Ac 1:26; 2:37, etc.; 1 Co 15:7; Rv 21:14, to be his witnesses, Ac 1:8+, sometimes in a wider sense for those sent to preach the gospel, Rm 16:7; 1 Co 12:28; Ep 2:20; 3:5; 4:11. Though Paul was not a member of the Twelve, the fact that he had been appointed missionary to the gentiles by God, Ac 26:17; Rm 11:13; 1 Co 9:2; Ga 2:8; 1 Tm 2:7, constitutes him an apostle of Christ, Rm 1:1; 1 Co 1:1; etc., equal to the Twelve, Ac 10:41, because like them he had seen the risen Christ, 1 Co 9:1, and been sent by him, Rm 1:5; Ga 1:16, to be his witness, Ac 26:16. In spite of being 'the least of the apostles', 1 Co 15:9, he is their equal, 1 Co 9:5; Ga 2:6-9, because he did not learn the Good News he preaches from them, Ga 1:1,17,19.

c. Vulg. 'predestined'.

d. For Paul Christ rose only because God raised him, 1 Th 1:10; 1 Co 6:14; 15:15; 2 Co 4:14; Ga 1:1; Rm 4:24; 10:9; Ac 2:24+; cf. 1 P 1:21, thus displaying his 'power', 2 Co 13:4; Rm 6:4; Ph 3:10; Col 2:12; Ep 1:19f; Heb 7:16; and because God raised him to life through the Holy Spirit, Rm 8:11, Christ is established in glory as Kyrios, Ph 2:9-11+; Ac 2:36; Rm 14:9, deserving anew, this time in virtue of his messianic work, the name he had from eternity, 'Son of God', Ac 13:33, Heb 1:5; 5:5. Cf. Rm 8:11+; 9:5+.

e. Subjective genitive: the obedience implicit in the virtue of faith. Cf. Ac 6:7; Rm 6:16-17; 10:16; 15:18; 16:19,26; 2 Co 10:5-6; 2 Th 1:8; 1 P 1:22; Heb 5:9; 11:8.

f. Lit. 'I offer worship in my spirit'. The apostolic ministry is an act of worship offered to God, cf. 15:16, like the Christian life itself, since both depend on charity, 12:1; Ph 2:17+; 3:3; 4:18; Ac 13:2; 2 Tm 1:3; 4:6; Heb 9:14; 12:28; 13:15; 1 P 2:5.

g. By spirit (pneuma) Paul sometimes means the highest element in a human being, Rm 1:9; 8:16; 1 Co 2:11; 16:18; 2 Co 2:13; 7:13; Ga 6:18; Ph 4:23; Phm 25; 2 Tm 4:22; cf. Mt 5:3; 27:50; Mk 2:8; 8:12; Lk 1:47,80; 8:55; 23:46; Jn 4:23f; 11:33; 13:21; 19:30; Ac 7:59; 17:16; 18:25; 19:21. This he distinguishes from the flesh, the lower element (1 Co 5:5; 2 Co 7:1; Col 2:5; cf. Mt 26:41p; 1 P 4:6; Rm 7:5), from the body (1 Co 5:3f; 7:34; cf. Jm 2:26; Rm 7:24), and from sharing a spiritual gift with you, •or what is better, to find encouragement 12 among you from our common faith. •I want you to know, brothers, that I have 13 often planned to visit you—though until now I have always been prevented—in the hope that I might work as fruitfully among you as I have done among the other pagans. •I owe a duty to Greeks^h just as much as to barbarians, to the 14 educated just as much as to the uneducated, •and it is this that makes me wantⁱ 15 to bring the Good News to you too in Rome.

SALVATION BY FAITH

I. JUSTIFICATION

The theme stated

For I am not ashamed of the Good News: it is the power of God saving all 16 who have faith^j—Jews first,^k but Greeks as well—•since this is what reveals the 17 justice^l of God to us: it shows how faith leads to faith,^m or as scripture says:
The upright man finds life through faith.

A. GOD'S ANGER AGAINST PAGAN AND JEWⁿ

God's anger against the pagans

The anger of God is being revealed from heaven against all the impiety and 18 depravity of men who keep truth imprisoned in their wickedness. •For what can 19 be known about God is perfectly plain to them since God himself has made it plain. •Ever since God created the world his everlasting power and deity— 20 however invisible—have been there for the mind to see in the things he has made. That is why such people are without excuse: •they knew God^o and yet 21 refused to honour him as God or to thank him; instead, they made nonsense out of logic and their empty minds were darkened. •The more they called 22 themselves philosophers, the more stupid they grew, •until they exchanged the 23 glory of the immortal God for a worthless imitation, for the image of mortal man, of birds, of quadrupeds and reptiles. •That is why God left them^p to their filthy 24 enjoyments and the practices with which they dishonour their own bodies, since they have given up divine truth for a lie and have worshipped and served 25 creatures instead of the creator, who is blessed for ever. Amen!

That is why God has abandoned them to degrading passions: why their women 26 have turned from natural intercourse to unnatural practices •and why their 27 menfolk have given up natural intercourse to be consumed with passion for each other, men doing shameful things with men and getting an appropriate reward for their perversion.

In other words, since they refused to see it was rational to acknowledge God, 28
God has left them to their own irrational ideas and to their monstrous behaviour. ^q
And so they are steeped^r in all sorts of depravity, rottenness, greed and malice, ^s 29 and addicted to envy, murder, wrangling, treachery and spite. •Libellers, 30 slanderers, enemies of God,^t rude, arrogant and boastful, enterprising in sin, rebellious to parents, •without brains, honour, love^u or pity. •They know what 31 God's verdict is: that those who behave like this deserve to die—and yet they 32 do it; and what is worse, encourage others to do the same.^v

The Jews are not exempt from God's anger^a

2 So no matter who you are, if you pass judgement you have no excuse. 1
In judging others you condemn yourself, since you behave no differently 2 from those you judge. •We know that God condemns that sort of behaviour 3 impartially: •and when you judge those who behave like this while you are 3

- 4 doing exactly the same, do you think you will escape God's judgement? •Or are you abusing his abundant goodness, patience and toleration, not realising that 5 this goodness of God is meant to lead you to repentance? •Your stubborn refusal to repent is only adding to the anger God will have towards you on that day of
 6 anger when his just judgements will be made known. •He will repay each one as his works deserve.^b •For those who sought renown and honour and immortality
 8 by always doing good there will be eternal life; •for the unsubmitive who refused to take truth for their guide and took depravity instead, there will be the psyche also (1 Th 5:23+; cf. Heb 4:12; Jude 19); it bears some relationship to nous (Rm 7:25; Ep 4:23). Cf. also 'dispositions of the spirit' in 1 Co 4:21; 2 Co 12:18; Ga 6:1; Ph 1:27. By choosing this traditional term (cf. Is 11:2+) instead of the nous of the Greek philosophers, the N.T. can suggest a deep affinity between the human spirit and the Spirit of God that stimulates and guides it, Rm 5:5+; Ac 1:8+. There are many texts where it is hard to tell whether it is the natural or supernatural spirit that is referred to, the personal or the indwelling spirit—cf. e.g. Rm 12:11; 2 Co 6:6; Ep 4:3,23; 6:18; Ph 3:3 var.; Col 1:8; Jude 19, etc.

b. In contrast to 'barbarians', 'Greeks' means the inhabitants of the hellenic world (including the Romans, who had adopted the Greek culture); in contrast to 'Jews' it means the pagans in general, 1:16; 2:9-10; 3:10; 10:12; 1 Co 1:22-24, etc.

i. Alternative translation 'And therefore, in so far as it is in my power, I am prepared to...'

j. Faith, which is the response of a human being to God as truth and goodness and so the one source of salvation, relies on the truth of God's promises and on God's faithfulness to them (Rm 3:3f; 1 Th 5:24; 2 Tm 2:13; Heb 10:23; 11:1) and on his power to implement them (Rm 4:17-21; Heb 11:19). After the long O.T. period of preparation (Heb 11) God has spoken through his Son (Heb 1:1). We must believe the Son (cf. Mt 8:10+; Jn 3:11+) and the kerygma or proclamation (Rm 10:8-17; 1 Co 1:21; 15:11,14; cf. Ac 2:22+) of the Good News (Rm 1:16; 1 Co 15:1-2; Phl 2:7; Ep 1:13) made by the apostles (Rm 1:5; 1 Co 3:5; cf. Jn 17:20). The kerygma proclaims that God raised Jesus from the dead, made him Kyrios (Rm 4:24f; 10:9; Ac 17:31; 1 P 1:21; cf. 1 Co 15:14,17), and through him offers life to all who believe in him (Rm 6:8-11; 2 Co 4:13f; Ep 1:19f; Col 2:12; 1 Th 4:14). Faith in the name, or person, of Jesus (Rm 3:26; 10:13; cf. Jn 1:12; Ac 3:16; 1 Jn 3:23) who is the Messiah (Ga 2:16; cf. Ac 24:24; 1 Jn 5:1), the Lord (Rm 10:9; 1 Co 12:3; Ph 2:11; cf. Ac 16:31) and Son of God (Ga 2:20; cf. Jn 20:31; 1 Jn 5:5; Ac 8:37; 9:20) is thus the necessary condition of salvation (Rm 10:9-13; 1 Co 1:21; Ga 3:22; cf. Is 7:9+; Ac 4:12; 16:31; Heb 11:6; Jn 3:15-18). Faith is not only intellectual assent, it is to trust and obey (Rm 1:5; 6:17; 10:16; 16:26; cf. Ac 6:7) the life-giving truth (2 Th 2:12f). Faith which thus unites a person with Christ (2 Co 13:5; Ga 2:16,20; Ep 3:17) also confers the Spirit on him (Ga 3:2,5,14; cf. Jn 7:38f; Ac 11:17), the Spirit of the sons of God (Ga 3:26; cf. Jn 1:12). Faith is reliance on God and not on self (Rm 3:27; Ep 2:9) and thus contrasts with the old order of the Law (Rm 7:7+) with its vain search (Rm 10:3; Ph 3:9) for holiness by works (Rm 3:20,28; 9:31f; Ga 2:16; 3:11f); only faith can effect true holiness, the saving holiness of God himself (Rm 1:17+; 3:21-26), received as a free gift from him (Rm 3:24; 4:16; 5:17; Ep 2:8; cf. Ac 15:11). Faith relates to the promise made to Abraham (Rm 4; Ga 3:6-18) and so makes salvation accessible to everyone, pagans included (Rm 1:5,16; 3:29f; 9:30; 10:11f; 16:26; Ga 3:8). It is coupled with baptism (Rm 6:4+), calls for public profession (Rm 10:10; 1 Tm 6:12), and expresses itself in charity (Ga 5:6; cf. Jm 2:14+). Faith is obscure (2 Co 5:7; Heb 11:1; cf. Jn 20:29), and involves hope as its concomitant (Rm 5:2+). It must be allowed to grow (2 Co 10:15; 1 Th 3:10; 2 Th 1:3) amid struggles and sufferings (Ph 1:29; Ep 6:16; 1 Th 3:2-8; 2 Th 1:4; Heb 12:2; 1 P 5:9), demanding fortitude (1 Co 16:13; Col 1:23; 2:5,7) and tenacity

(2 Tm 4:7; cf. 1:14; 1 Tm 6:20) right up to the vision and possession of God (1 Co 13:12; cf. 1 Jn 3:2).

k. In the actual development of salvation history the Jews come first: 'salvation comes from the Jews' (Jn 4:22). Cf. Rm 2:9-10; Mt 10:5f; 15:24; Mk 7:27; Ac 13:5+. But abuse of this privilege could condemn them.

l. Not 'distributive' justice (reward for deeds) but the saving justice (cf. Is 56:1) of God, 3:26, who fulfils his promise to save by giving salvation as a free gift.

m. The expression probably means that faith is the one necessary condition to ensure this revelation.

n. By way of antithesis, the subject of the Good News being the revelation of God's saving justice, 1:16-17 (resumed in 3:21f), is interrupted by considering what the human race is like before it hears the Good News. In it both pagans, 1:18-32, and Jew, 2:1-3:20, are subject to God's 'anger' which accounts for the increase of sin, and which will reach its climax in the Last Judgement, 2:6+; Mt 3:7+.

o. To know there is one, personal God means to know that one must pray to him and adore him.

p. The traditional biblical phrase 'God abandoned', or 'left them', used three times for emphasis, means that religious error, if blameworthy, results in moral and social ills. Sin produces its own consequences and its own punishment; cf. Ezk 23:28-29; Is 64:6; Ws 11:15-16; 12:23-27. Though Paul judges and condemns pagan society he does not condemn individuals (whose intentions God alone must judge, 2:16; 1 Co 4:5; 5:12-13) since he presupposes, Rm 2, that there are pagans who obey the natural law written in their hearts, 2:14-15. To do that, a human being must admit that he is a sinner.

q. A clever twist here: as a punishment for refusing to use it properly, moral judgement, which goes with knowing about God, v. 21, disappears.

r. Here, as he frequently does elsewhere, Paul uses lists of vices taken from current pagan and (even more so) Jewish literature: 13:13-1 Co 5:10-11; 6:9-10; 2 Co 12:20; Ga 5:19-21; Ep 4:31; 5:3-5; Col 3:5-8; 1 Tm 1:9-10; 6:4; 2 Tm 3:2-5; Ti 3:3. Cf. also Mt 15:19p; 1 P 4:3; Rv 21:8; 22:15.

s. Add, 'fornication'.

t. Others translate 'hateful to God', but cf. 5:10; 8:7.

u. Add, (Vulg.) 'loyalty', cf. 2 Tm 3:3.

v. The Latin text tradition reads 'They know that God is just, and yet they did not understand that those who behave like this deserve to die, and not only those who do this but those who encourage them'.

2 a. Here Paul turns to the Jews not actually naming them, vv. 1-16, until 2:17-3:20. He is aware, as he condemns others, that he is condemning himself if he behaves in the way they do, vv. 1-5; 17-24. Nothing can take the place of personal virtue: not the Law, vv. 12-16, not circumcision, vv. 25-29, not even the scriptures, 3:1-8. The Jew as well as the pagan will be individually judged by God, 2:6-11, since each is equally liable to sin, 3:9-20.

b. The prophecy of a 'day of Yahweh' which will be a day of anger and salvation, Am 5:18+, will be fulfilled eschatologically in the 'day of the Lord', when Christ returns in glory, 1 Co 1:8+. On this 'day of judgement' (cf. Mt 10:15; 11:22,24; 12:36; 2 P 2:9; 3:7; 1 Jn 4:17) the dead will rise again, 1 Th 4:13-18; 1 Co 15:12-23,51f, and the whole human race will be judged in God's court, Rm 14:10, and in Christ's, anger and fury. •Pain and suffering will come to every human being who employs 9 himself in evil—Jews first, but Greeks as well; •renown, honour and peace will 10 come to everyone who does good—Jews first, but Greeks as well. •God has 11 no favourites.

The Law will not save them

Sinners who were not subject to the Law will perish all the same, without 12 that Law; sinners who were under the Law will have that Law to judge them.
It is not listening to the Law but keeping it that will make people holy in the 13 sight of God. •For instance, pagans who never heard of the Law but are led 14 by reason^c to do what the Law commands, may not actually 'possess' the Law, but they can be said to 'be' the Law. •They can point to the substance of the 15 Law engraved on their hearts—they can call a witness, that is, their own conscience—they have accusation and defence, that is, their own inner mental dialogue.^d •...on the day when,^e according to the Good News I preach, God, 16 through Jesus Christ, judges the secrets of mankind.

If you call yourself a Jew, if you really trust in the Law and are proud of 17 your God, •if you know God's will through the Law and can tell what is right, 18
if you are convinced you can guide the blind and be a beacon to those in the 19 dark, •if you can teach the ignorant and instruct the unlearned because your Law 20 embodies all knowledge and truth, •then why not teach yourself as well as the 21 others? You preach against stealing, yet you steal; •you forbid adultery, yet you 22 commit adultery; you despise idols, yet you rob their temples. •By boasting about 23 the Law and then disobeying it, you bring God into contempt. •As scripture 24 says: It is your fault that the name of God is blasphemed among the pagans.

Circumcision will not save them

It is a good thing to be circumcised if you keep the Law; but if you break the 25
Law, you might as well have stayed uncircumcised. •If a man who is not 26 circumcised obeys the commandments of the Law, surely that makes up for not 27 being circumcised? •More than that, the man who keeps the Law, even though 28
he has not been physically circumcised, is a living condemnation of the way you 29 disobey the Law in spite of being circumcised and having it all written down.
To be a Jew is not just to look like a Jew, and circumcision is more than a physical 28 operation. •The real Jew is the one who is inwardly a Jew, and the real circum- 29 cision is in the heart—something not of the letter but of the spirit. A Jew like that may not be praised by man, but he will be praised by God.

God's promises will not save them

3 Well then, is a Jew any better off?^a Is there any advantage in being circum- 1 cised? •A great advantage in every way. First, the Jews are the people to 2 whom God's message was entrusted. •What if some of them were unfaithful? 3 Will their lack of fidelity cancel God's fidelity? •That would be absurd. God will 4 always be true even though everyone proves to be false; so scripture says: In all you say your justice shows, and when you are judged you win your case. •But if our 5 lack of holiness makes God demonstrate his integrity,^b how can we say God is unjust when—to use a human analogy—he gets angry with us in return? •That 6 would be absurd, it would mean God could never judge the world. •You might 7 as well say that since my untruthfulness makes God demonstrate his truthfulness and thus gives him glory,^c I should not be judged to be a sinner at all. •That 8 would be the same as saying: Do evil as a means to good. Some slanderers have accused us of teaching this,^d but they are justly condemned.

All are guilty

Well: are we any better off?^e Not at all: as we said before, Jews and Greeks 9 are all under sin's dominion. •As scripture says:

- 11 There is not a good man left, no, not one; Ps 14:1-3 there is not one who understands, not one who looks for God.
- 12 All have turned aside, tainted all alike;
there is not one good man left, not a single one.
- 13 Their throats are yawning graves; Ps 5:9
their tongues are full of deceit.
Vipers' venom is on their lips, Ps 140:3
bitter curses fill their mouths. Ps 10:7
- 14 Their feet are swift when blood is to be shed, Is 59:7-8 wherever they go there is havoc and ruin.
- 15 They know nothing of the way of peace,
16 there is no fear of God before their eyes. Ps 36:1
- 17 Now all this that the Law^f says is said, as we know, for the benefit of those 18 who are subject to the Law, but it is meant to silence everyone and to lay the 19 whole world open to God's judgement; •and this is because no one can be justified 20 in the sight of God by keeping the Law:^g all that law does is to tell us what is sinful. Jn 10:34;

B. FAITH AND THE JUSTICE OF GOD

The revelation of God's justice

- 21 God's justice that was made known through the Law and the Prophets has 10:5 22 now been revealed outside the Law, •since it is the same justice of God that 1 K 8:46 comes through faith to everyone, Jew and pagan alike, who believes in Jesus 1:16+
Christ. •Both Jew and pagan sinned and forfeited God's glory,^h •and both are Ga 2:16;3
23 justified through the free gift of his graceⁱ by being redeemed^j in Christ Jesus 5:2,13

Rv 2:23, and his trial is by fire, 1 Co 3:13-15; he will treat everyone according to his works, 1 Co 3:8; 2 Co 5:10; 11:15; Ep 6:8; cf. Mt 16:27; 1 P 1:17; Rv 2:23; 20:12; 22:12. What has been sown will be reaped, Ga 6:7-9; cf. Mt 13:39; Rv 14:15. Angriely he will destroy, Rm 9:22, evil powers, 1 Co 15:24-26; 2 Th 2:8, and evil people, 2 Th 1:7-10; cf. Mt 13:41; Ep 5:6; 2 P 3:7; Rv 6:17; 11:18. But for the chosen, i.e. those who have done good, there will be freedom, Ep 4:30; cf. Rm 8:23, rest, Ac 3:20; cf. 1 Th 1:7; Heb 4:5-11, reward, cf. Mt 5:12; Rv 11:18, salvation, 1 P 1:5, honour, 1 P 5:6, praise, 1 Co 4:5, and glory, Rm 8:18f; 1 Co 15:43; Col 3:4; cf. Mt 13:43.

c. I.e. guided by conscience, not by revealed law. As Jews are not meant to be saved by the Law but guided by it to salvation, so the natural law in his conscience can guide any human being.

d. 'they have...dialogue'; lit. 'and the accusing or defending thoughts they have about themselves (or: about each other)'.

e. Anacoluthon: v. 16 follows grammatically on v. 13. Alternative translation 'in the court where God judges...', cf. 1 Co 4:3.

3 a. There is one further argument in favour of the Jews: if Israel is the people chosen by God to receive the promise, then how can there be any other way to salvation? Later, ch. 9-11, Paul develops at great length the brief answer he gives here: however much humans are unfaithful to the pact, this cannot abrogate God's promises; indeed the way humans behave only makes the promises more remarkable, a fact however which does not stop God being angry with the sinner (v. 6), or absolve his sin (v. 8). The dialogue used here seems it may echo some of Paul's debates in the synagogues.

b. The argument compares the group: faithfulness truth (truthfulness), integrity, with its anti-group: faithlessness, falsehood, sinfulness.

c. Lit. 'But (var. 'For') if through my untruthfulness God's truthfulness abounds to his glory'.

d. By twisting Paul's words as in Ga 3:22; Rm 5:20; cf. 6:1,15.

e. Disputed translation; some prefer 'what excuse then can we offer?' or 'Are we worse off, then?'

f. 'Law' here means all the O.T., cf. 1 Co 14:34; Jn 10:34, etc.

g. Since Ps 143 says that no human being would ever be forgiven if God judged him by his actions, there must be something else that will account for justification, and Paul finds this in God's promises to save his people: this is God's 'justice' that was promised for the messianic era and that, as Paul says, v. 21, is manifest in Jesus Christ. The Law, which merely regulates behaviour, was not meant by God to eliminate sin but to make sinners aware of the fact, cf. 1:16+; 7:7+.

h. 'Glory' in O.T. sense, Ex 24:16+, that is to say God as present to human beings and communicating himself to them more and more, a process that can only reach its climax in the messianic era, cf. Ps 84:9; Is 40:5, etc.

i. This word (charis) when used with reference to human relationships can mean either the quality that makes a person attractive (Ac 2:47), or it can mean thanks for a gift (Lk 6:32-34; 17:9), or it can mean something given free and unearned (Ac 25:3; 1 Co 16:3; 2 Co 8:6-7,19). This last sense predominates in the N.T., and especially in Paul (John uses agape) who uses the word to describe the way God saves through Jesus: it is a work of spontaneous love to which no one had any claim. It was an act of 'grace' for Jesus to come on earth (2 Co 8:9; Ti 2:11; Jn 1:14,17), to die (Heb 2:9), for his Father

1 Jn 2:2; 4:10 who was appointed by God to sacrifice his life so as to win reconciliation through 25

What faith does

1 Co 1:29 So what becomes of our boasts? There is no room for them. What sort of 27
 2:17; 4:2-3; law excludes them? The sort of law that tells us what to do? On the contrary,
 5:2+; 11:18 it is the law of faith,^o •since,^p as we see it, a man is justified by faith and not 28
 Ga 6:13-14 by doing something the Law tells him to do. •Is God the God of Jews alone and 29
 Ep 2:9 not of the pagans too? Of the pagans too, most certainly, •since there is only one 30
 8:4 God, and he is the one who will justify the circumcised because of their faith
 Mt 5:17 and justify the uncircumcised through their faith. •Do we mean that faith makes 31
 Ac 24:14 the Law pointless? Not at all: we are giving the Law its true value.^q

C. THE EXAMPLE OF ABRAHAM

Gn 12:1+;
 15:6+; Ga 3:6-9
 Jm 2:14+; Abraham justified by faith

4 Apply this to Abraham,^a the ancestor from whom we are all descended.^b 1
 3:27 If Abraham was justified as a reward for doing something, he would really 2 have had something to boast about, though not in God's sight •because scripture 3 Gn 15:6 says: Abraham put his faith in God, and this faith was considered as justifying^c him.
 Ga 3:6 If a man has work to show, his wages are not considered as a favour but as his 4
 Jm 2:23 due; •but when a man has nothing to show except faith in the one who justifies 5 sinners, then his faith is considered as justifying him.^d •And David says the same: 6 a man is happy if God considers him righteous, irrespective of good deeds:

Ps 32:1-2 Happy those whose crimes are forgiven, 7 whose sins are blotted out;
happy the man whom the Lord considers sinless. 8

Justified before circumcision

Is this happiness meant only for the circumcised, or is it meant for others as 9 well? Think of Abraham again: his faith, we say, was considered as justifying him, but when was this done? When he was already circumcised or before he had been 10 circumcised? It was before he had been circumcised, not after; •and when he was 11
 Gn 17:11 circumcised later it was only as a sign and guarantee^e that the faith he had before 12
 Jn 7:22 his circumcision justified him. In this way Abraham became the ancestor of all
 Ga 3:7 uncircumcised believers, so that they too might be considered righteous; •and 12 1 Co 9:12 ancestor, also, of those who though circumcised do not rely on that fact alone, but follow our ancestor Abraham along the path of faith he trod before he had been circumcised.

Not justified by obedience to the Law

Gn 12:7+ The promise of inheriting the world was not made to Abraham and his 13
 Ga 3:16-18 descendants on account of any law but on account of the righteousness which consists in faith.^f •If the world is only to be inherited by those who submit to 14
 the Law, then faith is pointless and the promise worth nothing. •Law 15
 Ga 3:10 involves the possibility of punishment for breaking the law—only where there
 Rm 5:13; 7:7 is no law can that be avoided.^g •That is why what fulfils the promise depends on 16
 7+ faith, so that it may be a free gift and be available to all of Abraham's Gn 17:5 descendants, not only those who belong to the Law but also those who belong to the faith of Abraham who is the father of all of us. •As scripture says: I have 17 made you the ancestor of many nations—Abraham is our father in the eyes of God, in whom he put his faith, and who brings the dead to life and calls into being what does not exist.^h

Abraham's faith, a model of Christian faith

18 Though it seemed Abraham's hope could not be fulfilled, he hoped and he

to give him up as a gift to us, a gift that includes all divine favours (Rm 8:32; cf. 1 Co 2:12; Ep 1:6f); justification, salvation, and the right to inherit by having faith in him without having to perform the works of the Law (Rm 3:24; 4:4f; Ep 2:5,8; Tt 3:7; cf. Ac 15:11); it will also be an act of 'grace' for Christ to come again at the end of the world and for us to receive everlasting glory (1 P 1:13; 2 Th 1:12). It was by grace that Abraham received the promise (Rm 4:16; Ga 3:18) and that a few Israelites were chosen to survive (Rm 11:5f). Since grace is God's love for us, it is inexhaustible (Ep 1:7; 2:7; cf. 2 Co 4:15; 9:8,14; 1 Tm 1:14) and it conquers sin (Rm 5:15,17,20). The one word 'grace' is so useful and full of meaning that it can be used to indicate the entire messianic era (Rm 5:21) that succeeds the era of the Law (Rm 6:14; Ga 2:21; 5:4), the same messianic era that was once proclaimed by the prophets (1 P 1:10) and is now proclaimed as the Good News (Col 1:6; cf. Ac 14:3; 20:24,32). The word sums up the gifts of God so well that Paul begins and ends his letters by wishing 'grace' to all his readers (1 Th 1:1 and 5:28, etc.; cf. 1 P 1:2; 5:10,12; 2 P 1:2; 3:18; 2 Jn 3; Rv 1:4; 22:21). It is by an act of grace that 'the God of all grace' (1 P 5:10) calls men to salvation (Ga 1:6; 2 Tm 1:9; 1 P 3:7), loads them with all spiritual gifts (1 Co 14:7; cf. 2 Th 2:16; Ac 6:8), makes Paul an apostle of the pagans (Rm 1:5; 12:3; 15:15f; 1 Co 3:10; Ga 1:15f; 2:9; Ep 3:2,7,8; Ph 1:7) and assigns to each Christian the part he has to play in the life of the Church (Rm 12:6; 1 Co 12:1+; 2 Co 8:1; Ep 4:7; 1 P 4:10); similarly, it is a 'grace' to suffer for Christ (Ph 1:29; 1 P 2:19-20). Mary 'found grace' with God (Lk 1:30; cf. Ac 7:46 and LXX passim); Jesus himself received the 'grace' of the highest name of all (Ph 2:9; cf. Lk 2:40). For human beings to be agreeable to God depends primarily on God's initiative and secondarily on human response. It is possible to receive grace in vain (2 Co 6:1; cf. 1 Co 15:10), to fall from grace (Ga 5:4), to forfeit grace (Heb 12:15), and thus to insult the Spirit of grace (Heb 10:29). Grace obtained must be carefully guarded (Rm 5:2; Heb 12:28; 1 P 5:12) and used wisely (1 P 4:10): it is not enough to remain in grace (Ac 13:43; cf. 14:26; 15:40), it must increase (2 P 3:18), to strengthen us (2 Tm 2:1), and help us to persist in our good intentions (Heb 13:9). This divine help is given to the humble (Jm 4:6; 1 P 5:5) and is obtained by prayer, since this is to approach 'the throne of grace' confidently (Heb 4:26). Grace will be granted and will be found sufficient; it is the power of Christ operating in weak man (2 Co 12:9; cf. 1 Co 15:10), and this grace of Christ triumphs over unspiritual wisdom (2 Co 1:12). The same word charis is also used for thanksgiving (Rm 6:17; 7:25; 1 Co 10:30; 15:57; 2 Co 2:14; 8:16; 9:15; Col 3:16; 1 Tm 1:12; 2 Tm 1:3; and cf. the verb eucharistein), since gratitude to God is the fundamental and necessary disposition for grace. From all these shades of meaning it is clear that the word charis is always used to emphasise that the gift is absolutely free; to bring out its power and its inwardness Paul also uses the word pneuma (cf. Rm 5:5+).

J. Yahweh had 'redeemed' Israel by delivering her from the slavery of Egypt, to provide himself with a nation for his 'inheritance', Dt 7:6+. When the prophets spoke of the 'redemption' from Babylon, Is 41:14+, they hinted at a deliverance more profound and less restricted, the forgiveness that is deliverance from sin, Is 44:22; cf. Ps 130:8; 49:7-8. This messianic redemption is fulfilled in Christ, 1 Co 1:30; cf. Lk 1:68; 2:38. God the Father through Christ—and indeed Christ himself—has 'delivered' the new Israel from the slavery of the Law, Ga 3:13; 4:5; and of sin, Col 1:14; Ep 1:7; Heb 9:15, by 'acquiring' her, Ac 20:28, making her his own, Tt 2:14; purchasing her, Ga 3:13; 4:5; 1 Co 6:20; 7:23; cf. 2 P 2:1. The price was the blood of Christ, Ac 20:28; Ep 1:7; Heb 9:12; 1 P 1:18f; Rv 1:5; 5:9. This redemption, begun on Calvary and guaranteed by the present gift of the Spirit, Ep 1:14; 4:30, will be complete only at the parousia, Lk 21:28, when deliverance from death is secured by the resurrection of the body, Rm 8:23.

k. Lit. 'whom God put forward as (or; destined to be) a propitiatory through faith by his blood'. For the 'propitiatory', or 'throne of mercy', cf. Ex 25:17+; and cf. Heb 9:5. On the Day of Atonement, Lv 16:1+, this was sprinkled with blood, Lv 16:15. The blood of Christ has performed what the ancient ritual could only symbolise: purification from sin. Cf. also the blood of the covenant, Ex 24:8+; Mt 26:28+.

l. A quasi-forgiveness; God declined to attach guilt (a paresis or 'passing over'); such 'non-imputation' would be an idle procedure if positive forgiveness were not to follow, i.e. the utter destruction of sin by man's justification. Others translate 'with a view to the remission of sins'.

m. This 'present age' is in God's plan of salvation the 'time appointed', Ac 1:7+, for Christ's redemptive work, Rm 5:6; 11:30; 1 Tm 2:6; Tt 1:3, which comes in the appointed time, Ga 4:4+, once for all, Heb 7:27+, and inaugurates the eschatological era. Cf. Mt 4:17p; 16:3p; Lk 4:13; 19:44; 21:8; Jn 7:6,8.

n. I.e. exercising his (saving, cf. 1:17+) justice, as he had promised, by justifying man.

o. I.e. the 'law' which is faith. Paul contrasts two regimes: of law, 7:7+, and of faith, 1:16+; cf. 4:13.

p. Var. 'Therefore'.

q. Lit. 'we establish (the) Law': it is only by means of the regime of faith that the Law achieves what it was intended to do, viz. to make people holy, cf. 7:7+.

4 a. Lit. 'What then shall we say about Abraham?' Var. (Vulg.) 'What then shall we say that Abraham has gained?'

b. The recurrence of the fatherhood of Abraham theme marks the stages in the argument, vv. 1,12,16-18.

c. Jewish tradition, preoccupied with Abraham's loyalty and his fortitude under trial, had made him the outstanding example of justification by works, Ws 10:5; Si 44:20f; 1 M 2:52 (and cf. especially the Book of Jubilees, ch. 11-12; 16:19f, etc.) cf. also Jm 2:22+, see 2:14+. Paul however finds that this justification and these works have their source in Abraham's faith, Gn 12:1+ and 15:6+. Cf. Heb 11:8f.

d. The words themselves are capable of various interpretations; by reason of his faith Abraham was reckoned a righteous man by God, though in fact he was not so; or, by reason of his faith Abraham had conferred upon him gratuitously by God a righteousness (or 'justice') that was not his when he came to believe; or thirdly, in God's eyes (and hence in fact) faith that is operative is one and the same with righteousness. The first of these interpretations is, however, incompatible with Pauline teaching as a whole, so also, it would seem, is the second; the third is completely consistent with it.

e. This word, sphragis, (lit. 'seal' or 'impression of a seal') came very soon to be analogically used of baptism, the sacrament of Christian faith.

f. Lit. 'the righteousness of faith', i.e. that righteousness which is precisely the act of believing with a living faith. The inheritance is conferred not to reward people who respect the clauses of a contract (a law), but to implement promises accepted in a disposition of faith. Cf. 3:27.

g. Lit. 'For law brings anger whereas (var. 'for') where there is no law there is no law-breaking either'.

h. As at the creation. These two most striking manifestations of God's omnipotence prepare the reader for the allusion to Christ's resurrection in v. 24.

II. SALVATION

Faith guarantees salvation^a

Jn 14:27
 Ep 3:12 5 So far then we have seen that, through our Lord Jesus Christ, by faith we are 1
 3:27+ judged righteous and at peace^b with God, •since it is by faith and through 2
 3:23+ Jesus that we have entered this state of grace^c in which we can boast about
 2 Co 12:9-10 looking forward to God’s glory.^d •But that is not all we can boast about; we can 3
 Jm 1:2-4 boast about our sufferings. These sufferings bring patience, as we know, •and 4
 1 P 4:13-14 patience brings perseverance, and perseverance brings hope, •and this hope is 5
 Rv 1:9 not deceptive, because the love of God^e has been poured into our hearts by the 1 Co 13:13+ Holy Spirit which has been given us.^f •We were still helpless when at his appointed 6
 8:14-16 moment Christ died for sinful men. •It is not easy to die even for a good man— 7
 Ga 4:4-6 though of course for someone really worthy, a man might be prepared to die—
 3:26+ but what proves that God loves us is that Christ died for us while we were still 8
 1 P 3:18 sinners. •Having died to make us righteous,^g is it likely that he would now fail 9
 8:32 to save us from God’s anger? •When we were reconciled to God by the death of 10
 Jn 15:13 his Son, we were still enemies; now that we have been reconciled, surely we may 1 Jn 4:10,19 count on being saved by the life of his Son? •Not merely because we have been 11
 1 Th 1:10 reconciled but because we are filled with joyful trust in God, through our Lord
 2 Co 5:18 Jesus Christ, through whom we have already gained our reconciliation.

A. DELIVERANCE FROM SIN AND DEATH AND LAW

Adam and Jesus Christ^h

Gn 3:1+ Well then, sin entered the world through one man, and through sin death,ⁱ and 12
 Ws 2:24 thus death has spread through the whole human race because everyone has Si 25:24 sinned.^j •Sin existed in the world long before the Law was given. There was no 13
 1 Co 15:21-22 law and so no one could be accused of the sin of ‘law-breaking’, •yet death reigned 14
 3:23; 6:23 over all from Adam to Moses, even though their sin, unlike that of Adam, was Gn 3:17,19 not a matter of breaking a law.

Adam prefigured^k the One to come, •but the gift itself considerably outweighed 15 the fall. If it is certain that through one man’s fall so many^l died, it is even more certain that divine grace, coming through the one man, Jesus Christ, came to so many as an abundant free gift. •The results of the gift also outweigh the results of 16 one man’s sin: for after one single fall came judgement with a verdict of condemnation, now after many falls comes grace with its verdict of acquittal. •If it is 17 certain that death reigned over everyone as the consequence of one man’s fall, it is even more certain that one man, Jesus Christ, will cause everyone to reign in life who receives the free gift that he does not deserve, of being made righteous.
 Again, as one man’s fall brought condemnation on everyone, so the good act of 18 one man brings everyone life and makes them justified. •As by one man’s disobedi- 19
 Is 53:11 ence many were made sinners, so by one man’s obedience many will be made

20 righteous. • When law came, it was to multiply the opportunities of falling, 21 but however great the number of sins committed, grace was even greater; • and so, just as sin reigned wherever there was death, so grace will reign to bring eternal life thanks to the righteousness that comes through Jesus Christ our Lord.

j. Faith is all-powerful, Mk 9:23. It shares in the divine omnipotence itself, cf. 2 Co 12:9-10.

k. 'Justice', or 'righteousness', is in effect the initial sharing in the life of the risen Christ, cf. 6:4; 8:10, etc.; Paul never isolates the death of Jesus from his resurrection.

d. Lit. 'about the hope of the glory of God'. For a Christian to hope is to be confident that he will get the eschatological gifts: the resurrection of the body, Rm 8:18-23; 1 Th 4:13f; cf. Ac 2:26; 23:6; 24:15; 26:6-8; 28:20, the rich inheritance of the saints, Ep 1:18; cf. Heb 6:11f; 1 P 1:3f, eternal life, Tt 1:2; cf. 1 Co 15:19, glory, Rm 5:2; 1 Jn 3:2f, in short, salvation, 1 Th 5:8; cf. 1 P 1:3-5, of self and neighbour, 2 Co 1:6f; 1 Th 2:19. Though it means primarily this virtue of expectation, 'hope' is used sometimes for the expected gifts themselves, Ga 5:5; Col 1:5; Tt 2:13; Heb 6:18. Of old, this hope was given to Israel, Ep 1:11-12; cf. Jn 5:45; Gal 4:18, and not to the pagans, Ep 2:12; cf. 1 Th 4:13; but it was a step towards a higher hope, Heb 7:19, offered now to the pagan world also, Ep 1:18; Col 1:27; cf. Mt 12:21; Rm 15:12, through the 'mystery' of Christ, Rm 16:25+. The basis of this hope is God himself, 1 Tm 5:5; 6:17; 1 P 1:21; 3:5, his love, 2 Th 2:16, his invitation, 1 P 1:13-15; cf. Ep 1:18; 4:4, with the power, Rm 4:17-21, truthfulness, Tt 1:2; Heb 6:18, fidelity, Heb 10:23, in implementing the promises declared in the written word, Rm 15:4, and in the gospel message, Col 1:23, promises fulfilled in Christ's person, 1 Tm 1:1; 1 P 1:3,21. The hope is therefore not illusory, Rm 5:5. Since the gifts it expects are in the future, Rm 8:24; Heb 11:1, faith is its prop, Rm 4:18; 5:1f; 15:13; Ga 5:5; Heb 6:11f; 1 P 1:21; charity is its food, Rm 5:5; 1 Co 13:7; hope and faith and charity, the three theological virtues, are closely allied, 1 Co 3:13+. Hope's excelling source is the Holy Spirit, Ga 5:5, greatest of all the eschatological gifts and in part already conferred, Rm 5:5+; Ac 1:8+; this enlightens, Ep 1:17f, and strengthens hope, Rm 15:13, and inspires its prayer, Rm 8:25-27, effecting the unity of the Body, for this hope is common, Ep 4:4. And because hope is built on justification through faith in Christ, Rm 5:1f; cf. Ga 5:5, it is rich in confidence, 2 Co 3:12; Heb 3:6, consolation, 2 Th 2:16; Heb 6:18, joy, Rm 12:12; 15:13; 1 Th 2:19, and is a thing to be proud of, Rm 5:2; 1 Th 2:19; Heb 3:6; the sufferings of this present time cannot dismay it, these cannot compare with the glory to come, Rm 8:18; on the contrary they sustain it, giving it a constancy, Rm 8:25; 12:12; 15:4; 1 Th 1:3; cf. 1 Co 13:7, that tests, Rm 5:4, and fortifies it, 2 Co 1:7.

e. God's love for us; of this the Holy Spirit is a pledge and to this, by his active presence within us, he bears witness; cf. 8:15 and Ga 4:6. Through him we stand before God as sons before their father; the love is mutual. This text therefore, in the light of its parallel passages, asserts that the Christian shares in the life of the Trinity through 'sanctifying grace'.

f. The promised Spirit, Ep 1:13, cf. Ga 3:14; Ac 2:33+, distinctive of the new covenant as contrasted with the old, Rm 2:29; 7:6; 2 Co 3:6; cf. Ga 3:3; 4:29; Ezk 36:27+, is not merely an exhibition of healing or charismatic power, Ac 1:8+; it is also, and especially, an inward principle of new life, a principle that God 'gives', 1 Th 4:8, etc., cf. Lk 11:13; Jn 3:34; 14:16f; Ac 1:5; 2:38 etc.; 1 Jn 3:24, 'sends', Ga 4:6; cf. Lk 24:49; Jn 14:26; 1 P 1:12, 'supplies', Ga 3:5; Ph 1:19, 'pours out', Rm 5:5; Tt 3:5f; cf. Ac 2:33. Received into the Christian by faith, Ga 3:2,14; cf. Jn 7:38f; Ac 11:17, and baptism, 1 Co 6:11; Tt 3:5; cf. Jn 3:5; Ac 2:38; 19:2-6, it dwells within him, Rm 8:9; 1 Co 3:16; 2 Tm 1:14; cf. Jm 4:5, in his spirit, Rm 8:16; cf. Rm 1:9+, and even in his body, 1 Co 6:19. This Spirit, the Spirit of Christ, Rm 8:9; Ph 1:19; Ga 4:6; cf. 2 Co 3:17; Ac 16:7; Jn 14:26; 15:26; 16:7,14, makes the Christian a son of God, Rm 8:14-16; Ga 4:6f, and establishes Christ in his heart, Ep 3:16. For the Christian (as for Christ himself, Rm 1:4+) this Spirit is a principle of resurrection, Rm 8:11+, in virtue of an eschatological gift which even in life signs him as with a seal, 2 Co 1:22; Ep 1:13; 4:30, and which is present within him by way of pledge, 2 Co 1:22; 5:5; Ep 1:14, and of first-fruits, Rm 8:23. It takes the place of the evil principle in man that is 'the flesh', Rm 7:5+, and becomes a principle of faith, 1 Co 12:3; 2 Co 4:13; cf. 1 Jn 4:2f, of supernatural knowledge, 1 Co 2:10-16; 7:40; 12:8f; 14:2f; Ep 1:17; 3:16,18; Col 1:9; cf. Jn 14:26+, of love, Rm 5:5; 15:30; Col 1:8, of sanctification, Rm 15:16; 1 Co 6:11; 2 Th 2:13; cf. 1 P 1:2, of moral conduct, Rm 8:4-9,13; Ga 5:16-25, of apostolic courage, Ph 1:19; 2 Tm 1:7f; cf. Ac 1:8+, of hope, Rm 15:13; Ga 5:5; Ep 4:4, of prayer, Rm 8:26f; cf. Jm 4:3,5; Jude 20. The Spirit must not be quenched, 1 Th 5:19, or grieved, Ep 4:30. It unites men with Christ, 1 Co 6:17, and thus secures the unity of his Body, 1 Co 12:13; Ep 2:16,18; 4:4.

g. Lit. 'Being justified in his blood'.

h. Sin dwells within man, Rm 7:14-24; now death, sin's chastisement, came into the world as a result of Adam's fall, Ws 2:24: for this Paul concludes that sin itself entered into all men through that first fall. We have here the doctrine of original sin. Its interest for Paul lies in the parallel it enables him to draw between the deadly work of the first Adam and the more than sufficient compensation of the 'second Adam', vv. 15-19; 1 Co 15:21f,25. It is as the new head of the human race, the great image in which God remakes his creation, Rm 8:29+; 2 Co 5:17+, that Christ is mankind's saviour.

i. Sin divides man from God. This separation is 'death', death spiritual and eternal; physical death is the symbol of it, cf. Ws 2:24; Heb 6:1+.

j. Meaning disputed. Either by sharing in Adam's sin, ('all have sinned in Adam') or else by their own personal sins, cf. 3:23. In this second interpretation the Greek could be translated 'for this reason that everyone...' a phrase introducing a situation actually occurring which allowed (eternal) death to threaten all mankind. Sin's power which through Adam made its entrance into the world did in fact bring about eternal death by means of personal sin, itself an acquiescence in Adam's rebellion. (Paul is of course speaking of adults.) A further translation is possible 'by reason of which (i.e. of the death-situation brought about by Adam's sin) everyone has sinned'.

k. 'prefigured', cf. 1 Co 10:6-1; the likeness, therefore, is not complete—hence the comparison, begun in v. 12 and interrupted by the long parenthesis of vv. 13 and 14, becomes a contrast in v. 15.

l. The word 'many' means all mankind, cf. v. 18; see Mt 20:28+.

m. Not only at the Last Judgement (for Paul regards justification as a present condition, cf. 5:1, etc.) but progressively as each individual becomes reborn in Christ.

n. 'law' without the definite article, i.e. a state of things in which law is the governing factor.

Baptism

6 Does it follow that we should remain in sin so as to let grace have greater scope? •Of course not. We are dead to sin, so how can we continue to live in it? •You have been taught that when we were baptised in Christ Jesus we were baptised in his death; •in other words,^a when we were baptised we went into the tomb with him and joined him in death,^b so that as Christ was raised from the dead by the Father's glory, we too might live a new life.

If in union with Christ we have imitated his death, we shall also imitate him in his resurrection. •We must realise that our former selves have been crucified with him to destroy this sinful body and to free us from the slavery of sin. •When a man dies, of course, he has finished with sin.^c

But^d we believe that having died with Christ we shall return to life with him: Christ, as we know, having been raised from the dead will never die again. Death has no power over him any more. •When he died, he died, once for all, to sin,^e so his life now is life with God; •and in that way, you too must consider yourselves to be dead to sin but alive for God in Christ Jesus.^f

Holiness, not sin, to be the master

That is why you must not let sin reign in your mortal bodies^g or command your obedience to bodily passions, •why you must not let any part of your body turn into an unholy weapon fighting on the side of sin; you should, instead, offer yourselves to God, and consider yourselves dead men brought back to life; you should make every part of your body into a weapon fighting on the side of God; •and then sin will no longer dominate your life, since you are living by grace and not by law.

The Christian is freed from the slavery of sin^h

Does the fact that we are living by grace and not by law mean that we are free to sin? Of course not. •You know that if you agree to serve and obey a master you become his slaves. You cannot be slaves of sin that leads to death and at the same time slaves of obedience that leads to righteousness. •You were once slaves of sin, but thank God you submitted without reservation to the creed you were taught. •You may have been freed from the slavery of sin, but only to become 'slaves' of righteousness. •If I may use human terms to help your natural weakness: as once you put your bodies at the service of vice and immorality, so now you must put them at the service of righteousness for your sanctification.

The reward of sin and the reward of holiness

When you were slaves of sin, you felt no obligation to righteousness, •and what did you get from this? Nothing but experiences that now make you blush,ⁱ since that sort of behaviour ends in death. •Now, however, you have been set free from sin, you have been made slaves of God, and you get a reward leading to your sanctification and ending in eternal life. •For the wage paid by sin is death; the present given by God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord.

The Christian is not bound by the Law^a 7 Brothers, those of you who have studied law will know that laws affect a person only during his lifetime.^b •A married woman, for instance, has legal obligations to her husband while he is alive, but all these obligations come to an end if the husband dies. •So if she gives herself to another man while her husband is still alive, she is legally an adulteress; but after her husband is dead her legal obligations come to an end, and she can marry someone else without becoming an adulteress. •That is why you, my brothers, who through the body of Christ^c are now dead to the Law, can now give yourselves to another husband, to him who rose from the dead to make us productive for God. •Before our conversion^d our sinful passions, quite unsubdued by the Law, fertilised our 6 bodies to make them give birth to death. • But now we are rid of the Law, freed 7:7f

6 a. Lit. 'therefore'; var. 'for'.

b. Baptism is not separated from faith but goes with it, Ga 3:26f; Ep 4:5; Heb 10:22; cf. Ac 8:12f,37; 16:31-33; 18:8; 19:2-5, and gives it outward expression by the operative symbolism of the baptismal ceremonial. For this reason Paul ascribes to faith and to baptism the same effects (cf. Ga 2:16-20 and Rm 6:3-9). The sinner is immersed in water (the etymological meaning of 'baptise' is 'dip') and thus 'buried' with Christ, Col 2:12, with whom also he emerges to resurrection, Rm 8:11+, as a 'new creature', 2 Co 5:17+, a 'new man', Ep 2:15+, a member of the one Body animated by the one Spirit, 1 Co 12:13; Ep 4:4f. This resurrection will not be complete or final until the end of time, 1 Co 15:12+ (but cf. Ep 2:6+), but is already taking place in the form of a new life lived 'in the Spirit', vv. 8-11,13; 8:2f; Ga 5:16-24. The death-resurrection symbolism of baptism is particularly Pauline, but this initial rite of the Christian life, Heb 6:2, is also spoken of in the N.T. as a cleansing bath, Ep 5:26; Heb 10:22; cf. 1 Co 6:11; Ti 3:5, a new birth, Jn 3:5; Ti 3:5; cf. 1 P 1:3; 2:2, an enlightenment, Heb 6:4; 10:32; cf. Ep 5:14. On the baptism of water and the baptism of the Spirit, cf. Ac 1:5+: these two aspects of the consecration of the Christian are apparently the 'anointing' and the 'seal' of 2 Co 1:21f. According to 1 P 3:21 the ark of Noah is an antetype of baptism.

c. Possibly in the sense that he no longer has the means to sin, having lost his 'sinful body', v. 6; being no more 'in the flesh', 8:9, he is freed from sin once and for all, cf. 1 P 4:1. Possibly in the sense that in law the death of the accused cancels legal proceedings, Cf. 7:1.

d. Var. 'For'.

e. Christ was sinless, 2 Co 5:21, but having a physical body like our own, Rm 8:3, he belonged to the order of sin; when he became 'spiritual', 1 Co 15:45-46, he belonged only to the divine order. Similarly, though the Christian remains 'in the flesh' for a time, he already lives by the spirit.

f. Text. Rec. and Vulg. 'Christ Jesus our Lord'. Cf. 14:7f; 1 Co 3:23+; 2 Co 5:15; Ga 2:20; 1 P 2:24.

g. Though baptism has destroyed sin in man, as long as his body has not been 'clothed with immortality', 1 Co 15:54, sin can still find a way to reassert itself in a 'mortal' body, i.e. one where concupiscence still has a hold, cf. 7:14f.

h. Christ has freed human beings from evil so as to restore them to God. Paul develops the biblical ideas of 'redemption', 3:24+, and of liberation from death, 7:1+, and in order to bring out their implications makes frequent use of a metaphor that his contemporaries would find impressive: the slave redeemed and set free who can be a slave no longer but must serve his new master freely and faithfully. Christ has paid for our redemption with his life, 1 Co 6:20; 7:23; Ga 3:13; 4:5; and he has made us permanently free, Ga 5:1,13. The Christian must be careful not to let himself be caught again by those who once owned him, Ga 2:4f; 4:9; 5:1, i.e. by sin, Rm 6:18-22; the Law, Rm 6:14; 8:2; Ga 3:13; 4:5; cf. Rm 7:1+, with its ritual observance, Ga 2:4; the principles of the world, Ga 4:3,8, cf. Col 2:20-22; and corruption, Rm 8:21-23. He is a free man, 1 Co 9:1, son of a free mother, i.e. the spiritual Jerusalem, Ga 4:26,31. This liberty is not licence to sin, Ga 5:13; cf. 1 P 2:16; 2 P 2:19. It means serving a new master, God, Rm 6:22; cf. 1 Th 1:9; 1 P 2:16, the Lord Christ, Rm 1:1, etc.; Jm 1:1; 2 P 1:1; Jude 1; Rm 14:18; 16:18, etc., to whom the Christian now belongs, 1 Co 6:19; 3:23, for whom he lives and dies, Rm 7:1+; this obedient service is prompted by faith and leads to righteousness and holiness, Rm 6:16-19. This is the sort of freedom a son has, Ga 4:7, one who has been one made free by 'the law of the Spirit', Rm 8:2; cf. 7:6; 8:14f; 2 Co 3:17 (and cf. Jm 1:25; 2:12), and he must be prepared to surrender it to serve his neighbour in charity, Ga 5:13; cf. 2 Co 4:5, and respect for someone else's scruples require it, 1 Co 10:23-33; Rm 14; cf. 1 Co 6:12-13; 1 Co 9:19. Slavery as a social institution may be tolerated in a society that is, after all, transient, 1 Co 7:20-24,31, it has no real significance in the new order established by Christ, 1 Co 12:13; Ga 3:28; Col 3:11: the Christian slave has been enfranchised by the Lord Christ, and the slave and his master are equally servants of Christ, 1 Co 7:22; cf. Ep 6:5-9; Col 3:22-4:1; Phm 16.

i. Or 'what did you get from actions that now make you blush?'

7 a. Paul now approaches a subject which has been in his mind for some time, 3:20; 4:15; 5:20; 6:14: the emancipation of the Christian from the Law, and this causes him to explain the rôle of the Law as God intended it, cf. 7:7+.

b. Elsewhere Paul refers to the liberation of the Christian either biblically as 'redemption', 3:24+, or, hellenistically, as 'enfranchisement', 6:15+. He also describes it frequently as a deliverance from death, since death frees a man from his past with all its tyrannical demands, 6:7; 7:1-3. The Christian, in union with the dead and risen Christ, 8:11+, and by virtue of faith, 1:16+, and baptism, 6:4+, is now dead to sin, 6:2,11, cf. 1 P 4:1, to the Law, Rm 7:6; Ga 2:19+, to the principles of the world, Col 2:20, and so lives under the new order of grace and the Spirit, Rm 8:5-13. Like an emancipated slave enslaved to a new master, 6:15+, the Christian, risen in Christ, lives no longer for himself but for Christ and for God, 6:11-13; 14:7f; cf. 2 Co 5:15; Ga 2:20.

c. As the Christian is dead to sin, so he is dead to the Law, by virtue of the dead and risen 'body of Christ', cf. 7:1+.

d. Lit. 'While we were in the flesh'. 1. The primary meaning of 'flesh' is the matter of which the body is made, 1 Co 15:39; cf. Lk 24:39; Rv 17:16; 19:18; it is the opposite of spirit, Rm 1:9+; it is the body with its senses, Col 2:1,5, and especially the medium of sexual union, 1 Co 6:16; 7:28; Ep 5:29,31; cf. Mt 19:5p; Jn 1:13; Jude 7, by which people become parents and heirs, Rm 4:1; 9:3,5; 11:14; cf. Heb 12:9. Thus 'flesh', like basar in biblical usage, emphasises the weak and perishable side of human beings, Rm 6:19; 2 Co 7:5; 12:7; Ga 4:13f; cf. Mt 26:41p, and their insignificance in comparison with God, Rm 3:20 and Ga 2:16; 1 Co 1:29; cf. Mt 24:22p; Lk 3:6; Jn 17:2; Ac 2:17; 1 P 1:24. This explains the words Paul uses when comparing nature with grace 'according to the flesh', 1 Co 1:26; 2 Co 1:17; Ep 6:5; Col 3:22; cf. Phm 16; Jn 8:15, 'flesh and blood', 1 Co 15:50; Ga 1:16; Ep 6:12; Heb 2:14; cf. Mt 16:17, and 'fleshly', Rm 15:27; 1 Co 3:1,3; 9:11; 2 Co 1:12; 10:4. 2. Since the sending of the Spirit is what gives this eschatological age its character, Paul can use the word 'flesh' to signify the old dispensation as opposed to the new, Rm 9:8; Ga 3:3; 6:12f; Ph 3:3f; Ep 2:11; cf. Heb 9:10,13; Jn 3:6; 6:63; so also the phrase 'according to the flesh', 1 Co 10:18; 2 Co 11:18; Ga 4:23,29; cf. Rm 1:3f; 2 Co 5:16, and 'fleshly', Heb 7:16; but cf. 1 Co 10:3f. 3. For Paul the 'flesh' is especially the sphere in which the passions and sin operate, Rm 7:5,14,25; 13:14; 2 Co 7:1; Ga 5:13,19; Ep 2:3; Col 2:13,18,23; cf. 1 P 2:11; 2 P 2:10,18; 1 Jn 2:16; Jude 8,23, condemned to corruption, 1 Co 15:50; Ga 6:8; cf. Jm 5:3; Ac 2:26,31, and to death, Rm 8:6,13; 1 Co 5:5; 2 Co 4:11; cf. 1 P 4:6, so much so that 'flesh' becomes personified as a Power of evil hostile to God, Rm 8:7f, and to the Spirit, Rm 8:4-9,12f; Ga 5:16f. Christ has defeated this Power by assuming 'sinful flesh', Rm 8:3; cf. 1 Th 3:16; 1 Jn 1:14; 1 Jn 4:2; 2 Jn 7, and putting it to death on the cross, Rm 8:3; Ep 2:14-16; Col 1:22; cf. Heb 5:7f; 10:20; 1 P 3:18; 4:1. Being united with him, Jn 6:51f, Christians are no longer 'in the flesh', Rm 7:5; 8:9, since they have crucified the flesh, Ga 5:24; cf. 1 P 4:1, and cast it off by baptism, Col 2:11; more precisely, they are still 'in the flesh' as long as they remain in this world, Ph 1:22-24; cf. 1 P 4:2, but are not slaves to the flesh any more, 2 Co 10:3; they are its masters through their union with Christ by faith, Ga 2:20, and suffering, Col 1:24.

2:29 by death from our imprisonment, free to serve in the new spiritual way and not Mt 9:16-17 2 Co 3:6 the old way of a written law.

The function of the Law^e

3:20; 5:20; 7:5; 8:3 Does it follow that the Law itself is sin? Of course not. What I mean is that Ga 3:10,19 I should not have known what sin was except for the Law. I should not for Ex 20:17 instance have known what it means to covet if the Law had not said You shall 4:15; 5:13 not covet. •But it was this commandment that sin took advantage of to produce
 Jm 1:14-15 all kinds of covetousness in me, for when there is no Law, sin is dead.

1 Co 15:56 Once, when there was no Law, I^f was alive; but when the commandment
 Gn 2:17; 3:11 came, sin came to life •and I died: the commandment was meant to lead me to Lv 18:5 life but it turned out to mean death for me, •because sin took advantage of the Ezk 20:11 commandment to mislead me, and so sin, through that commandment, killed me.

Gn 3:13 The Law is sacred, and what it commands is sacred, just and good. •Does Dt 4:8 that mean that something good killed me? Of course not. But sin,^g to show itself
 1 Tm 1:8 Jm 1:25 in its true colours, used that good thing to kill me; and thus sin, thanks to the 5:20 commandment, was able to exercise all its sinful power.

The inward struggle^h

6:12-14 The Law, of course, as we all know, is spiritual; but I am unspiritual; I have Jb 14:4+ been sold as a slave to sin. •I cannot understand my own behaviour. I fail to carry Ps 51:5 out the things I want to do, and I find myself doing the very things I hate. •When Ws 9:15 I act against my own will, that means I have a self that acknowledges that the Ga 5:17 Law is good, •and so the thing behaving in that way is not my self but sin living 1 P 4:2 in me. •The fact is, I know of nothing good living in me—living, that is, in my 7:5 unspiritual self—for though the will to do what is good is in me, the performance is not, •with the result that instead of doing the good things I want to do, I carry Ga 2:20 out the sinful things I do not want. •When I act against my will, then, it is not my true self doing it, but sin which lives in me.ⁱ

In fact, this seems to be the rule,^j that every single time I want to do good 2 Co 4:16 it is something evil that comes to hand. •In my inmost self^k I dearly love God's Ep 3:16 Law,^l but •I can see that my body follows a different law that battles against Jm 1:14-15; 4:1 the law which my reason dictates. This is what makes me a prisoner of that law of sin which lives inside my body.

8:23 What a wretched man I am! Who will rescue me from this body doomed to Ws 1:4+ death?^m •Thanks be to God through Jesus Christ our Lord!

5:21; 6:23 In short, it is I who with my reasonⁿ serve the Law of God, and no less I who serve in my unspiritual self the law of sin.^o

B. THE CHRISTIAN'S SPIRITUAL LIFE

The life of the spirit

8 The reason, therefore, why those who are in Christ Jesus are not condemned, Ws 1:4+ is that the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus has set you^a free from the Ac 13:38-39; 15:10-11 law of sin and death.^b •God has done what the Law, because of our unspiritual
 6:10+ nature, was unable to do.^c God dealt with sin by sending his own Son in a body
 Ga 3:13 as physical as any sinful body, and in that body^d God condemned sin. •He did
 2 Co 5:21 this in order that the Law's just demands^e might be satisfied in us, who behave Heb 2:14-18 not as our unspiritual nature but as the spirit dictates.
 3:31+; 9:30-10:4

The unspiritual are interested only in what is unspiritual, but the spiritual Ga 5:16-23 are interested in spiritual things. •It is death to limit oneself to what is unspiritual;
 6:21 life and peace can only come with concern for the spiritual. •That is because to Ga 6:8 limit oneself to what is unspiritual is to be at enmity with God: such a limitation
 1 Jn 2:15-16 never could and never does submit to God's law. •People who are interested 7:5-6 only in unspiritual things can never be pleasing to God. •Your interests, however, are not in the unspiritual, but in the spiritual, since the Spirit of God has made his home in you. In fact, unless you possessed the Spirit of Christ you would not belong to him. • Though your body may be dead it is because of sin, but if Christ is in you then your spirit is life itself because you have been justified; • and if the Spirit of him who raised Jesus from the dead is living in you, then he who raised Jesus from the dead will give life to your own mortal bodies through his Spirit living in you.⁹

e. In itself the Law is holy and good since it expresses God's will, 7:12-25; 1 Tm 1:8; it is the glorious prerogative of Israel, Rm 9:4; but cf. 2:14f. And yet it seems to have been a failure: in spite of the Law the Jews are sinners like everyone else, Rm 2:21-27; Ga 6:13; Ep 2:3, and obedience to it even makes them so confident, Rm 2:17-20; 3:27; 4:2,4; 9:31f; Ph 3:9; Ep 2:8, that they are shut off by it from the grace of Christ, Ga 6:12; Ph 3:18; cf. Ac 15:1; 18:13; 21:21. In short, the Law is powerless to make any man just, Ga 3:11,21f; Rm 3:20; cf. Heb 7:19. Paul's argument, to which polemic lends a tone of paradox, is that this apparent failure of the Law is due to the nature of the Law itself and to the part it was meant to play in the history of salvation. The Law gives information—it does not give spiritual strength. No law, whether Mosaic or otherwise, not even the primordial command given to Adam, cf. vv. 9-11, can prevent sin, in fact law makes it worse: 1. because though law is not the source of sin it becomes the instrument of sin by arousing concupiscence, Rm 7:7f; 2. because by informing the mind it increases the fault, which becomes a conscious 'transgression', 4:15; 5:13; 3. because the only remedy law can offer is punishment, 4:15, curse, Ga 3:10, condemnation, 2 Co 3:9, death, 2 Co 3:6; hence it can be called 'the law of sin and death', Rm 8:2; cf. 1 Co 15:56; Rm 7:13. Nevertheless God willed this defective system, though as a temporary period of schooling, Ga 3:24, to make people conscious of their sin, Rm 3:19f; 5:20; Ga 3:19, and to teach them to look for justification solely to the grace of God, Ga 3:22; Rm 11:32. Since this state of things is only for a time it has to give way before the fulfilment of the promise made, before the Law, to Abraham and his descendants, Ga 3:6-22; Rm 4. Christ has put an end to the Law, Ep 2:15; cf. Rm 10:4, satisfying its demands by dying a sinner's death, Ga 3:13; Rm 8:3; Col 2:14; but at the same time he 'fulfils' cf. Mt 5:17; 3:15, all that is of positive value in the Law, Rm 3:31; 9:31; 10:4. He emancipates the sons from the guardianship of the tutor, Ga 3:25f. With him they are dead to the Law, Ga 2:19; Rm 7:4-6; cf. Col 2:20, from which he has 'redeemed' them, Ga 3:13, in order to make them sons by adoption, Ga 4:5. Through the promised Spirit he gives to mankind thus renewed, Ep 2:15+, the inward strength to do all the good things prescribed by the Law, Rm 8:4f. This order of grace, superseding that of the old Law, may still be called a law, but it is 'the law of faith', Rm 3:27, 'the law of Christ', Ga 6:2, 'the law of the Spirit', Rm 8:1, and love is its essential precept, Ga 5:14; Rm 13:8f; cf. Jm 2:8.

f. Paul speaks in the person of mankind before the Law was given, cf. 5:13.

g. Sin personified, cf. 5:12, here takes the place of the serpent of Gn 3:1 and the devil of Ws 2:24.

h. Paul now speaks in the person of mankind still under the empire of sin and not yet justified, whereas in ch. 8, he speaks in the name of the justified Christian with the gift of the Spirit who, nevertheless, is conscious of an inward struggle while on earth, Ga 5:17f.

i. Paul is not denying man's personal responsibility for the evil he does, any more than for the good in Ga 2:20.

j. Lit. 'law', in the sense of regular experience.

k. This 'inmost self' is man's rational nature as opposed to the 'outer self', 2 Co 4:16a, which is man's perishable body. This distinction which has its origin in Greek thought is not the same as that between the 'old' and the 'new' self, Col 3:9-10+, which derives from Jewish eschatology. There are texts, however, where Paul speaks of the 'inmost self' in the Christian sense of the 'new self', 2 Co 4:16b; Ep 3:16.

l. Var. 'reason's law' as in v. 23.

m. Lit. 'from the body of this death'. Paul is concerned with the body and its component members, Rm 12:4; 1 Co 12:12,14f, that is to say with the human being as he actually is, a sentient creature, 1 Co 5:3; 2 Co 10:10, with a sexual life, Rm 4:19; 1 Co 6:16; 7:4; Ep 5:28, because it is in the body that man lives morally and religiously. The body, though tyrannised by the 'flesh', Rm 7:5+, by sin, 1:24; 6:12f; 7:23; 8:13; 1 Co 6:18, by death, Rm 6:12; 8:10, and therefore a 'body of flesh', Col 2:11; cf. 1:22, a 'body of sin', Rm 6:6, and a 'body of death', 7:24, is not however doomed to perish, as Greek philosophy would have it, but, in accordance with the biblical tradition, Ezk 37:10+; 2 M 7:9+, destined to live, Rm 8:13; 2 Co 4:10, through resurrection, Rm 8:11+. The principle of this renewal is the Spirit, 5:5+, which takes the place of the psyche, 1 Co 15:44+, and transforms the body of the Christian into the likeness of the risen body of Christ, Ph 3:21. Until this ultimate deliverance takes place, Rm 8:23, the body of the Christian, provisionally delivered from the 'flesh' by its union with Christ's death, 6:6; 8:3f, is even now the home of the Holy Spirit, 1 Co 6:19, who produces in it a new life of righteousness and holiness, Rm 6:13,19; 12:1; 1 Co 7:34, which is meritorious, 2 Co 5:10, and gives glory to God, 1 Co 6:20; Ph 1:20.

n. The nous, human reason or mind, is a Greek idea very different from the pneuma or supernatural Spirit, 5:5+, and even from the spirit in the biblical sense of man's higher self, 1:9+. It is the principle of understanding, 1 Co 14:14,15,19; Ph 4:7; 2 Th 2:2; cf. Lk 24:45; Rv 13:18; 17:9, and of moral judgement, Rm 14:5; 1 Co 1:10. Usually it is reliable, Rm 7:23,25, but is at times perverted, 1:28; Ep 4:17; 1 Tm 6:5; 2 Tm 3:8; Tt 1:15, by the 'flesh', Col 2:18; cf. Rm 7:5+, and has to be renewed, Rm 12:2, within man's own spirit by the Spirit of God, Ep 4:23f; cf. Col 3:10.

o. This sentence, which would come more naturally before v. 24, seems to have been added—perhaps by Paul himself.

8 a. Var. 'me', 'us'.

b. Paul contrasts the order of sin and death with the new order of the Spirit. The word 'spirit' here means either the Holy Spirit in person (as it does more clearly in v. 9) or the spirit of man made new by his presence, cf. 5:5+; 1:9+.

c. The Mosaic Law, imposed from without, could not be an inward principle of salvation, 7:7+. Christ, alone, who by his death destroyed our unspiritual nature (lit. 'flesh') in his own person, could destroy sin whose domain the 'flesh' was. Man formerly carnal is now, through union with Christ, spiritual.

d. Lit. 'in the likeness of sinful flesh, and in that flesh...'

e. I.e. the Law's demand for exact punishment of sin.

f. Because of sin, 5:12+, the body is doomed to physical death and is the instrument of spiritual death also; but the Spirit is life, a power of resurrection; see following note.

g. The resurrection of the Christian is intimately dependent on that of Christ, 1 Th 4:14; 1 Co 6:14; 15:20f; 2 Co 4:14; 13:4; Rm 6:5; Ep 2:6; Col 1:18; 2:12f; 2 Tm 2:11. It is by the same power and the same gift of the Spirit, cf. Rm 1:4+, that the Father will raise them to life in their turn. This operation is already being prepared; a new life is making the Christians into sons (v. 14) in the likeness of the Son himself, 8:29+, and they are being incorporated into the risen Christ by faith, 1:16+, and baptism, 6:4+.

So then, my brothers, there is no necessity for us to obey our unspiritual 12 selves or to live unspiritual lives. •If you do live in that way, you are doomed to 13 die; but if by the Spirit you put an end to the misdeeds of the body you will live.

Ga 4:4-7 Children of God

Ga 5:18 Everyone moved^a by the Spirit is a son of God. •The spirit you received 14 sons, and it makes us cry out, 'Abba, Father!'¹⁴ •The Spirit himself and our spirit 16

Glory as our destiny

5:2-5 I think that what we suffer in this life can never be compared to the glory, 18
 2 Co 4:17 as yet unrevealed, which is waiting for us. •The whole creation is eagerly 19
 Col 3:3-4 waiting for God to reveal his sons.^k •It was not for any fault on the part of 20
 Gn 3:17; 6:20 + creation that it was made unable to attain its purpose, it was made so by God;^l
 Ho 4:3 + but creation still retains the hope •of being freed, like us, from its slavery to 21
 2 P 3:12-13 decadence, to enjoy the same freedom and glory as the children of God. •From 22
 Rv 21:1 the beginning till now the entire creation, as we know, has been groaning in 23
 2 Co 5:2-5 one great act of giving birth; •and not only creation, but all of us who possess 24
 Ph 3:20 the first-fruits of the Spirit, we too groan inwardly as we wait for^m our bodies 25
 3:24 + to be set free. •For we must be content to hope that we shall be savedⁿ—our 26
 5:2 +; 7:24 + salvation is not in sight, we should not have to be hoping for it if it were—but, 27
 2 Co 5:7 as I say, we must hope to be saved since we are not saved yet—it is something 28
 Heb 11:1 we must wait for with patience.

5:5 +; 8:15 The Spirit too comes to help us in our weakness. For when we cannot choose 26
 Ga 4:6 words in order to pray properly, the Spirit himself expresses our plea in a way 27
 Jm 4:3,5 that could never be put into words, •and God who knows everything in our 28
 Jr 11:20 + hearts knows perfectly well what he means, and that the pleas of the saints 29 expressed by the Spirit are according to the mind of God.^o

Ep 1:4-14 God has called us to share his glory

Gn 50:20 We know that by turning everything to their good God co-operates with all 28

1 Co 13:1 + A hymn to God's love

5:6-11 After saying this, what can we add? With God on our side who can be against 31
 Gn 22:12,16 us? •Since God did not spare his own Son, but gave him up to benefit us all, 32
 Jn 3:16 we may be certain, after such a gift, that he will not refuse anything he can give.
 2 Co 5:14-21 Could anyone accuse those that God has chosen? When God acquits, •could 33
 1 Jn 4:10 anyone condemn? Could Christ Jesus? No! He not only died for us—he rose 34
 Is 50:8 from the dead, and there at God's right hand he stands and pleads for us.
 Ac 2:23
 Heb 7:25

Nothing therefore can come between us and the love of Christ, even if we are 35 troubled or worried, or being persecuted, or lacking food or clothes, or being 36 threatened or even attacked. •As scripture promised: For your sake we are being 37 2 Tm 3:12 massacred daily, and reckoned as sheep for the slaughter. •These are the trials
 Jn 16:33 through which we triumph, by the power of him who loved us.

For I am certain of this: neither death nor life, no angel, no prince, nothing 38 that exists, nothing still to come, not any power, •or height or depth,^s nor any 39 created thing, can ever come between us and the love of God made visible in 40 Christ Jesus our Lord.

C. THE PLACE OF ISRAEL^a

The privileges of Israel

- 1 9 What I want to say now is no pretence; I say it in union with Christ—it is the truth—my conscience in union with the Holy Spirit assures me of it too. 2 Co 11:29
- 2 What I want to say is this: my sorrow is so great, my mental anguish so endless, 2 Co 12:7+
- 3 I would willingly be condemned^b and be cut off from Christ if it could help my Ex 32:32
- 4 brothers of Israel,^c my own flesh and blood. •They were adopted as sons, they Ga 1:9
- were given the glory and the covenants; the Law and the ritual were drawn up Ep 2:12
- 5 for them, and the promises were made to them. •They are descended from the 1 Th 2:8
- patriarchs and from their flesh and blood came Christ who is above all, God for 3:1-2
- ever blessed!^d Amen. 1:3

h. 'led' seems inadequate: the Holy Spirit is much more than one who inwardly admonishes, he is the principle of a life truly divine, cf. Ga 2:20.

i. The prayer of Christ in Gethsemane, Mk 14:36.

j. Or (Vulg.) 'The Spirit bears witness to our spirit'.

k. Lit. 'waiting for the revelation of the sons of God'. The material world, created for man, shares his destiny. It was cursed for man's sin, Gn 3:17, and is therefore now deformed: impotent and decadent, vv. 19-22. But like man's body, destined to be glorified, it too is to be redeemed, vv. 21,23; it will share the glorious liberty of the children of God, v. 21. For the Greek philosopher matter was evil and the spirit must be delivered from it; Christianity regards matter as itself enslaved and to be set free. In other texts also salvation is extended to creatures (especially angels) other than man, cf. Col 1:20; Ep 1:10; 2 P 3:13; Rv 21:1-5.

l. Lit. 'Creation was subjected to futility; this was not its own fault but the work of him who so subjected it'—i.e. of God who punished man's sin in this way, or of man whose sin was responsible.

m. Add. 'adoptive sonship (and)' which would here have an eschatological sense, but see v. 15.

n. Lit. 'It is through hope that we are saved'. The salvation is eschatological, cf. 5:1-11.

o. Paul insists on the necessity of constant prayer (Rm 12:12; Ep 6:18; Ph 4:6; Col 4:2; 1 Th 5:17; 1 Tm 2:8; 5:5; cf. 1 Co 7:5) taught by Jesus himself (Mt 6:5+; 14:23+) and practised by the early Christians (Ac 2:42+). Paul is always praying for the faithful (Ep 1:16; Ph 1:4; Col 1:3,9; 1 Th 1:2; 3:10; 2 Th 1:11; Phm 4) and asks them to do the same for him (Rm 15:30; 2 Co 1:11; Ep 6:19; Ph 1:19; Col 4:3; 1 Th 5:25; 2 Th 3:1; Phm 22; Heb 13:18), and for each other (2 Co 9:14; Ep 6:18; on prayer for sinners and the sick, cf. 1 Jn 5:16; Jm 5:13-16). These prayers must ask for growth in holiness but also for the removal of all external (1 Th 2:18 and 3:10; Rm 1:10) and internal (2 Co 12:8-9) obstacles to it; we have to pray, too, for the orderly conduct of the country's business (1 Tm 2:1-2). Paul lays special stress on prayers of thanksgiving (Ep 5:4; Ph 4:6; Col 2:7; 4:2; 1 Th 5:18; 1 Tm 2:1) for every gift of God (Ep 5:20; Col 3:17) and particularly for the food God gives us (Rm 14:6; 1 Co 10:31; 1 Tm 4:3-5); he begins all his own letters with a prayer of thanks (Rm 1:8, etc.) and he wants the spirit of gratitude to pervade all the Christians' dealings with each other (1 Co 14:17; 2 Co 1:11; 4:15; 9:11-12). In liturgical gatherings prayers of thanksgiving and praise must predominate (1 Co 11-14) and these sentiments must inspire the hymns that the Christians compose for these occasions (Ep 5:19; Col 3:16). It is the Holy Spirit who inspires the prayer of the Christian, and Paul prefers to emphasise this rather than repeat the traditional Wisdom themes, namely the necessary conditions for prayer and its efficaciousness (cf. Jm 1:5-8; 4:2-3; 5:16-18; 1 Jn 3:22; 5:14-16) which Paul guarantees by the presence of the Spirit of Christ within the Christian, enabling him to pray as a son to his father (Rm 8:15,26-27; Ga 4:6; cf. 6:18; Jude 20), while Christ himself intercedes at the right hand of God (Rm 8:34; cf. Heb 7:25; 1 Jn 2:1). The Father's response is therefore most generous (Ep 3:10). Hence Christians are called 'those who invoke the name of Jesus Christ' (1 Co 1:2; cf. Rm 10:9-13; 2 Tm 2:22; Jm 2:7; Ac 9:14,21; 22:16). On the attitude to be adopted when praying, cf. 1 Co 11:14-16; 1 Tm 2:8.

p. Var. (Vulg.) 'We know that for those who love God everything conspires for good, for all those that he has called...'

q. Christ, the image of God in the primordial creation, Col 1:15+, cf. Heb 1:3, has now come, by a new creation, 2 Co 5:17+, to restore to fallen man the splendour of that image which has been darkened by sin, Gn 1:26+; 3:22-24+; Rm 5:12+. He does this by forming man in the still more splendid image of a son of God (Rm 8:29); thus, sound moral judgement is restored to the 'new man', Col 3:10+, and also his claim to glory which he had sacrificed by sin, Rm 3:23+. This glory which Christ as the image of God possesses by right, 2 Co 4:4, is progressively communicated to the Christian, 2 Co 3:18, until his body is itself clothed in the image of the 'heavenly' man, 1 Co 15:49.

r. Everything has been directed by God to the glory of his elect: it was for this they were called to the faith and justified by baptism; with this, it can be said by anticipation, they are already clothed.

s. The 'powers' 'heights' and 'depths' are probably the mysterious cosmic forces which to the mind of antiquity were in general hostile to mankind. Cf. Ep 1:21; 3:18.

9 a. Paul's theme of justification by faith led him to speak of the righteousness of Abraham, ch. 4. Similarly here the theme of salvation lovingly bestowed by God through the Spirit makes it necessary for him to speak about Israel's case, ch. 9-11, a people which remains unbelieving though it has received the promise of salvation. The subject of these chapters, therefore, is not the problem of individual predestination to glory, or even to faith, but of Israel's part in the development of salvation history, the only problem raised by the statements in the O.T.

b. Lit. anathema, a thing accursed, under a ban, cf. Jos 6:17+ and Lv 27:28+.

c. Actual descendants of Jacob (called 'Israel', Gn 32:29). All the other privileges derive from this: adoptive sonship, Ex 4:22; cf. Dt 7:6+; the glory of God, Ex 24:16+, who dwells with his people, Ex 25:8+; Dt 4:7+; cf. Jn 1:14+; the covenant with Abraham, Gn 15:1+; 15:17+; 17:1+, with Jacob-Israel, Gn 32:29, with Moses, Ex 24:7-8; the worship of the one true God; the Law which embodies his will; the messianic promises, 2 S 7:1+, and physical relationship with Christ.

d. Both the context and the internal development of the sentence imply that this doxology is addressed to Christ. Paul rarely gives Jesus the title 'God', though cf. Tit 2:13, or addresses a doxology to him, cf. Heb 13:21, but this is because he usually keeps this title for the Father, cf. Rm 15:6, etc., and considers the divine persons not so much with an abstract

3:3+ God has kept his promise

Nb 23:19 Does this mean that God has failed to keep his promise? Of course not. 6
 Is 55:10-11 Not all those who descend from Israel are Israel; •not all the descendants of 7 Mt 3:9p Abraham are his true children. Remember: It is through Isaac that your name will
 Gn 21:12 be carried on, •which means that it is not physical descent that decides who are 8
 Jn 8:31-44 the children of God; it is only the children of the promise who will count as the 9
 Gn 18:10 true descendants. •The actual words in which the promise was made were: I shall 10 visit you at such and such a time, and Sarah will have a son. •Even more to the 11 11:5-6 point is what was said to Rebecca when she was pregnant by our ancestor Isaac,
 Gn 25:23 but before her twin children were born and before either had done good or evil. 12
 Mt 1:2-3 In order to stress that God's choice is free, •since it depends on the one who 13 calls, not on human merit, Rebecca was told: the elder shall serve the younger, or as scripture says elsewhere: I showed my love for Jacob and my hatred for Esau. 14

3:5 God is not unjust

Dt 32:4 Does it follow that God is unjust? Of course not. •Take what God said to 14
 Ex 33:19 Moses: I have mercy on whom I will, and I show pity to whom I please. •In other 15
 Ps 147:10f words, the only thing that counts is not what human beings want or try to do, 16
 Ex 9:16 but the mercy of God. •For in scripture he says to Pharaoh: It was for this I raised 17 you up,• to use you as a means of showing my power and to make my name known 18 throughout the world. •In other words, when God wants to show mercy he does, 19 3:7 and when he wants to harden someone's heart he does so. 20
 Ws 12:12 You will ask me, 'In that case, how can God ever blame anyone, since no one 21
 Mt 20:15 can oppose his will?' •But what right have you, a human being, to cross-examine 22
 Is 29:16 God? The pot has no right to say to the potter: Why did you make me this shape? 23

Or else imagine^g that although God is ready to show his anger and display 22

All has been foretold in the Old Testament

Ho 2:25 That is exactly what God says in Hosea: I shall say to a people that was not 25
 1 P 2:10 mine, 'You are my people', and to a nation I never loved, 'I love you'. •Instead of 26
 Ho 2:1 being told, 'You are no people of mine', they will now be called the sons of the living 27
 Is 10:22-23 God.* •Referring to Israel Isaiah had this to say: Though Israel should have as 28
 Ho 2:1 many descendants as there are grains of sand on the seashore, only a remnant will 29
 11:5 be saved, •for without hesitation or delay the Lord will execute his sentence on the 30
 Is 1:9 earth.^m •As Isaiah foretold: Had the Lord of hosts not left us some descendants we 31
 8:4; 10:4, should now be like Sodom, we should be like Gomorrah. 32
 20; 11:7

From this it followsⁿ that the pagans who were not looking for righteousness 30 found it all the same, a righteousness that comes of faith, •while Israel, looking 31 for a righteousness derived from law failed to do what that law required.^o •Why 32 did they fail? Because they relied on good deeds instead of trusting in faith. In 33
 Is 8:14 other words, they stumbled over the stumbling-stone •mentioned in scripture: 34
 Is 28:16 See how I lay in Zion a stone to stumble over, a rock to trip men up—only those 35

10 Brothers, I have the very warmest love for the Jews, and I pray to God for 1 them to be saved. •I can swear to their fervour for God, but their zeal is 2

- 3 misguided.^a •Failing to recognise the righteousness that comes from God, they try to promote their own idea of it, instead of submitting to the righteousness of God.^b •But now the Law has come to an end with Christ, and everyone who has faith may be justified.

The testimony of Moses

- 5 When Moses refers to being justified by the Law, he writes: those who keep the Law will draw life from it. •But the righteousness that comes from faith says this:^c Do not tell yourself you have to bring Christ down—as in the text: Who will go up to heaven? •or that you have to bring Christ back from the dead—as in the text: Who will go down to the underworld?^{2a} •On the positive side it says: The word, that is the faith we proclaim, is very near to you, it is on your lips and in your heart. •If your lips confess that Jesus is Lord and if you believe in your heart that God raised him from the dead,^e then you will be saved. •By believing from the heart you are made righteous; by confessing with your lips you are saved. •When scripture says: those who believe in him will have no cause for shame, it makes no distinction between Jew and Greek: all belong to the same Lord who is rich enough, however many ask his help, •for everyone who calls on the name of the Lord will be saved.

appreciation of their nature as with a concrete appreciation of their functions in the process of salvation. Moreover, he has always in mind the historical Christ in his concrete reality as God made man, cf. Ph 2:5+; Col 1:15+. For this reason he presents Christ as subordinated to the Father, 1 Co 3:23; 11:3, not only in the work of creation, 1 Co 8:6, but also in that of eschatological renewal, 1 Co 15:27f; cf. Rm 16:27, etc. Nevertheless, the title 'Lord', Kyrios, received by Christ at his resurrection, Ph 2:9-11; cf. Ep 1:20-22; Heb 1:3f, is the title given by the LXX to Yahweh in the O.T., Rm 10:9,13; 1 Co 2:16. For Paul Jesus is essentially 'the Son of God', Rm 1:3-4,9; 5:10; 8:29; 1 Co 1:9; 15:28; 2 Co 1:19; Ga 1:16; 2:20; 4:4,6; Ep 4:13; 1 Th 1:10; cf. Heb 4:14, etc., his 'own Son', Rm 8:3,32, 'the Son of his love', Col 1:13, who belongs to the sphere of the divine by right, the sphere from which he came, 1 Co 15:47, being sent by God, Rm 8:3; Ga 4:4. The title 'Son of God' became his in a new way with the resurrection, Rm 1:4+; cf. Heb 1:5; 5:5, but it was not then that he received it since he pre-existed not only as prefigured in the O.T., 1 Co 10:4, but ontologically, Ph 2:6; cf. 2 Co 8:9. He is the Wisdom, 1 Co 1:24,30, and the Image, 2 Co 4:4, by which and in which all things were created, Col 1:15-17; cf. Heb 1:3; 1 Co 8:6, and have been re-created, Rm 8:29; cf. Col 3:10; 1:18-20, because into his own person is gathered the fullness of the godhead and of the universe, Col 2:9+. In him God has devised the whole plan of salvation, Ep 1:3f, and he, no less than the Father, is its accomplishment (cf. Rm 11:36; 1 Co 8:6 and Col 1:16,20). The Father raises to life and judges, so does the Son raise to life (cf. Rm 1:4+; 8:11+ and Ph 3:21) and judge (cf. Rm 2:16 and 1 Co 4:5; Rm 14:10 and 2 Co 5:10). In short, he is one of the three persons enumerated in the trinitarian formulae, 2 Co 13:13+.

e. Like the O.T. writers Paul attributes to God as their ultimate cause (stressing the phrase of Ex: I raised you up) the good and bad actions of men, cf. 1:24f.

f. If man's perversity thus becomes part of God's design, how can man be accused of not doing the will of God? Paul replies, as before in a similar case (3:7; 6:1,15), by disallowing the objection, God being the absolute master of what he has made, the question of injustice cannot arise. Cf. Mt 20:15.

g. Lit. 'But if', an obscure phrase here, to be interpreted by the context. Paul is explaining how the hardening of Pharaoh's heart then, and the unbelief of Israel now, are not acts of injustice if regarded as elements in the plan of God. God could destroy the Jewish people, as he could have destroyed Pharaoh, but he patiently tolerates them: thus (while allowing time to repent, 2:4) he 'shows his anger' (by permitting sins to multiply, cf. ch. 1-3, though even this paves the way to conversion); he 'displays his power' by brushing such obstacles aside, v. 17, as the present antagonism of the Jews towards the gospel; but above all he carries out his merciful plan for the pagans, cf. 11:11-12, to whom the gospel is preached once the Jews have rejected it, cf. Ac 13:5+.

h. Lit. 'in order to (reveal)'; var. 'and (revealed)'.

i. In the Greek, vv. 22-24 are a long conditional clause without an apodosis. Supply 'how, if this supposition is correct, could we speak of injustice in God?' In the long run, everything is directed to the salvation of both pagans and Jews, cf. 11:32.

j. Lit. '(namely) to us whom he has called not only from the Jews but from the pagans'.

k. The story of an Israel welcomed back by God despite its unfaithfulness thus becomes the antetype of the invitation to the pagans, who had no claim, to the messianic feast.

l. The texts cited here proclaim both the infidelity of Israel and the return of a 'remnant', cf. Is 4:3+, in which the promises are safeguarded. They are thus a preparation for ch. 11.

m. One var. (Vulg.) makes the quotation follow the LXX text, which Paul abbreviates.

n. Lit. 'Then what shall we say?' This conclusion introduces the argument of the following chapter where the cause of Israel's infidelity is examined not now as in God but as in Israel itself.

o. Only the Christian can do this, 3:31; 8:4; 10:4; cf. 7:7+; Ac 13:39 'that law': var. (Vulg.) 'that law of righteousness'.

10 a. Like that of Paul before his conversion, Ac 22:3; Ga 1:14; Ph 3:6; cf. 1 Tm 1:13.

b. Righteousness is not something to be won: it is a favour man receives through faith in Christ, cf. 1:16+; 7:7+.

c. The argument is odd at first reading, because the passage of Dt is certainly a eulogy of the righteousness of the Law. But Paul sees in this text, which sums up the whole Law in the precept of love and the 'circumcision of the heart', Dt 30:6,16,20, a presentiment of the new law. The 'word of faith', uttered and made effective by the Spirit of Christ, 8:2,14, is deeper in the heart and sweeter in the mouth than the 'word of the Law' could be.

d. Lit. 'the depths'—of the sea in Dt 30:13, of Sheol in Paul's applied sense. In connection with this text, the Targum had already spoken of the descent of Moses from Sinai and the ascent of Jonah from the depths of the sea.

e. Profession of faith, such as is made at baptism, is the outward expression of the inward commitment of the 'heart'.

Israel has no excuse

Heb 11:6 But they will not ask his help unless they believe in him,^f and they will not 14
 Ac 8:31 believe in him unless they have heard of him, and they will not hear of him unless 15 they get a preacher, •and they will never have a preacher unless one is sent, but 15
 Is 52:7 as scripture says: The footsteps of those who bring good news is a welcome sound.^g
 1:5-1 Not everyone, of course, listens to the Good News. As Isaiah says: Lord, how many 16
 Is 53:1 believed what we proclaimed? •So faith comes from what is preached, and what is 17 preached comes from the word of Christ.^h
 Mt 24:14+ Let me put the question: is it possible that they did not hear? Indeed they 18 Ps 19:4 did; in the words of the psalm, their voiceⁱ has gone out through all the earth, and their message to the ends of the world. •A second question: is it possible that Israel 19 11:1,12 did not understand? Moses answered this long ago: I will make you jealous of Dt 32:21 people who are not even a nation; I will make you angry with an irreligious people.^j
 Is 65:1 Isaiah said more clearly: I have been found by those who did not seek me, and have 20 9:30 revealed myself to those who did not consult me; •and referring to Israel he goes 21
 Is 65:2 on: Each day I stretched out my hand to a disobedient and rebellious people.^k

The remnant of Israel

10:19 1 Let me put a further question then:^a is it possible that God has rejected his 1
 Ps 94:14 people? Of course not. I, an Israelite, descended from Abraham through 2
 2 Co 11:21+ the tribe of Benjamin, •could never agree that God had rejected his people, the 2
 1 K 19:10,14 people he chose specially long ago. Do you remember what scripture says of 3
 Elijah—how he complained to God about Israel's behaviour? •Lord, they have 3 1 K 19:18 killed your prophets and broken down your altars. I, and I only, remain, and they 4 want to kill me. •What did God say to that? I have kept for myself seven 4 10:4 thousand men who have not bent the knee to Baal. •Today the same thing 5
 Is 4:3+ has happened: there is a remnant, chosen by grace. •By grace, you notice, nothing 6 9:12-17 therefore to do with good deeds, or grace would not be grace at all!
 9:30-31 What follows? It was not Israel as a whole that found what it was seeking, 7
 2 Co 3:15 but only the chosen few. The rest were not allowed to see the truth; •as scripture 8 Dt 29:3 says: God has given them a sluggish spirit, unseeing eyes and inattentive ears, and
 Is 29:10 they are still like that today. •And David says: May their own table^b prove a trap 9
 Mt 13:13+ for them, a snare and a pitfall—let that be their punishment; •may their eyes be 10
 Ps 69:22f struck incurably blind, their backs bend for ever.

The Jews to be restored in the future

11:25,30 Let me put another question then: have the Jews fallen for ever, or have they 11
 Mt 21:43 just stumbled?^c Obviously they have not fallen for ever: their fall, though, has 12
 Ac 13:5-11 saved the pagans^d in a way the Jews may now well emulate. •Think of the extent 12
 10:19 to which the world, the pagan world, has benefited from their fall and defection— 13
 Mt 8:11f; then think how much more it will benefit from the conversion of them all. •Let 13
 21:43 me tell you pagans^e this: I have been sent to the pagans as their apostle, and I am 14 proud of being sent, •but the purpose of it is to make my own people envious 14 of you, and in this way save some of them. •Since their rejection meant the 15 reconciliation of the world, do you know what their admission will mean? Nothing 15 less than a resurrection from the dead!^f

The Jews are still the chosen people

A whole batch of bread is made holy if the first handful of dough is made 16
 15:27 holy;^g all the branches are holy if the root is holy. •No doubt some of the branches 17
 Ep 2:11-22 have been cut off, and, like shoots of wild olive, you^h have been grafted amongⁱ
 the rest to share with them^j the rich sap provided by the olive tree itself, •but still, 18 5:2+13:27+ even if you think yourself superior to the other branches, remember that you do 19
 1 Co 1:31 not support the root; it is the root that supports you. •You will say, 'Those 19 branches were cut off on purpose to let me be grafted in!' True, •they were cut off, 20 but through their unbelief; if you still hold firm, it is only thanks to your faith.

21 Rather than making you proud, that should make you afraid. •God did not 22 spare the natural branches, and he is not likely to spare you.* •Do not forget that God can be severe as well as kind: he is severe to those who fell, and he is kind to you, but only for as long as he chooses to be, otherwise you will find 23 yourself cut off too, •and the Jews, if they give up their unbelief, grafted back in 24 your place. God is perfectly able to graft them back again; •after all, if you were cut from your natural wild olive to be grafted unnaturally on to a cultivated olive, it will be much easier for them, the natural branches, to be grafted back on the tree they came from.

The conversion of the Jews

25 There is a hidden reason for all this, brothers, of which I do not want you to be ignorant, in case you think you know more than you do. One section of Israel has become blind, but this will last only until the whole pagan world has 26 entered,ⁱ •and then after this the rest of Israel will be saved as well. As scripture says:^m The liberator will come from Zion, he will banish godlessness from Jacob.
 27 And this is the covenant I will make with them when I take their sins away.

Jb 11:6
Ps 139:6, 17-18
Is 40:13
1 Co 2:11

f. The argument, supported by scripture, is clear:
 if Israel as a people refuses to invoke the name of the Lord, it is because she has been blind to the light that was offered.

g. Lit. 'How beautiful the feet of those who bring good news!'

h. Var. 'word of God'.

i. Of those who preach the gospel.

j. This allusion to Israel's jealousy prepares the way for 11:11,14.

k. In the Hebr. both texts (vv. 20 and 21) refer to the Jewish people, but in the first of these the prophet speaks of Israel 'not invoking the name of Yahweh' and therefore no better than the pagans. Paul's application of v. 20 to the pagans (ethne) is the more easily made in that the Greek version uses ethnos ('nation') in Is 65:1, and not laos (i.e. Israel, the 'people' of God) as in Is 65:2.

11 a. This phrase, used in 10:18,19 to introduce a denunciation of Israel, now prefaces an announcement of its salvation (so also in v. 11). Israel, though unbelieving, 10:21, is still a chosen people, 11:2. The 'remnant', Is 4:3+, its temporary representative, is the pledge of future restoration.

b. This psalm quotation describes the punishment of those who, because they themselves were sated, would not understand the just man's sufferings or his thirst. There may be a reference (as in the Targum) to sacrificial meals; if so, the prophecy is fulfilled to the letter: the Jews are incapable of acknowledging a suffering Messiah precisely because they are so attached to their formal worship.

c. Lit. 'have they stumbled so as to fall (without hope of rising)?'

d. The present unbelief of the Jews is only a false step which God has permitted with a view to the conversion of the pagans, 9:22; 11:12,19,25,30, and ultimately of the Jews themselves: for their own good God will make them 'jealous', 10:19, of the pagans.

e. I.e. the converts to Christianity from paganism.
 Thus even as apostle of the gentiles Paul is working for the salvation of his own people (lit. his 'flesh').

f. This sentence has been variously interpreted.
 The meaning seems to be that if a comparison may be drawn between the conversion of the pagans and 'the reconciliation of the world' (the first stage in the redemptive plan), the conversion of Israel will be such a favour from God that it could be compared only with the final resurrection (the second stage). If this is true, Paul is thinking of the general resurrection at the end of time; but he does not say that this is to take place immediately after Israel's conversion. On the other hand some translate 'life from those who were dead'.

g. Even the unbelieving Israelites still belong to the Chosen People and to some degree share its sacred character, just as the first handful of dough (lit. 'the dough offered as first-fruits') makes the whole offering sacred Nb 15:19-21.

h. The pagan who is now a Christian.

i. Or 'in place of'.

j. Add, 'the root and'.

k. Lit. 'perhaps he will not spare you'; var. 'he will not spare you'.

l. Paul is still speaking of peoples, not of individuals: the Jews en masse, and the pagan world as a whole.

m. The O.T. prophesied that as a result of the Messiah's coming Israel would be cleansed of all her sins. Paul teaches (calling it, lit., a 'mystery', v. 25) that this prophecy, partially fulfilled already in the conversion of the pagans, implies the conversion of the Jewish people also.

EXHORTATION

Spiritual worship

1 Th 4:1 12 Think of God's mercy, my brothers, and worship him, I beg you, in a way 1 1:9 + that is worthy of thinking beings,^a by offering your living bodies as a holy 8:14-16, sacrifice, truly pleasing to God. • Do not model yourselves on the behaviour 2 26-27 of the world around you, but let your behaviour change, modelled by your new Ep 4:23 mind. This is the only way to discover the will of God and know what is good, what it is that God wants, what is the perfect thing to do.

Humility and charity

In the light of the grace I have received I want to urge each one among you 3 Ph 2:3 not to exaggerate his real importance. Each of you must judge himself soberly by 1 Co 12:9; the standard of the faith^b God has given him. • Just as each of our bodies has 4
 13:2 several parts and each part has a separate function, • so all of us, in union with 5
 1 Co 12:12 + Christ, form one body, and as parts of it we belong to each other.^c • Our gifts 6 Ac 11:27 + differ according to the grace given us. If your gift is prophecy, then use it as your 1 Co 12:8-10,28-30 faith suggests; • if administration, then use it for administration; if teaching, 7
 Ep 4:7-11 then use it for teaching. • Let the preachers deliver sermons, the almsgivers give 8 1 P 4:10 freely, the officials be diligent, and those who do works of mercy do them Tt 1:5 + cheerfully.

Do not let your love be a pretence, but sincerely prefer good to evil. • Love 9
 1 Co 12:4 each other as much as brothers should, and have a profound respect for each 10
 1 P 1:22 other.^d • Work for the Lord^e with untiring effort and with great earnestness of 11
 Jn 13:34 faith. • If you have hope, this will make you cheerful. Do not give up if trials 12
 Ph 2:3 come; and keep on praying. • If any of the saints are in need you must share with 13 1 Co 13:13 + them; and you should make hospitality your special care.

Charity to everyone, including enemies^f

Bless those who persecute you: never curse them, bless them. • Rejoice with 14
 1 Co 12:26 those who rejoice and be sad with those in sorrow. • Treat everyone with equal 15
 Si 7:34 kindness; never be condescending but make real friends with the poor. Do not Pr 3:7 allow yourself to become self-satisfied. • Never repay evil with evil but let everyone 17
 1 Th 5:15 see that you are interested only in the highest ideals. • Do all you can to live at 18
 Pr 20:22 peace with everyone. • Never try to get revenge; leave that, my friends, to God's 19
 Pr 3:4 LXX anger.^g As scripture says: Vengeance is mine—I will pay them back, the Lord 2 Co 8:21 promises. • But there is more: If your enemy is hungry, you should give him food,
 1 Co 6:6-7 and if he is thirsty, let him drink. Thus you heap red-hot coals on his head. • Resist 20
 Lv 19:18 evil and conquer it with good. 21

Submission to civil authority^a 13 You must all obey the governing authorities. Since all government comes 1

 1 Tm 2:1-2 from God, the civil authorities were appointed by God, • and so anyone who 2
 Tt 3:1 resists authority is rebelling against God's decision, and such an act is bound
 1 P 2:13-15 to be punished. • Good behaviour is not afraid of magistrates; only criminals 3
 Pr 8:15 have anything to fear. If you want to live without being afraid of authority, you Jr 27:6 must live honestly and authority may even honour you. • The state is there to 4 serve God for your benefit. If you break the law, however, you may well have fear: the bearing of the sword has its significance. The authorities are there to serve God: they carry out God's revenge by punishing wrongdoers. • You must 5 obey, therefore, not only because you are afraid of being punished,^b but also for conscience' sake. • This is also the reason why you must pay taxes, since all 6 government officials are God's officers. They serve God by collecting taxes.

- 7 Pay every government official what he has a right to ask—whether it be direct tax or indirect, fear or honour. Mt 22:21p

Love and law

- 8 Avoid getting into debt, except the debt of mutual love. If you love your fellow Mt 22:34-40 9 men you have carried out your obligations.^c • All the commandments: You shall Jn 13:34 not commit adultery, you shall not kill, you shall not steal,^a you shall not covet, Col 3:14 and so on, are summed up in this single command: You must love your neighbour Ex 20:13-17 as yourself. • Love is the one thing that cannot hurt your neighbour; that is why Dt 5:17-21

Children of the light

- 11 Besides, you know 'the time' has come:^g you must wake up now: our salvation 1 Th 5:4-8 will be daylight soon—let us give up^h all the things we prefer to do under cover 29-31 13 of the dark; let us arm ourselves and appear in the light. • Let us live decently Ep 5:8-16 as people do in the daytime: no drunken orgies, no promiscuity or licentiousness, Col 4:5

Charity towards the scrupulous

- 1 14 If a person's faith is not strong enough,^a welcome him all the same without 1 Co 8; 10:
 2 starting an argument. • People range from those who believe they may eat 14-33 any sort of meat to those whose faith is so weak they dare not eat anything 6:15+ 3 except vegetables. • Meat-eaters must not despise the scrupulous. On the other 1 Th 5:14 hand, the scrupulous must not condemn those who feel free to eat anything they Col 2:16-21 4 choose, since God has welcomed them. • It is not for you to condemn someone Mt 7:1
 else's servant: whether he stands or falls it is his own master's business; he will Jm 4:12 5 stand, you may be sure, because the Lord has power to make him stand. • If Col 2:16
 one man keeps certain days as holier than others, and another considers all days 6 to be equally holy, each must be left free to hold his own opinion. • The one who observes special days does so in honour of the Lord. The one who eats meat also does so in honour of the Lord, since he gives thanks to God; but then the man who abstains does that too in honour of the Lord, and so he also gives God thanks.

12 a. Or 'in a spiritual way', as opposed to the ritual sacrifices of Jews or pagans, cf. Ho 6:6. Cf. Rm 1:9+.

b. 'Faith' is used here to mean the spiritual gifts bestowed by God on the members of the Christian community to ensure its life and growth.

c. The sentence emphasises not so much the identification of Christians with Christ, 1 Co 12:27 as their dependence on one another.

d. Or 'outdo each other in mutual esteem'.

e. Lit. 'Serve the Lord'; var. 'Be ready when opportunity arises' (lit. 'Serve the time').

f. The perspective now, particularly from v. 17 onwards, embraces all mankind.

g. Lit. 'give place... to anger', presumably the anger of God waiting to punish sin.

13 a. Paul here enunciates the principle that all authority, supposing it lawful and for the common good, derives from God. Hence the Christian religion, like its morality, 12:1, enters into civil life also, 13:1-7. Paul does not contradict this even after the first persecutions.

b. Lit. 'not only on account of anger'.

c. Lit. 'fulfilled the law'—apparently law in general, not only the Mosaic Law.

d. Add. (Vulg.) 'you shall not bear false witness'.

e. In Lv the 'neighbour' was a fellow countryman, here it is any member of the human family which is made one in Christ, Ga 3:28; Mt 25:40.

f. Lit. 'that is why love is the law in all its fullness'.

g. The thought is a fundamental one in Paul's moral teaching. The 'time' (kairos) is apparently the eschatological era, called in the Bible the 'latter days', introduced by Christ's death and resurrection and, coextensive with the age of the Church on earth, the age of salvation, 2 Co 6:2+. It is opposed to the era that preceded it by a difference not so much of time as of nature. The Christian, henceforward a 'child of the day', emancipated from the wicked world, Ga 1:4, and from the empire of darkness, belongs to the kingdom of God and of his Son, Col 1:13; he is already a citizen of heaven, Ph 3:20. This entirely new status dominates the whole moral outlook, cf. 6:3f.

h. Lit. 'let us divest ourselves of'; var. 'let us cast away'.

14 a. Christians not sufficiently instructed in the faith and therefore without the firm convictions that would give them a sure conscience, vv. 2,5,22. These considered themselves bound to observe certain days, v. 5, and to abstain from meat or from wine, vv. 2,21, perhaps as a permanent obligation, v. 21. Such ascetical practices were familiar to the pagan world (the Pythagoreans) and the Jewish (the Essenes, John the Baptist). Paul lays down the same general rule as in the similar case of 1 Co 8; 10:14-33; each must act 'for the Lord' as his conscience tells him, vv. 5-6, provided it is not a doubtful conscience, v. 23; but above all, charity must govern the conduct of those 'strong' in the faith, vv. 1,15,19-21 and 15:1-13.

6:10-11 The life and death of each of us has its influence on others; •if we live, we live⁷ for the Lord; and if we die, we die for the Lord, so that alive or dead we belong⁸ to the Lord. •This explains why Christ both died and came to life, it was so that⁹ he might be Lord both of the dead and of the living. •This is also why you should¹⁰ never pass judgement on a brother or treat him with contempt, as some of you have done. We shall all have to stand before the judgement seat of God;^b •as¹¹ scripture says: By my life—it is the Lord who speaks—every knee shall bend before me, and every tongue shall praise God. •It is to God, therefore, that each of us¹² must give an account of himself.

Far from passing judgement on each other, therefore, you should make up¹³ your mind never to be the cause of your brother tripping or falling. •Now I am¹⁴ perfectly well aware, of course, and I speak for the Lord Jesus, that no food is unclean in itself; however, if someone thinks that a particular food is unclean, then it is unclean for him. •And indeed^c if your attitude to food is upsetting your¹⁵ brother,^d then you are hardly being guided by charity. You are certainly not free to eat what you like if that means the downfall of someone for whom Christ died.

In short, you must not compromise your privilege,^e •because the kingdom¹⁶ of God does not mean eating or drinking this or that, it means righteousness and peace and joy brought by the Holy Spirit. •If you serve Christ in this way you¹⁷ will please God and be respected by men. •So let us adopt any custom that leads¹⁸ to peace and our mutual improvement; •do not wreck God's work^f over a²⁰ question of food. Of course all food is clean, but it becomes evil if by eating it you make somebody else fall away.^g •In such cases the best course is to abstain²¹ from meat and wine and anything else that would make your brother trip or fall or weaken in any way.

Hold on to your own belief,^h as between yourself and Godⁱ—and consider²² the man fortunate who can make his decision without going against his conscience.
But anybody who eats in a state of doubt is condemned, because he is not in good²³ faith;^j and every act done in bad faith is a sin.

15 We who are strong have a duty to put up with the qualms of the weak¹ without thinking of ourselves. •Each of us should think of his neighbours and² help them to become stronger Christians. •Christ did not think of himself: the words³ of scripture—the insults of those who insult you fall on me—apply to him. •And⁴ indeed everything that was written long ago in the scriptures was meant to teach⁵ us something about hope from the examples scripture gives of how people who did not give up were helped by God. •And may he who helps us when we refuse⁶ to give up, help you all to be tolerant with each other,^a following the example of Christ Jesus, •so that united in mind and voice you may give glory to the God⁶ and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

An appeal for unity

It can only be to God's glory, then, for you to treat each other in the same⁷ friendly way as Christ treated you. •The reason Christ became the servant of⁸ circumcised Jews was not only so that God could faithfully carry out the promises made to the patriarchs, •it was also to get the pagans to give glory to God for⁹ his mercy,^b as scripture says in one place: For this I shall praise you among the pagans and sing to your name. •And in another place: Rejoice, pagans, with his people, •and in a third place: *Let all the pagans praise the Lord, let all the peoples*¹¹ sing his praises. •Isaiah too has this to say: *The root of Jesse will appear, rising*¹² up to rule the pagans, and in him the pagans will put their hope.

May the God of hope bring you such joy and peace in your faith that the¹³ power of the Holy Spirit will remove all bounds to hope.^c

EPILOGUE

Paul's ministry

- 14 It is not because I have any doubts about you, my brothers; on the contrary
I am quite certain that you are full of good intentions, perfectly well instructed 15 and able to advise each other. •The reason why I have written to you,^d and put some things rather strongly, is to refresh your memories, since God has given me 16 this special position. •He has appointed me as a priest of Jesus Christ, and I am to carry out my priestly duty^e by bringing the Good News from God to the pagans, and so make them acceptable as an offering, made holy by the Holy Spirit. 1:9-10
- 17 I think I have some reason to be proud of what I, in union with Christ Jesus, 18 have been able to do for God. •What I am presuming to speak of, of course, is only what Christ himself has done to win the allegiance of the pagans, using 19 what I have said and done •by the power of signs and wonders, by the power of the Holy Spirit. Thus, all the way along, from Jerusalem to Illyricum,^f I have 20 preached Christ's Good News to the utmost of my capacity. •I have always, however, made it an unbroken rule never to preach where Christ's name has already been heard. The reason for that was that I had no wish to build on other 21 men's foundations; •on the contrary, my chief concern has been to fulfil the text: Those who have never been told about him will see him, and those who have never heard about him will understand. 5:2+

Paul's plans

- 22 That is the reason why I have been kept from visiting you so long,^g •though 23 for many years I have been longing to pay you a visit. Now, however, having 24 no more work to do here,^h •I hope to see you on my way to Spain and, after enjoying a little of your company, to complete the rest of the journey with your 25 good wishes. •First, however, I must take a present of money to the saints in 26 Jerusalem, •since Macedonia and Achaia have decided to send a generous 27 contribution to the poor among the saints at Jerusalem. •A generous contribution as it should be, since it is really repaying a debt: the pagans who share the spiritual possessions of these poor people have a duty to help them with temporal posses-28 sions. •So when I have done this and officially handed overⁱ what has been raised, 29 I shall set out for Spain and visit you on the way. •I know that when I reach you
I shall arrive with rich blessings from Christ.
- 30 But I beg you, brothers, by our Lord Jesus Christ and the love of the Spirit, 31 to help me through my dangers by praying to God for me.^j •Pray that I may 2 Co 1:11

b. Who alone knows the secrets of the heart, cf. 2:16; 1 Co 4:3f.

c. 'And indeed'; var. 'But' or 'Now'.

d. By his taking bad example, or by being scandalised at an action his conscience does not approve.

e. Probably the privilege of Christian liberty of which the 'strong' make use but which may be brought into disrepute, cf. 3:8+.

f. Either the 'weak' man himself or the Christian community, cf. 1 Co 3:9.

g. Lit. 'by eating it with a cause of stumbling' cf. v. 13; that is, according to the context (v. 21 deals with the duties of the 'strong'), while giving 'scandal'. Others interpret while following bad example, cf. v. 14.

h. Var. 'Have you a belief? Hold on to it.'

i. Because it is true and seen as such by God; but charity has a higher claim.

j. 'good faith', lit. 'faith', but here in the sense of right conscience, cf. 14:1+. Other translations 'since he does not act from conviction', or, 'since his action is not prompted by a conviction of faith'.

15 a. I.e. to be thoughtful for each other. Others interpret 'to live in good understanding of each other', 'to live in agreement with each other'.

b. Christ welcomed the pagans, and thus gave glory to God. But by confining his work while on earth to the evangelisation of Israel, cf. Mt 15:24, Christ gave evidence of God's loyalty to his promise, the converted pagans being living evidence rather of God's mercy. Let these in their turn be merciful to their brothers in the faith, cf. 12:1.

c. This blessing resumes the central themes of the doctrinal section of the epistle.

d. Paul once again justifies himself for writing to a church he did not found, cf. 1:5-6,13.

e. The apostolate, even more than the ordinary Christian life, 12:1; cf. Ph 2:12, is a liturgical function, cf. 1:9, the apostle—or rather, through him, Christ, v. 18—makes an offering of men to God.

f. The two extremes of Paul's missionary journeys at the time of writing; whether he had actually entered Illyricum is disputed.

g. Var. 'so many times'.

h. Not that all the pagans there have been converted, but that Paul's task is to lay foundations; he leaves his disciples to build on them, cf. 1 Co 3:6,10; Col 1:7, etc.

i. Lit. 'sealed'.

j. Cf. 2 Co 1:11; Ep 6:19; Col 4:3; 1 Th 5:25; 2 Th 3:1; Heb 13:18.

Ac 20:3,23; 21:10f; 17f,27f escape the unbelievers in Judaea, and that the aid I carry to Jerusalem may be accepted by the saints. •Then, if God wills, I shall be feeling very happy when I come to enjoy a period of rest among you. •May the God of peace be with you all! Amen.

Greetings and good wishes

Ac 18:18 16 ^aI commend to you our sister Phoebe,^b a deaconess of the church at Cenchreae. •Give her, in union with the Lord, a welcome worthy of saints, myself included.

Ac 18:26,26; 1 Co 16:19; 2 Tm 4:19 My greetings to Prisca and Aquila, my fellow workers in Christ Jesus, •who risked death to save my life:^c I am not the only one to owe them a debt of gratitude, all the churches among the pagans do as well. •My greetings also to the church that meets at their house.

Col 4:15; Phm 2; 1 Co 16:15 Greetings to my friend Epaeetus, the first of Asia's gifts to Christ;^d greetings to Mary who worked so hard for you; •to those outstanding apostles Andronicus and Junias, my compatriots and fellow prisoners^e who became Christians before me; •to Ampliatius, my friend in the Lord; •to Urban, my fellow worker in Christ; to my friend Stachys; •to Apelles who has gone through so much for Christ; to everyone who belongs to the household of Aristobulus; •to my compatriot Herodion; to those in the household of Narcissus who belong to the Lord; •to Tryphaena and Tryphosa, who work hard for the Lord; to my friend Persis who has done so much for the Lord; •to Rufus,^f a chosen servant of the Lord, and to his mother who has been a mother to me too. •Greetings to Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermes, Patrobas, Hermas, and all the brothers who are with them; •to Philologus and Julia, Nereus and his sister, and Olympas and all the saints who are with them. •Greet each other with a holy kiss. All the churches of Christ send greetings.^g

Ga 6:11 A warning and first postscript

6:17; Mt 18:17 I implore you, brothers, be on your guard against anybody who encourages trouble or puts difficulties in the way of the doctrine you have been taught. Avoid them.^h •People like that are not slaves of Jesus Christ, they are slaves of their own appetites, confusing the simple-minded with their pious and persuasive arguments. •Your fidelity to Christ, anyway, is famous everywhere, and that makes me very happy about you. I only hope that you are also wise in what is good, and innocent of what is bad. •The God of peace will soon crush Satan beneath your feet. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.ⁱ

Last greetings and second postscript

Ac 16:1+ Timothy, who is working with me, sends his greetings; so do my compatriots, Jason and Sosipater. •I, Tertius, who wrote out this letter, greet you in the Lord. Greetings from Gaius, who is entertaining me and from the whole church that meets in his house. Erastus, the city treasurer, sends his greetings; so does our brother Quartus.

d. Lit. 'the first-fruits of Asia for Christ'. This probably means the first convert in the province of Asia.

f. Possibly the son of Simon of Cyrene, Mk 15:21.

g. This greeting, not found elsewhere in Paul's letters, shows his veneration for the church in Rome.

1 CORINTHIANS

THE FIRST LETTER OF PAUL TO THE CHURCH AT CORINTH

INTRODUCTION

Rm 1:1+ Address and greetings. Thanksgiving

1 I, Paul, appointed by God to be an apostle, together with brother Sosthenes, ¹ send greetings •to the church of God^a in Corinth, to the holy people of Jesus ² Christ, who are called to take their place among all the saints everywhere who pray to our Lord Jesus Christ; for he is their Lord no less than ours. •May God ³ our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ send you grace and peace.

I never stop thanking God for all the graces you have received through ⁴
Jesus Christ. •I thank him that you have been enriched in so many ways, especial- ⁵
ly in your teachers and preachers; •the witness to Christ^b has indeed been strong ⁶ among you •so that you will not be without any of the gifts of the Spirit while ⁷ you are waiting for our Lord Jesus Christ to be revealed;^c •and he will keep you ⁸ steady and without blame^d until the last day, the day^e of our Lord Jesus Christ, because God by calling you has joined you to his Son, Jesus Christ; and God ⁹ is faithful.^f

I. DIVISIONS AND SCANDALS

A. FACTIONS IN THE CORINTHIAN CHURCH

Dissensions among the faithful

All the same, I do appeal to you, brothers, for the sake of our Lord Jesus ¹⁰ Christ, to make up the differences between you, and instead of disagreeing ¹¹ among yourselves, to be united again in your belief and practice. •From what Chloe's people have been telling me, my dear brothers, it is clear that there are serious differences among you. •What I mean are all these slogans that you have, ¹² like: 'I am for Paul', 'I am for Apollos', 'I am for Cephas',^g 'I am for Christ'.^h Has Christ been parcelled out? Was it Paul that was crucified for you? Were you ¹³ baptised in the name of Paul? •I am thankful that I never baptised any of you ¹⁴ after Crispus and Gaius •so none of you can say he was baptised in my name. ¹⁵
Then there was the family of Stephanas, of course, that I baptised too, but no one ¹⁶ else as far as I can remember.

The true wisdom and the false

For Christ did not send me to baptise, but to preach the Good News, and ¹⁷ not to preach that in the terms of philosophyⁱ in which the crucifixion of Christ cannot be expressed. •The language of the cross may be illogical to those who ¹⁸ are not on the way to salvation, but those of us who are on the way see it as God's power to save. •As scripture says: I shall destroy the wisdom of the wise and bring ¹⁹ to nothing all the learning of the learned. •Where are the philosophers now? Where ²⁰

- are the scribes? Where are any of our thinkers today? Do you see now how God has shown up the foolishness of human wisdom? •If it was God's wisdom that human wisdom should not know God, it was because God wanted to save those who have faith through the foolishness of the message that we preach. And so, while the Jews demand miracles and the Greeks look for wisdom, •here are we preaching a crucified Christ; to the Jews an obstacle that they cannot get over, to the pagans madness, •but to those who have been called, whether they are Jews or Greeks, a Christ who is the power and the wisdom of God. •For God's foolishness is wiser than human wisdom, and God's weakness is stronger than human strength.
- Take yourselves for instance, brothers, at the time when you were called: how many of you were wise in the ordinary sense of the word,¹ how many were influential people, or came from noble families? •No, it was to shame the wise that God chose what is foolish by human reckoning, and to shame what is strong that he chose what is weak by human reckoning; •those whom the world thinks common and contemptible are the ones that God has chosen—those who are nothing at all to show up those who are everything. •The human race has nothing to boast about to God, •but you, God has made members of Christ Jesus and by God's doing he has become our wisdom, and our virtue, and our holiness, and our freedom. •As scripture says: if anyone wants to boast, let him boast about the Lord.
- As for me, brothers, when I came to you, it was not with any show of oratory or philosophy, but simply to tell you what God had guaranteed.^a •During my stay with you, the only knowledge I claimed to have was about Jesus, and only about him as the crucified Christ. •Far from relying on any power of my own, I came among you in great 'fear and trembling'^b •and in my speeches and the sermons that I gave, there were none of the arguments that belong to philosophy; only a demonstration of the power of the Spirit. •And I did this so that your faith should not depend on human philosophy but on the power of God.
- But still we have a wisdom to offer those who have reached maturity:^c not a philosophy of our age, it is true, still less of the masters of our age,^d which

b. I.e. what is said by a witness testifying to Christ, 'among you' or 'in you'.

c. When the hidden plans of God are to be made known, Rm 16:25+, Christ will reveal himself at the end of time, the time of his parousia, 1 Co 15:23+, and his Appearing, 1 Tm 6:14+; cf. Lk 17:30; 2 Th 1:7; Heb 9:28; 1 P 1:5,7,13; 4:13. Before this, the Man of Sin will have 'revealed' himself, only to be destroyed by Christ, 2 Th 2:3-8.

d. Cf. Ph 1:10; 2:15f; Ep 1:4; Col 1:22; 1 Th 3:13; 5:23; Jude 24.

e. This 'day of the Lord', 5:5; 2 Co 1:14; 1 Th 5:2; 2 Th 2:2; cf. 2 P 3:10, called also the 'day of Christ', Ph 1:6,10; 2:16, or simply the 'day', 1 Co 3:13; 1 Th 5:4; cf. The fulfilment begins with the first coming of Christ, Lk 17:20-24, and the punishment of Jerusalem, Mt 24:1+; and this final stage in the history of salvation, cf. Ac 1:7+, will be completed by the glorious second coming, 1 Co 1:7+, 15:23+; 1 Tm 6:14+, of the Sovereign Judge, Rm 2:6+; Jm 5:8-9. A cosmic upheaval and renewal will accompany it (cf. Am 8:9+), Mt 24:29p+; Heb 12:26f; 2 P 3:10-13; Rv 20:11; 21:1; cf. Mt 19:28; Rm 8:20-22. This day of light is coming, Rm 13:12; Heb 10:25; Jm 5:8; 1 P 4:7; cf. 1 Th 5:5,8, but exactly when is uncertain, 1 Th 5:1+, meanwhile we must prepare for it. 2 Co 6:2+.

f. Cf. 10:13; 2 Co 1:18; 1 Th 5:24; 2 Th 3:3; 2 Tm 2:13; Heb 10:23; 11:11.

g. Either because Cephas (Peter) had visited the church of Corinth, or because some members of that church paid special allegiance to Peter's authority, acknowledged in other churches.

h. Perhaps these attached themselves to the immediate witnesses of the risen Christ, cf. Ac 1:21f; 10:41, in preference to others, cf. 1 Co 9:1; 2 Co 5:16+; 11:5,23; 12:11; or else they acknowledged no human intermediary between themselves and Christ.

i. Lit. 'wisdom'. This human wisdom (here philosophical speculation and tricks of rhetoric) will be contrasted with the wisdom of God, v. 24 and 2:6f.

j. Lit. 'according to the flesh'. Paul is explaining God's purpose, but at the same time he sardonically reminds the Corinthians that they have no reason to be proud.

2 a. Lit. 'the testimony of God', i.e. to the message of Jesus. Var. 'the mystery of God'.

b. 'fear and trembling': a biblical cliché, cf. Jg 7:3; Ps 2:11; 55:5; Ezk 12:18; Mk 5:33; 1 Co 2:3; 2 Co 7:15; Ep 6:5; Ph 2:12.

c. The 'mature' or 'perfect' (teleiōi) are not an exclusive group of initiates but those who have reached maturity in Christian life and thought. Cf. 14:20; Ph 3:15; Col 4:12; Heb 5:14.

d. Perhaps human rulers or governments; more probably, the evil powers or demons that control the world, cf. 1 Co 15:24-25; Ep 6:12. See also Lk 4:6 and Jn 12:31+; but the reference is perhaps to both, the latter using the former as their tools.

Rm 16:25 + are coming to their end. •The hidden wisdom of God which we teach in our 7 mysteries is the wisdom that God predestined to be for our glory before the ages 8
Eph 3:10 began. •It is a wisdom that none of the masters of this age have ever known, or 9
1 P 1:12 they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory; •we teach what scripture calls: 10
Ps 24:8 the things that no eye has seen and no ear has heard, things beyond the mind of man,
Is 64:3 all that God has prepared for those who love him.
Jr 3:16

These are the very things that God has revealed to us through the Spirit, for 10
Jn 14:26 + the Spirit reaches the depths of everything, even the depths of God. •After all, 11 2 Co 13:13 + the depths of a man can only be known by his own spirit, not by any other man, Jdt 8:14 and in the same way the depths of God can only be known by the Spirit of God.
Pr 20:27 Now instead of the spirit of the world, we have received the Spirit that comes 12
Rm 11:33f from God, to teach us to understand the gifts that he has given us. •Therefore 13
15:44 + we teach, not in the way in which philosophy is taught, but in the way that the 14
Pr 28:5 Spirit teaches us: we teach spiritual things spiritually. •An unspiritual person^h 15
Mt 16:23 is one who does not accept anything of the Spirit of God: he sees it all as nonsense;
Jn 10:26 + it is beyond his understanding because it can only be understood by means of the 16
15:44 + Spirit. •A spiritual man, on the other hand, is able to judge the value of everything, 15
Is 40:13 and his own value is not to be judged by other men.ⁱ •As scripture says: Who 16
Rm 11:34 can know the mind of the Lord, so who can teach him? But we are those who have Ws 9:13 the mind of Christ.^j
7:40

3 Brothers, I myself was unable to speak to you as people of the Spirit: I treated 1
1 Th 2:7 you as sensual men, still infants in Christ. •What I fed you with was milk, 2
Heb 5:12-14 not solid food, for you were not ready for it; and indeed, you are still^k not ready 3
1 P 2:2 for it •since you are still unspiritual. Isn't that obvious from all the jealousy 3
Sj 37:28 and wrangling^b that there is among you, from the way that you go on behaving 4
Ga 5:19-20 like ordinary people? •What could be more unspiritual than your slogans, 'I am 4
Jm 3:16 for Paul' and 'I am for Apollos'?

The place of the Christian preacher

After all, what is Apollos and what is Paul? They are servants who brought 5 the faith to you. Even the different ways in which they brought it were assigned 6 2 Tm 2:6 to them by the Lord. •I did the planting, Apollos did the watering, but God 7 made things grow. •Neither the planter nor the waterer matters: only God, who 8 makes things grow. •It is all one who does the planting and who does the watering, 9 and each will duly be paid according to his share in the work. •We are fellow 9 Ep 2:20-22 workers with God; •you are God's farm, God's building.

By the grace God gave me, I succeeded as an architect and laid the foundations, 10 on which someone else is doing the building. Everyone doing the building must 11
Ps 118:22 work carefully. •For the foundation, nobody can lay any other than the one 12
Is 28:16 which has already been laid, that is Jesus Christ. •On this foundation you can 13
Ac 4:11-12 build in gold, silver and jewels, or in wood, grass and straw, •but whatever the 14
1 P 2:4 material, the work of each builder is going to be clearly revealed when the day 15
1:8 + comes. That day will begin with fire, and the fire will test the quality of each man's 16
Mt 3:11-12p work. •If his structure stands up to it, he will get his wages; •if it is burnt down, 17
1 P 1:7 he will be the loser, and though he is saved himself, it will be as one who has gone 18
Is 43:2 through fire.^d

Didn't you realise that you were God's temple^e and that the Spirit of God was 19
2 Co 6:16 living among you? •If anybody should destroy the temple of God, God 20
Ep 2:20-22 will destroy him, because the temple of God is sacred;^f and you are that temple.

Conclusions

1:17-25 Make no mistake about it: if any one of you thinks of himself as wise, in the 18
Pr 28:26 ordinary sense of the word, then he must learn to be a fool before he really can be 19
Jb 5:13 wise. •Why? Because the wisdom of this world is foolishness to God. As scripture 20 Ps 94:11 says: The Lord knows wise men's thoughts: he knows how useless they are;
or again: God is not convinced by the arguments of the wise. •So there is 21

- 22 nothing to boast about in anything human: •Paul, Apollos, Cephas, the world, 1:12
 23 life and death, the present and the future, are all your servants; •but you belong 6:19; 11:3
 to Christ^e and Christ belongs to God. Rm 8:10
- 1 4 People must think of us as Christ's servants, stewards entrusted with the Lk 12:42-44
 2 mysteries of God. •What is expected of stewards is that each one should be
 3 found worthy of his trust. •Not that it makes the slightest difference to me 4 even pass judgement on myself. •True, my conscience does not reproach me at all, but that does not prove that I am acquitted: the Lord alone is my judge. 2 Co 5:10-11 5 There must be no passing of premature judgement. Leave that until the Lord Mk 7:1
 comes: he will light up all that is hidden in the dark and reveal the secret intentions Lk 12:2-3 of men's hearts. Then will be the time for each one to have whatever praise he Rm 2:16 deserves, from God. Jn 5:44
- 6 Now in everything I have said here, brothers, I have taken Apollos and myself as an example (remember the maxim: 'Keep to what is written');^a it is not 7 for you, so full of your own importance, to go taking sides for one man against 8 another. •In any case, brother, has anybody given you some special right? What Jn 3:27 do you have that was not given to you? And if it was given, how can you boast Ga 6:3 8 as though it were not? •Is it that you have everything you want—that you are Rv 3:17 rich already, in possession of your kingdom, with us left outside? Indeed I wish 9 you were really kings, and we could be kings with you! •But instead, it seems to 2 Co 4:8-12;
 me, God has put us apostles at the end of his parade, with the men sentenced 6:4-10; 11:
 to death; it is true—we have been put on show in front of the whole universe, 23-33
 10 angels as well as men. •Here we are, fools for the sake of Christ, while you are 2 Tm 3:10-11 the learned men in Christ; we have no power, but you are influential; you are 11 celebrities, we are nobodies. •To this day, we go without food and drink and 2 Co 11:27
 12 clothes; we are beaten and have no homes; •we work for our living with our own Ac 18:3+ hands. When we are cursed, we answer with a blessing; when we are hounded, 13 we put up with it; •we are insulted and we answer politely. We are treated as Ps 116:10 the offal of the world, still to this day, the scum of the earth.

An appeal

- 14 I am saying all this not just to make you ashamed but to bring you, as my 15 dearest children, to your senses. •You might have thousands of guardians in Christ, but not more than one father and it was I who begot you in Christ Jesus 16 by preaching the Good News. •That is why I beg you to copy me •and why I have 17 sent you Timothy, my dear and faithful son in the Lord: he will remind you of the way that I live in Christ, as I teach it everywhere in all the churches. Ga 4:19

 19 important, •but I will be visiting you soon, the Lord willing, and then I shall want to know not what these self-important people have to say, but what they 20 can do, •since the kingdom of God is not just words, it is power. •It is for you 2:4+

e. The 'Glory' is the manifestation of Yahweh's power, Ex 24:16+, the incommunicable attribute of God. The title 'Lord of Glory' implies the same dignity for Jesus as that of Yahweh himself.

f. A free combination of Is 64:3 and Jr 3:16, or possibly a quotation from the Apocalypse of Elijah.

g. Lit. 'comparing spiritual things with spiritual'. Exact meaning obscure. Other possible renderings 'demonstrating for spiritual men how spiritual truths hold together'; 'spiritual truths being thus suited to spiritual men'; 'submitting spiritual truths to the judgement of men of the Spirit'.

h. Psychikos: man left to his own natural resources. Cf. the note on soma psychikon of 15:44.

i. A defensive remark: Paul, a 'spiritual' man, is not to be judged by the Corinthians who are 'sensual', 3:1-3.

j. Var. 'of the Lord'.

a. Om. 'still'.

b. Add. 'and dissension'.

c. Or 'fellow-workers in God's employment'.

d. This is not a direct reference to purgatory but several Doctors of the Church have taken it as a pasis for that doctrine.

e. Naos: more precisely the innermost part of the Temple, the 'sanctuary' where God dwells.

f. I.e. consecrated and reserved to God: to lay hands on it is sacrilege.

g. Cf. 1:12; 6:19; 11:3; 2 Co 10:7; Rm 6:11+, 15+; 8:9; Mk 9:41.

4 a. Obscure. Perhaps a citation of a proverb familiar to the Corinthian Jews; perhaps a gloss deprecating some insertion by a copyist.

B. INCEST IN CORINTH

5 I have been told as an undoubted fact that one of you is living with his father's wife.^a This is a case of sexual immorality among you that must be unparalleled even among pagans. •How can you be so proud of yourselves? You should be in mourning. A man who does a thing like that ought to have been expelled from the community. •Though I am far away in body, I am with you in spirit, and have already condemned the man who did this thing as if I were actually present. •When you are assembled together in the name of the Lord Jesus,^b and I am spiritually present with you, then with the power of our Lord Jesus he is to be handed over to Satan so that his sensual body may be destroyed and his spirit saved on the day of the Lord.^c

The pride that you take in yourselves is hardly to your credit. You must know how even a small amount of yeast is enough to leaven all the dough, •so get rid of all the old yeast, and make yourselves into a completely new batch of bread, unleavened as you are meant to be. Christ, our passover, has been sacrificed; let us celebrate the feast, then, by getting rid of all the old yeast of evil and wickedness, having only the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.^d

When I wrote in my letter to you^e not to associate with people living immoral lives, •I was not meaning to include all the people in the world who are sexually immoral, any more than I meant to include all usurers and swindlers or idol-worshippers. To do that, you would have to withdraw from the world altogether. What I wrote was that you should not associate with a brother Christian^f who is leading an immoral life, or is a usurer, or idolatrous, or a slanderer, or a drunkard, or is dishonest; you should not even eat a meal with people like that. •It is not my business to pass judgement on those outside.^g Of those who are inside, you can surely be the judges. •But of those who are outside, God is the judge.

You must drive out this evil-doer from among you.

C. RECOURSE TO THE PAGAN COURTS

6 How dare one of your members take up a complaint against another in the lawcourts of the unjust^a instead of before the saints? •As you know, it is the saints who are to 'judge the world';^b and if the world is to be judged by you, how can you be unfit to judge trifling cases? •Since we are also to judge angels, it follows that we can judge matters of everyday life; •but when you have had cases of that kind, the people you appointed to try them were not even respected in the Church.^c •You should be ashamed: is there really not one reliable man among you to settle differences between brothers •and so one brother brings a court case against another in front of unbelievers? •It is bad enough for you to have lawsuits at all against one another: oughtn't you to let yourselves be wronged, and let yourselves be cheated? •But you are doing the wronging and the cheating, and to your own brothers.

You know perfectly well that people who do wrong will not inherit the kingdom of God: people of immoral lives, idolaters, adulterers, catamites, sodomites, •thieves, usurers, drunkards, slanderers and swindlers will never inherit the kingdom of God.^d •These are the sort of people some of you were once, but now you have been washed clean, and sanctified, and justified through the name of the Lord Jesus Christ and through the Spirit of our God.^e

'For me there are no forbidden things';^f maybe, but not everything does good. I agree there are no forbidden things for me, but I am not going to let anything dominate me. •Food is only meant for the stomach, and the stomach for food; yes, and God is going to do away with both of them. But the body—this is not

- 14 meant for fornication;^a it is for the Lord, and the Lord for the body. •God, who raised the Lord from the dead, will by his power raise^b us up too.
- 15 You know, surely, that your bodies are members making up the body of Christ; do you think I can take parts of Christ's body and join them to the body
- 16 of a prostitute? Never! •As you know, a man who goes with a prostitute is one
- 17 body with her, since the two, as it is said, become one flesh. •But anyone who is joined to the Lord is one spirit with him.
- 18 Keep away from fornication. All the other sins are committed outside the
- 19 body; but to fornicate is to sin against your own body. •Your body, you know, is the temple of the Holy Spirit, who is in you since you received him from God.
- 20 You are not your own property; •you have been bought and paid for.^c That is why you should use your body for the glory of God.^d

II. ANSWERS TO VARIOUS QUESTIONS

A. MARRIAGE AND VIRGINITY^a

Ep 5:22-33 +

- 1 7 Now for the questions about which you wrote. Yes, it is a good thing for
- 2 a man not to touch a woman; •but since sex is always a danger, let each
- 3 man have his own wife and each woman her own husband. •The husband must give his wife what she has the right to expect, and so too the wife to the husband.
- 4 The wife has no rights over her own body; it is the husband who has them. In the
- 5 same way, the husband has no rights over his body; the wife has them. •Do not refuse each other except by mutual consent, and then only for an agreed time, to leave yourselves free for prayer; then come together again in case Satan should
- 6 take advantage of your weakness to tempt you. •This is a suggestion, not a rule:
- 7 I should like everyone to be like me, but everybody has his own particular gifts from God, one with a gift for one thing and another with a gift for the opposite.
- 8 There is something I want to add for the sake of widows and those who are
- 9 not married: it is a good thing for them to stay as they are, like me, •but if they cannot control the sexual urges, they should get married, since it is better to be married than to be tortured.
- 10 For the married I have something to say, and this is not from me but from
- 11 the Lord: a wife must not leave her husband — •or if she does leave him, she must either remain unmarried or else make it up with her husband—nor must a husband send his wife away.

Mt 19:12

1 Tm 5:11-14 +

Mt 5:32p; 19:9

5 a. His stepmother; cf. Lv18:8.

b. Var. 'of our Lord Jesus Christ'.

c. Not just excommunicated, or expelled from the community, v. 13, but consigned to Satan to be punished. The punishment, however, is intended to convert the man: his 'spirit', that is his soul, is to be saved. Cf. 11:30-32.

d. The Jews removed all yeast from their houses at Passover time, Ex 12:1+, and ate only unleavened bread ('azymes'). Christ crucified (our 'passover', i.e. our paschal lamb) is the one sacrifice for all, cf. Jn 19:36+. The Christian is united with the sacrificed and risen Christ in an unending Passover: he must therefore remove 'the old yeast', i.e. 'evil and wickedness', and use unleavened bread, i.e. 'sincerity and truth', instead.

e. The 'pre-canonical' letter, see Introduction to The Letters of St Paul.

f. Lit. 'a brother'.

g. Those who do not belong to the community, cf. Mk 4:11; Col 4:5; 1 Th 4:12; 1 Tm 3:7. The expression is of Jewish origin, cf. Si, prologue v. 5.

6 a. The pagan magistrates. Not that the Corinthian judges were more corrupt than others but they had not been 'justified' by God through faith in Christ. Hence Paul's play on words: how could they administer 'justice' for those who were 'justified', i.e. the 'saints', or members of the Christian community?

b. Side by side with Christ, the sovereign judge.

c. I.e. the pagan judges, cf. Mt 15:26+; 18:17.

An alternative translation 'If therefore you have such everyday cases, set those to try them who are of no account whatever in the Church', that is to say, the least respected of the Christians. The invitation would be then sarcastic: the disputes are so trifling that the most ignorant could deal with them.

d. Cf. 15:50; Ga 5:21; Ep 5:5; Rv 21:8; 22:15.

e. Note the trinitarian formula, cf. 2 Co 13:13+.

f. Probably one of Paul's own sayings the meaning of which has been distorted by the libertines.

g. Against the libertines who maintained that fornication was as necessary for the body as food and drink.

h. Var. 'has raised'.

i. Lit. 'You have been bought for a price'.

j. Lit. 'Glorify (Vulg. adds 'and carry') God in your body'.

7 a. Not a formal treatise on marriage and virginity but a series of replies, probably in the same order as questions were put to Paul. Hence the repetitions and apparent contradictions. The main points are: 1. As a general rule, each should keep the state of life in which his call to the faith found him. 2. Virginity is a higher calling than marriage, and spiritually more profitable. 3. Marriage is a safeguard for those incapable of absolute continence.

1 P 3:1 The rest is from me and not from the Lord. If a brother has a wife who is an 12 unbeliever, and she is content to live with him, he must not send her away; and if a woman has an unbeliever for her husband, and he is content to live with 13 her, she must not leave him. •This is because the unbelieving husband is made 14 one with the saints through his wife, and the unbelieving wife is made one with the saints through her husband. If this were not so, your children would be unclean, whereas in fact they are holy.^b •However, if the unbelieving partner 15 does not consent, they may separate; in these circumstances, the brother or sister^c is not tied.^d God has called you^e to a life of peace. •If you are a wife, it 16 may be your part to save your husband, for all you know; if a husband, for all you know, it may be your part to save your wife.

7:20,24; 11:16 For the rest, what each one has is what the Lord has given him and he should 17 continue as he was when God's call reached him. This is the ruling that I give

1 M 1:15 in all the churches. •If anyone had already been circumcised at the time of 18 his call, he need not disguise it, and anyone who was uncircumcised at the time of his call need not be circumcised; •because to be circumcised or 19 uncircumcised means nothing: what does matter is to keep the commandments of God. •Let everyone stay as he was at the time of his call. •If, when you were 20 called, you were a slave, do not let this bother you; but if you should have the 21

Rm 6:15+ Ep 6:5-9 Col 3:22-24 the chance of being free, accept it. •A slave, when he is called in the Lord, becomes 22

Rm 6:18,22 the Lord's freedman, and a freeman called in the Lord becomes Christ's slave. 23
 You have all been bought and paid for; do not be slaves of other men.^f •Each 24
 one of you, my brothers, should stay as he was before God at the time of his call.

About remaining celibate, I have no directions from the Lord but give my 25 own opinion as one who, by the Lord's mercy, has stayed faithful. •Well then, 26
 I believe that in these present times of stress^g this is right: that it is good for a man 27 to stay as he is. •If you are tied to a wife, do not look for freedom; if you are 28 free of a wife, then do not look for one. •But if you marry, it is no sin, and it is 29 not a sin for a young girl to get married. They will have their troubles, though, in their married life,^h and I should like to spare you that.

2 Co 6:2+ Heb 13:14 2 Co 6:8-10 Brothers, this is what I mean: our time is growing short. Those who have 29 wives should live as though they had none, •and those who mourn should live as 30 though they had nothing to mourn for; those who are enjoying life should live as though there were nothing to laugh about; those whose life is buying things should live as though they had nothing of their own; •and those who have to 31 deal with the world should not become engrossed in it.ⁱ I say this because the world as we know it is passing away.

Mt 19:12 I would like to see you free from all worry. An unmarried man can devote 32 himself to the Lord's affairs, all he need worry about is pleasing the Lord; •but 33 a married man has to bother about the world's affairs and devote himself to pleasing his wife: •he is torn two ways. In the same way an unmarried woman, 34 like a young girl, can devote herself to the Lord's affairs; all she need worry about is being holy in body and spirit. The married woman, on the other hand, has to worry about the world's affairs and devote herself to pleasing her husband.
 I say this only to help you, not to put a halter round your necks, but simply to 35 make sure that everything is as it should be, and that you give your undivided attention to the Lord.

Si 7:25 Still, if there is anyone who feels that it would not be fair to his daughter to 36 let her grow too old for marriage, and that he should do something about it, he is free to do as he likes: he is not sinning if there is a marriage. •On the other 37 hand, if someone has firmly made his mind up, without any compulsion and in complete freedom of choice, to keep his daughter as she is, he will be doing a good thing. •In other words, the man who sees that his daughter is married 38 has done a good thing but the man who keeps his daughter unmarried has done something even better.^j

Rm 7:2 A wife is tied as long as her husband is alive. But if the husband dies, she is 39

- 40 free to marry anybody she likes, only it must be in the Lord.^k •She would be happier, in my opinion, if she stayed as she is—and I too have the Spirit of God,^l I think.

B. FOOD OFFERED TO IDOLS^a

General principles

Rm 14

- 1 8 Now about food sacrificed to idols. 'We all have knowledge'; yes, that is so, but knowledge gives self-importance—it is love that makes the building grow.
- 2 A man may imagine he understands something, but still not understand anything in the way that he ought to. •But any man who loves God is known^b by him.
- 3 Well then, about eating food sacrificed to idols: we know that idols do not really exist in the world and that there is no god but the One. •And even if there were things called gods, either in the sky or on earth—where there certainly seem to be 'gods' and 'lords' in plenty^c—still for us there is one God, the Father, from whom all things come and for whom we exist; and there is one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom all things come and through whom we exist.

The claims of love

- 7 Some people, however, do not have this knowledge. There are some who have been so long used to idols that they eat this food as though it really had been sacrificed to the idol, and their conscience, being weak, is defiled by it. •Food, of course, cannot bring us in touch with God: we lose nothing if we refuse to eat, we gain nothing if we eat. •Only be careful that you do not make use of this freedom in a way that proves a pitfall for the weak.
- 10 Suppose someone sees you, a man who understands, eating in some temple of an idol; his own conscience, even if it is weak, may encourage him^d to eat food which has been offered to idols. •In this way your knowledge could become the ruin of someone weak, of a brother for whom Christ died. •By sinning in this way against your brothers, and injuring their weak consciences, it would be Christ against whom you sinned. •That is why, since food can be the occasion of my brother's downfall, I shall never eat meat again in case I am the cause of a brother's downfall.

b. 'Sanctification' and 'holiness' here, as frequently in the Bible, mean not so much the perfection of a man's life as its precondition—dedication to God and adoption by him, cf. Ac 9:13+. By marrying one of God's people a pagan is brought into a special relationship with the true God and with his Church.

c. That is, the Christian partner.

d. This is known as 'the Pauline privilege'.

e. Var. 'us'.

f. Spiritually slaves to their outlook and convictions.

g. Lit. 'because of the present (or imminent) distress'.

h. Lit. 'in the flesh', not however referring, as in 7:2,9, to concupiscence.

i. Lit. 'should not use it to the full'.

j. In the classical world a father made what arrangements he thought fit for his daughter. Some interpreters see in this passage a reference to the practice of a man and woman living together under vows of strict chastity, for which there may be some evidence though only from a later date. In this case, read 'virgin' for 'daughter' in vv. 36-38.

8 a. The frequent feasts and public ceremonies in antiquity were always accompanied by sacrifice! Portions of the sacrificial food (eidolytha) went to the gods, the priests and the donors. What remained was either eaten at a sacred meal or sold in the markets. This situation provided several difficulties for Christians: could they take part in a sacred meal; buy meat that had been sacrificed to idols; accept invitations to eat in a pagan house? Paul answers these specific difficulties, 10:14-22 and 23-30. In principle, enlightened Christians are completely free to decide for themselves, 8:1-6; 10:15,25,29-30, but they must avoid leading astray other Christians who are not yet emancipated from their pre-conversion ideas, 8:7-13; 10:23-24,28-29. Paul makes no reference to the Decree of Jerusalem, Ac 15:20-29, and does not even seem to have heard about it, Ac 15:1+.

b. In the biblical sense, i.e. 'loved'. Cf. Ho 2:22+.

c. Paul is simply stating a fact. The 'gods' are the mythical gods of Olympus, the 'lords' are divinised human beings.

d. Lit. 'be built up'; ironical, cf. 8:1.

9 a. Though free to do whatever he thinks best about food sacrificed to idols a Christian must be guided by charity. Paul himself, as he goes on to say, had given up out of charity some of his rights as an apostle.

k. She must marry a Christian.

l. Var. 'of Christ'.

2 Co 3:2 still be an apostle to you who are the seal of my apostolate in the Lord. •My 3 answer to those who want to interrogate me is this: •Have we not every right 4
 Lk 8:2-3 to eat and drink?^b •And the right to take a Christian woman^c round with us, 5
 Mt 12:46+ like all the other apostles and the brothers of the Lord and Cephas? 6
 Jn 1:42 Are Barnabas and I the only ones who are not allowed to stop working? •Nobody 7
 Ac 4:36+ ever paid money to stay in the army, and nobody ever planted a vineyard and 18:3+ refused to eat the fruit of it. Who has there ever been that kept a flock and did not
 2 Tm 2:6 feed on the milk from his flock?

These may be only human comparisons, but does not the Law itself say the 8 same thing? •It is written in the Law of Moses: You must not put a muzzle on the 9
 Lk 12:6,24 ox when it is treading out the corn. Is it about oxen that God is concerned, •or is 10
 1 Tm 5:18 there not an obvious reference to ourselves? Clearly this was written for our sake 10:6+ to show that the ploughman ought to plough in expectation, and the thresher to Rm 15:27 thresh in the expectation of getting his share. •If we have sown spiritual things 11 for you, why should you be surprised if we harvest your material things? •Others 12 are allowed these rights over you and our right is surely greater? In fact we have 4:12 never exercised this right. On the contrary we have put up with anything rather than obstruct the Good News of Christ in any way. •Remember that the ministers 13 serving in the Temple get their food from the Temple and those serving at the Mt 10:10p altar can claim their share from the altar itself. •In the same sort of way the Lord 14 directed that those who preach the gospel should get their living from the gospel.
 2 Co 11:9 However, I have not exercised any of these rights, and I am not writing all 15 this to secure this treatment for myself. I would rather die than let anyone take away something that I can boast of.^d •Not that I do boast of preaching the gospel, 16
 Ac 4:20; since it is a duty which has been laid on me; I should be punished if I did not 9:15-16; 22:14-15; 26:16-18 preach it! •If I had chosen this work myself, I might have been paid for it, but 17
 as I have not, it is a responsibility which has been put into my hands. •Do you 18 2 Co 11:7 know what my reward is? It is this: in my preaching, to be able to offer the Good News free, and not insist on the rights which the gospel gives me.

So though I am not a slave of any man I have made myself the slave of 19 everyone so as to win as many as I could. •I made myself a Jew to the Jews, to 20 win the Jews; that is, I who am not a subject of the Law made myself a subject of the Law to those who are the subjects of the Law, to win those who are subject Ga 4:12 to the Law. •To those who have no Law, I was free of the Law myself (though 21 not free from God's law, being under the law of Christ) to win those who have Rm 15:1; 2 Co 11:29 no Law. •For the weak I made myself weak. I made myself all things to all men in 22 order to save some^e at any cost; •and I still do this, for the sake of the gospel, 23 to have a share in its blessings.

All the runners at the stadium are trying to win, but only one of them gets 24
 Ga 5:7+ the prize. You must run in the same way, meaning to win. •All the fighters at 25
 Ws 5:16 the games go into strict training; they do this just to win a wreath that will wither 26
 Ph 3:14 away, but we do it for a wreath that will never wither. •That is how I run, intent 27 did, for scripture says: After sitting down to eat and drink, the people got up to amuse themselves. • We must never fall into sexual immorality: some of them did, and twenty-three thousand met their downfall in one day. • We are not to put the Lord^f to the test: some of them did, and they were killed by snakes. • You must never complain: some of them did, and they were killed by the Destroyer. All this happened to them as a warning, and it was written down to be a lesson for us who are living at the end of the age.^g • The man who thinks he is safe must be careful that he does not fall. • The trials that you have had to bear are no more than people normally have. Sacrificial feasts. No compromise with idolatry

This is the reason, my dear brothers, why you must keep clear of idolatry. I say to you as sensible people: judge for yourselves what I am saying. • The blessing-cup^h that we bless is a communion with the blood of Christ, and the bread that we break is a communion with the body of Christ. • The fact that there is only one loaf means that, though there are many of us, we form a single body because we all have a share in this one loaf. • Look at the other Israel, the race,ⁱ where those who eat the sacrifices are in communion with the altar. • Does this mean that the food sacrificed to idols has a real value, or that the idol itself is real? • Not at all. It simply means that the sacrifices that they offer they sacrifice to demons who are not God. I have no desire to see you in communion with demons. • You cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of demons. You cannot take your share at the table of the Lord and at the table of demons. • Do we want to make the Lord angry; are we stronger than he is?

'For me there are no forbidden things', but not everything does good. True, there are no forbidden things, but it is not everything that helps the building to grow. • Nobody should be looking for his own advantage, but everybody for the other man's. • Do not hesitate to eat anything that is sold in butchers' shops: there is no need to raise questions of conscience; • for the earth and everything that is in it belong to the Lord. • If an unbeliever invites you to his house, go if

e. Var. (Vulg.) 'all'.

f. In this passage Paul is using contemporary sporting terms.

10. a. Before reverting to the problem of food sacrificed to idols, Paul quotes the O.T. to remind Corinthians about the dangers of idolatry so as to prevent them joining in the actual sacrificial meals, 10:14-22.

b. As Christians are now baptised 'into' Christ (Rm 6:3; Ga 3:27), i.e. to be united with him.

c. Passing through the Red Sea in v. 2 suggests Christian baptism; here manna and water from the rock suggest the Eucharist. Christians took the description in Ex of the liberation from Egypt as a symbol of liberation from sin by Christ, who is symbolised by Moses, cf. Jn 1:21+; 13:1+. This comparison was implied by Jesus when he linked his Eucharist to the Passover-supper, cf. Mt 26:17-29p; 1 Co 5:7. This accounts for the many Exodus references in the Easter liturgy.

d. Allusion to the legend that the rock from which Moses made water flow accompanied the Israelites on their travels through the wilderness. Jewish writers had already tended to identify this rock with Yahweh himself, and had supported this identification with references to Ex 17:6, and to the O.T. use of 'Rock of Israel' as a title for Yahweh, cf. Ps 18:2+. Paul credits the pre-existent Christ with the attributes of Yahweh.

e. Lit. 'types' (τύποι). The purpose in the events, intended by God, was to prefigure in the history of Israel the spiritual realities of the messianic age (which are known as 'antitypes', 1 P 3:21, but cf. Heb 9:24). These 'typological' (or less accurately, 'allegorical', Ga 4:24) meanings in the O.T. narrative, though not consciously intended by the authors, are nevertheless valid and necessary for the understanding of scripture, since the pattern of God's working on the physical plane does in fact reflect his eternal purposes fulfilled in the incarnation to become the spiritual realities of the messianic age. Typological meanings of O.T. events are often pointed out by the authors of the N.T., as though the sole purpose of Israel's written history had been to provide types for the instruction of Christians. Paul does this, v. 11 and 9:9; Rm 4:23f; 5:14; 15:4; cf. 2 Tim 3:16, and some books like Jn and Heb are largely based on a typological interpretation of the O.T.

you want to, and eat whatever is put in front of you, without asking questions just to satisfy conscience. •But if someone says to you, 'This food was offered in sacrifice', then, out of consideration for the man that told you, you should not eat it, for the sake of his scruples; •his scruples, you see, not your own. Why should my freedom depend on somebody else's conscience? •If I take my share with thankfulness, why should I be blamed for food for which I have thanked God?

Conclusion

Whatever you eat, whatever you drink, whatever you do at all, do it for the glory of God. •Never do anything offensive to anyone—to Jews or Greeks or to the Church of God; •just as I try to be helpful to everyone at all times, not anxious for my own advantage but for the advantage of everybody else, so that they may be saved.

11 Take me for your model, as I take Christ.

C. DECORUM IN PUBLIC WORSHIP

Women's behaviour at services

You have done well in remembering me so constantly and in maintaining the traditions^a just as I passed them on to you. •However, what I want you to understand is that Christ is the head of every man, man is the head of woman, and God is the head of Christ. •For a man to pray or prophesy with his head covered is a sign of disrespect to his head.^b •For a woman, however, it is a sign of disrespect to her head^c if she prays or prophesies unveiled; she might as well have her hair shaved off. •In fact, a woman who will not wear a veil ought to have her hair cut off.^d If a woman is ashamed to have her hair cut off or shaved, she ought to wear a veil.

A man should certainly not cover his head, since he is the image of God and reflects God's glory; but woman is the reflection of man's glory. •For man did not come from woman; no, woman came from man; •and man was not created for the sake of woman, but woman was created for the sake of man. •That is the argument for women's covering their heads with a symbol of the authority^e over them, out of respect for the angels.^f •However, though woman cannot do without man, neither can man do without woman, in the Lord; •woman may come from man, but man is born of woman—both come from God.

Ask yourselves if it is fitting for a woman to pray to God without a veil; and whether nature itself does not tell you that long hair on a man is nothing to be admired, •while a woman, who was given her hair as a covering, thinks long hair her glory?

To anyone who might still want to argue: it is not the custom with us, nor in the churches of God.^g

The Lord's Supper

Now that I am on the subject of instructions, I cannot say that you have done well in holding meetings that do you more harm than good. •In the first place, I hear that when you all come together as a community, there are separate factions among you, and I half believe it—•since there must no doubt be separate groups among you, to distinguish those who are to be trusted. •The point is, when you hold these meetings, it is not the Lord's Supper^h that you are eating, since when the time comes to eat, everyone is in such a hurry to start his own supper that one person goes hungry while another is getting drunk. •Surely you have homes for eating and drinking in? Surely you have enough respect for the community of God not to make poor people embarrassed? What am I to say to you? Congratulate you? I cannot congratulate you on this.

- 23 For this is what I received from the Lord, and in turn passed on to you: that 24 on the same night that he was betrayed, the Lord Jesus took some bread, •and thanked God for it and broke it, and he said, 'This is my body, which is for you;'
 25 do this as a memorial of me'. •In the same way he took the cup after supper, and said, 'This cup is the new covenant in my blood. Whenever you drink it, do 26 this as a memorial of me.' •Until the Lord comes, therefore, every time you eat 27 this bread and drink this cup, you are proclaiming his death, •and so anyone who eats the bread or drinks the cup of the Lord unworthily will be behaving unworthily towards the body and blood of the Lord.
- 28 Everyone is to recollect himself before eating this bread and drinking this 29 cup; •because a person who eats and drinksⁱ without recognising the Body^k
 30 is eating and drinking his own condemnation. •In fact that is why many of you 31 are weak and ill and some of you have died.^l •If only we recollected ourselves, 32 we should not be punished like that. •But when the Lord does punish us like that, it is to correct us and stop us from being condemned with the world.
- 33 So to sum up, my dear brothers, when you meet for the Meal, wait for one 34 another. •Anyone who is hungry should eat at home, and then your meeting will not bring your condemnation. The other matters I shall adjust when I come.

Spiritual gifts^a

- 1 12 Now my dear brothers, I want to clear up a wrong impression about 2 spiritual gifts. •You remember that, when you were pagans, whenever 3 you felt irresistibly drawn,^b it was towards dumb idols? •It is for that reason that I want you to understand that on the one hand no one can be speaking under the influence of the Holy Spirit and say, 'Curse Jesus', and on the other hand, no one can say, 'Jesus is Lord' unless he is under the influence of the Holy Spirit.

The variety and the unity of gifts

- 4 There is a variety of gifts but always the same Spirit; •there are all sorts of 5 service to be done, but always to the same Lord; •working in all sorts of different 7 ways in different people, it is the same God who is working in all of them.^c •The particular way in which the Spirit is given to each person is for a good purpose.
 8 One may have the gift of preaching with wisdom^d given him by the Spirit; another 9 may have the gift of preaching instruction^e given him by the same Spirit; •and another the gift of faith^f given by the same Spirit; another again the gift of healing, 10 through this one Spirit; •one, the power of miracles; another, prophecy;^g

 A Christian who prayed with head covered insulted Christ his leader; he should not hide Christ's glory but reflect it 'with uncovered face', cf. 2 Co 3:18.

h. The supper commemorating Christ's last supper with his disciples during which he instituted the Eucharist. Before the liturgical meal the Corinthians held this ordinary meal, the earliest form of the agape. Paul disapproves of this custom, v. 34, and condemns its abuses, vv. 21-22.

i. Var. 'This is my body, broken for you'.

k. Add. 'unworthily'.

l. The Body of the Lord.

1. Lit. 'fallen asleep'. Evidently Paul considers the sickness and death of some Corinthians to have been a punishment for irreverence to 'the body and blood of the Lord'.

12 a. The spiritual gifts (charismata) granted by the Holy Spirit to some members of the community witnessed to the Spirit's presence and helped the Church to function while its hierarchy was still in a rudimentary state. There were so many gifts, and some were so eccentric and noisy, that they tended to produce disorder. Hence Paul's admonitions: 1. All these gifts come from the Spirit. 2. All are given for the benefit of the community. 3. Their respective values are to be judged by their usefulness to the community. 4. The gift of prophecy (prophetia) is vastly superior to the gift of tongues (glossolalia) of which the Corinthians are so proud. 5. Finally, it is better to have charity than any of the charismata.

b. Allusion to the frenzies and orgies of some pagan cults.

c. Note again the trinitarian formulation, cf. 6:11; 2 Co 13:13+.

d. Probably the gift of preaching: the central Christian truths about God and God's life in us: this is the 'perfect teaching' of Heb 6:1. Cf. also 1 Co 2:6-16.

another the gift of recognising spirits;^h another the gift of tonguesⁱ and another the ability to interpret them. •All these are the work of one and the same Spirit, 11 who distributes different gifts to different people just as he chooses.

The analogy of the body^j

Just as a human body, though it is made up of many parts, is a single unit 12 because all these parts, though many, make one body, so it is with Christ.^k •In 13 the one Spirit we were all baptised, Jews as well as Greeks, slaves as well as citizens, and one Spirit was given to us all to drink.

Nor is the body to be identified with any one of its many parts. •If the foot 14 were to say, 'I am not a hand and so I do not belong to the body', would that 15 mean that it stopped being part of the body? •If the ear were to say, 'I am not 16 an eye, and so I do not belong to the body', would that mean that it was not a part of the body? •If your whole body was just one eye, how would you hear anything? 17 If it was just one ear, how would you smell anything?

Instead of that, God put all the separate parts into the body on purpose. •If 18 all the parts were the same, how could it be a body? •As it is, the parts are many 19 but the body is one. •The eye cannot say to the hand, 'I do not need you', nor can 20 the head say to the feet, 'I do not need you'.

What is more, it is precisely the parts of the body that seem to be the weakest 22 which are the indispensable ones; •and it is the least honourable parts of the 23 body that we clothe with the greatest care. So our more improper parts get decorated •in a way that our more proper parts do not need. God has arranged 24 the body so that more dignity is given to the parts which are without it, •and so 25 that there may not be disagreements inside the body, but that each part may be equally concerned for all the others. •If one part is hurt, all parts are hurt with 26 it. If one part is given special honour, all parts enjoy it.

Now you together are Christ's body; but each of you is a different part of it. 27 In the Church, God has given the first place to apostles, the second to prophets, 28 the third to teachers;^l after them, miracles, and after them the gift of healing; helpers,^m good leaders,ⁿ those with many languages. •Are all of them apostles, 29 or all of them prophets, or all of them teachers? Do they all have the gift of miracles, •or all have the gift of healing? Do all speak strange languages, and 30 all interpret them?

The order of importance in spiritual gifts. Love

Be ambitious for the higher gifts. And I am going to show you a way that is 31 better than any of them.

13 If I have all the eloquence of men or of angels, but speak without love,^a 1 I am simply a gong booming or a cymbal clashing. •If I have the gift of 2 prophecy, understanding all the mysteries there are, and knowing everything, and if I have faith in all its fulness, to move mountains, but without love, then 3 I am nothing at all. •If I give away all that I possess, piece by piece, and if I even 4 whatever.

Love is always patient and kind; it is never jealous; love is never boastful 4 or conceited; •it is never rude or selfish; it does not take offence, and is not 5 resentful. •Love takes no pleasure in other people's sins but delights in the truth; 6 it is always ready to excuse, to trust, to hope, and to endure whatever comes. 7

Love does not come to an end. But if there are gifts of prophecy, the time 8 will come when they must fail; or the gift of languages, it will not continue for ever; and knowledge—for this, too, the time will come when it must fail. For our knowledge is imperfect^c and our prophesying is imperfect; •but once 9 perfection comes, all imperfect things will disappear. •When I was a child, I used 10 to talk like a child, and think like a child, and argue like a child, but now I am 11 a man, all childish ways are put behind me. •Now we are seeing a dim reflection 12 in a mirror; but then we shall be seeing face to face. The knowledge that I have now is imperfect; but then I shall know as fully as I am known.^d

- 13 In short,^e there are three things that last:^f faith, hope and love; and the greatest of these is love.

Spiritual gifts: their respective importance in the community

- 1 14 You must want love more than anything else; but still hope for the spiritual
2 gifts as well, especially prophecy. •Anybody with the gift of tongues speaks
3 to God, but not to other people; because nobody understands him when he 4 talks in the spirit about mysterious things. •On the other hand, the man who 5 prophesies does talk to other people, to their improvement, their encouragement
6 and their consolation. •The one with the gift of tongues talks for his own 7 benefit, but the man who prophesies does so for the benefit of the community.
8 While I should like you all to have the gift of tongues, I would much rather you 9 could prophesy, since the man who prophesies is of greater importance than the

h. The gift of knowing if charismata were spiritual, natural, or evil.

i. On the charisma of 'tongues' (glossolalia) cf. Ac 2:4+.

j. Paul uses the classical analogy of society as a single body with many parts but his concept of the Body of Christ goes back to the memory of his own conversion, cf. Ac 9:4f; Ga 1:15f, to faith in Jesus whose body, raised from the dead and given life by the Spirit, Rm 1:4+, became the 'first-fruits' of a new creation, 1 Co 15:23. The words spoken by the Lord at Paul's conversion, 'I am Jesus, whom you are persecuting', imply that Christians are identified with the risen Christ. In Paul's writings, Christians are bodily united with the risen body, Rm 8:11, by baptism, 1 Co 12:13; cf. Rm 6:4+, and the Eucharist, 1 Co 10:16f, which make them parts of Christ's body, 1 Co 6:15, united in such a way that he and they together form the Body of Christ (what is now called 'the mystical body'), 1 Co 12:27; Rm 12:4f. This rather realistic teaching of 1 Co is taken up later on and developed in the Letters of the Captivity, where the basic idea remains the same, i.e. humans are reconciled to God by becoming parts of, Ep 5:30, Christ's body which was physically dead but is now spiritually alive, Ep 2:14-18, Col 1:22. The stress however is on the unity of the Body that brings all Christians together in one Spirit, Ep 4:4; Col 3:15, and on the identification of the Body with the Church, Ep 1:22f; 5:23; Col 1:18,24. Having thus personified the body, Ep 4:12f; Col 2:19, Paul asserts that Christ is its Head, Ep 1:22; 4:15f; 5:23; Col 1:18; 2:19 (cf. 1 Co 12:21). This assertion probably developed from the concept of Christ as Head of all Powers, Col 2:10. Eventually, in its widest sense, Paul includes in his concept of the Body the entire cosmos as unified under the Lord Christ, Ep 1:23+. Cf. Jn 2:21+.

k. The way a human body gives unity to all its component parts is the way Christ, as unifying principle of his Church, gives unity to all Christians in his Body.

l. The regular teachers appointed for each separate church, cf. Ac 13:1+.

m. Lit. 'helpings': voluntary gifts to works of charity.

n. Administrators and guides of the churches.

13 a. Love (agape) has no possessiveness and is not a desire for satisfaction: it wants to satisfy the other. The supreme charity is God's love for us, 1 Jn 4:19, that made him give his Son so that sinners might be reconciled, Rm 5:8; 8:32-39; 2 Co 5:18-21; Ep 2:4-7; cf. Jn 3:16f; 1 Jn 4:9-10, and become not only God's chosen ones, Ep 1:4, but God's sons, 1 Jn 3:1. This love is attributed to God (the Father), Rm 5:5; 8:39; 2 Co 13:11,13; Ph 2:1; 2 Th 2:16; cf. 1 Jn 2:15, but as it is identical with God's nature, 1 Jn 4:7f,16, it is found in the Son, Rm 8:35,37,39; 2 Co 5:14; Ep 3:19; 1 Tm 1:14; 2 Tm 1:13, so the Son loves the Father as the Son is loved by the Father, Ep 1:6; Col 1:13; cf. Jn 3:35; 10:17; 14:31, and as the Father loves us, so the Son loves the human race, Jn 13:1,34; 14:21;

15:9, which he was sent to save, 2 Co 5:14f; Ga 2:20; Ep 5:2,25; 1 Tm 1:14f; cf. Jn 15:13; 1 Jn 3:16; Rv 1:5. This is the same love that the Holy Spirit, Rm 15:30; Col 1:8, gives Christians, Rm 5:5; cf. Ga 5:22, to help them to carry out, Rm 8:4, the essential commandment of the Law, which is love of God and neighbour, Mt 22:37-40p; Rm 13:8-10; Ga 5:14. To love friends, and enemies, Mt 5:43-48p, is not only the necessary consequence of God's love for us, but actually proves that God loves us, 1 Jn 3:17; 4:20f, and it is the new commandment laid down by Christ, Jn 13:34f; 15:12,17; 1 Jn 3:23; etc., and constantly emphasised by his disciples, Rm 13:8; Ga 5:13f; Ep 1:15; Ph 2:2f; Col 1:4; 1 Th 3:12; 2 Th 1:3; Phm 5:7; cf. Jm 2:8; 1 P 1:22; 2:17; 4:8; 1 Jn 2:10; 3:10f,14; etc. This is how Paul loves the Christians of his own churches, 2 Co 2:4; 12:15; etc., and how they love him, Col 1:8; 1 Th 3:6; etc. Love presupposes sincerity, humility, selflessness and self-sacrifice, Rm 12:9f; 1 Co 13:4-7; 2 Co 6:6; Ph 2:2f, service, Ga 5:13; cf. Heb 6:10, mutual help, Ep 4:2; cf. Rm 14:15; 2 Co 2:7f. Love shows itself in the way we behave, 2 Co 8:8-11,24; cf. 1 Jn 3:18, and the way we obey the Lord's commands, Jn 14:15; 1 Jn 5:2f, etc., and give effect to our faith, Ga 5:6; cf. Heb 10:24. Love holds the community together, Col 3:14; cf. 2 P 1:7, and it 'covers up many sins', 1 P 4:8; cf. Lk 7:47. Since love of neighbour springs from love of God, its motive cannot be fear, Rm 8:28-39; cf. 1 Jn 4:17f. Nor can we be charitable without truth, Ep 4:15, cf. 2 Th 2:10, and it is this that enables us to make moral judgements, Ph 1:9, and gives us spiritual understanding of the divine mystery, Col 2:2; cf. 1 Jn 4:7, and spiritual knowledge of the otherwise unknowable love of Christ, Ep 3:17-19; cf. 1 Co 8:1-3; 13:8-12. Since Christ, Ep 3:17, and the whole Trinity, 2 Co 13:13+; cf. Jn 14:15-23; 1 Jn 4:12, live in the soul that has this love, it fosters the theological virtues, cf. Rm 1:16+; 5:2+, in any person where it is the dominant characteristic, 1 Co 13:13. Love is the only eternal virtue, 1 Co 13:8, and will only be perfect in the vision, 1 Co 13:12; cf. 1 Jn 3:2, when God gives his lovers the gifts he has promised, 1 Co 2:9; Rm 8:28; Ep 6:24; 2 Tm 4:8; cf. c. Lit. 'in part'.

d. I.e. by God.

e. Or 'Meanwhile'.

f. Or 'In short, then, we are left with these three things'. This association of the three theological virtues, which is found earlier in 1 Th 1:3 and which was probably in use before Paul's time, recurs frequently in his letters, though the order varies: 1 Th 5:8; 1 Co 13:7,13; Ga 5:5f; Rm 5:1-5; 12:6-12; Col 1:4-5; Ep 1:15-18; 4:2-5; 1 Tm 6:11; Tt 2:2. Cf. Heb 6:10-12; 10:22-24; 1 P 1:3-9,21f. Faith and charity are associated in 1 Th 3:6; 2 Th 1:3; Phm 5, faith and fortitude in 2 Th 1:4, love and fortitude in 2 Th 3:5. Cf. 2 Co 13:13.

man with the gift of tongues, unless of course the latter offers an interpretation so that the church may get some benefit.

Now suppose, my dear brothers, I am someone with the gift of tongues, and I come to visit you, what use shall I be if all my talking reveals nothing new, tells you nothing, and neither inspires you nor instructs you? •Think of a musical instrument, a flute or a harp: if one note on it cannot be distinguished from another, how can you tell what tune is being played? •Or if no one can be sure which call the trumpet has sounded, who will be ready for the attack? It is the same with you: if your tongue does not produce intelligible speech, how can anyone know what you are saying? You will be talking to the air. •There are any number of different languages in the world, and not one of them is meaningless,^a •but if I am ignorant of what the sounds mean, I am a savage to the man who is speaking, and he is a savage to me. •It is the same in your own case: since you aspire to spiritual gifts, concentrate on those which will grow to benefit the community.

That is why anybody who has the gift of tongues must pray for the power of interpreting them. •For if I use this gift in my prayers, my spirit may be praying but my mind is left barren.^b •What is the answer to that? Surely I should pray not only with the spirit but with the mind as well? And sing praises not only with the spirit but with the mind as well? •Any uninitiated person will never be able to say Amen to your thanksgiving, if you only bless God with the spirit, for he will have no idea what you are saying. •However well you make your thanksgiving, the other gets no benefit from it. •I thank God that I have a greater gift of tongues than all of you, •but when I am in the presence of the community I would rather say five words that mean something than ten thousand words in a tongue.

Brothers, you are not to be childish in your outlook. You can be babies as far as wickedness is concerned, but mentally you must be adult. •In the written Law it says:^c Through men speaking strange languages and through the lips of foreigners, I shall talk to the nation, and still they will not listen to me, says the Lord. •You see then, that the strange languages are meant to be a sign not for believers but for unbelievers, while on the other hand, prophecy is a sign not for unbelievers but for believers. •So that any uninitiated people or unbelievers, coming into a meeting of the whole church where everybody was speaking in tongues, would say you were all mad; •but if you were all prophesying and an unbeliever or uninitiated person came in, he would find himself analysed and judged by everyone speaking; •he would find his secret thoughts laid bare, and then fall on his face and worship God, declaring that God is among you indeed.

Regulating spiritual gifts

So, my dear brothers, what conclusion is to be drawn? At all your meetings, let everyone be ready with a psalm or a sermon or a revelation, or ready to use his gift of tongues or to give an interpretation; but it must always be for the common good. •If there are people present with the gift of tongues, let only two or three, at the most, be allowed to use it, and only one at a time, and there must be someone to interpret. •If there is no interpreter present, they must keep quiet in church and speak only to themselves and to God. •As for prophets, let two or three of them speak, and the others attend to them. •If one of the listeners receives a revelation, then the man who is already speaking should stop. •For you can all prophesy in turn, so that everybody will learn something and everybody will be encouraged. •Prophets can always control their prophetic spirits, •since God is not a God of disorder but of peace.

As in all the churches of the saints, •women are to remain quiet at meetings since they have no permission to speak; they must keep in the background as the Law itself lays it down. •If they have any questions to ask, they should ask

III. THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD^a

The fact of the resurrection

- 1 15 Brothers, I want to remind you of the gospel I preached to you, the gospel 2 that you received and in which you are firmly established; •because the gospel will save you only if you keep believing exactly what I preached to you—believing anything else will not lead to anything.
- 3 Well then, in the first place, I taught you what I had been taught myself, 4 namely that Christ died for our sins, in accordance with the scriptures; •that he was buried; and that he was raised to life on the third day, in accordance with 5 the scriptures; •that he appeared first to Cephas and secondly to the Twelve.
6 Next he appeared to more than five hundred of the brothers at the same time, 7 most of whom are still alive, though some have died; •then he appeared to 8 James, and then to all the apostles; •and last of all he appeared to me too; it was as though I was born when no one expected it.^b 11:2+; 23
Lk 1:2
Ac 2:23+
- 9 I am the least of the apostles; in fact, since I persecuted the Church of God, 10 I hardly deserve the name apostle; •but by God's grace that is what I am, and the grace that he gave me has not been fruitless. On the contrary, I, or rather 11 the grace of God that is with me, have worked harder than any of the others; •but what matters is that I preach what they preach, and this is what you all believed.
12 Now if Christ raised from the dead is what has been preached,^c how can 13 some of you be saying that there is no resurrection of the dead? •If there is no 14 resurrection of the dead, Christ himself cannot have been raised, •and if Christ has not been raised then our preaching is useless and your believing it is useless; 15 indeed, we are shown up as witnesses who have committed perjury before God, 16 because we swore in evidence before God^d that he had raised Christ to life. •For 17 if the dead are not raised, Christ has not been raised, •and if Christ has not been 18 raised, you are still in your sins. •And what is more serious, all who have died in 19 Christ have perished. •If our hope in Christ has been for this life only, we are the most unfortunate^e of all people. 6:14
- 20 But Christ has in fact been raised from the dead, the first-fruits of all who 21 have fallen asleep. •Death came through one man and in the same way the 14 a. Lit. '...sounds in the world but not one soundless'.

b. This prayer of ecstatic utterance is so freed by 'the spirit' that it contains nothing limited enough to be grasped by the 'mind'.

c. The quotation is very free.

d. Or, he is unnoticed by God who does not acknowledge him as his own. Var. 'if he refuses to recognise this, well let him' (Paul losing patience). For a similar way of putting an end to discussion, cf. 11:16; Ph 3:15.

15 a. Christ's resurrection, of which the apostles are witnesses, vv. 2-8, cf. Ac 1:8+, is the decisive proof, vv. 12-28, of the future resurrection of all, which is something the O.T. first of all suspects and hopes for, Ps 16:10+; Jb 19:25+; Ezk 37:10+, but eventually asserts quite plainly, 2 M 7:9+. This is why the resurrection of Christ is the foundation of faith, vv. 12-19.

The risen Christ can be called the first-fruit, v. 20, not only heralding but causing the resurrection of all Christians, vv. 20-28, cf. Rm 8:11+.

b. An allusion to the abnormal, sudden and surgical nature of Paul's birth into the apostolic family. He makes no distinction between the sort of apparition that took place on the Damascus road and the sort of apparitions of Jesus that took place between the resurrection and the ascension.

c. Paul is talking to those who believe Christ rose from the dead. To believe this and to lead a Christian life necessarily imply belief in the resurrection of the dead.

d. Or 'through God'.

e. 'This life' has become for Christians a state from which life in Christ, through the resurrection, will deliver them. If there is no resurrection, they have lost their deliverance. Note that the possibility of the soul's immortality without the resurrection of the body is not considered.

15:45-49 resurrection of the dead has come through one man. •Just as all men die in Adam, 22
 Si 25:24 so all men will be brought to life in Christ; •but all of them in their proper order: 23
 1 Th 4:16 Christ as the first-fruits and then, after the coming^f of Christ, those who belong 24
 Ep 1:22 to him. •After that will come the end, when he hands over the kingdom to God 24
 the Father, having done away with every sovereignty, authority and power.^g Ps 110:1 For he must be king until he has put all his enemies under his feet •and the last 25
 Rv 20:14; 21:4 of the enemies to be destroyed is death, for everything is to be put under his feet. 26
 Ps 8:6 —Though when it is said^h that everything is subjected, this clearly cannot include 27
 Rm 6:9 the One who subjected everything to him. •And when everything is subjected to 28
 Ph 3:21 him, then the Son himself will be subject in his turn to the One who subjected 28
 Rm 9:5 + Ep 4:6 all things to him, so that God may be all in all.
 Col 3:11

If this were not true, what do people hope to gain by being baptised for 29
 the dead?ⁱ If the dead are not ever going to be raised, why be baptised on their 30 behalf? •What about ourselves? Why are we living under a constant threat? 30 2 Co 4:10-12 I face death every day, brothers, and I can swear it by the pride that I take in you 31
 Ph 1:26 in Christ Jesus our Lord. •If my motives were only human ones, what good would 32
 Ws 2:6 it do me to fight the wild animals at Ephesus?^j •You say: Let us eat and drink 33
 2 Co 1:8 today; tomorrow we shall be dead. You must stop being led astray: 'Bad friends 34
 Js 22:13 ruin the noblest people'.^k •Come to your senses, behave properly, and leave sin 34
 Lk 12:19 alone; there are some of you who seem not to know God at all; you should be 34 14:38 ashamed.

The manner of the resurrection

Ga 6:8 Someone may ask, 'How are dead people raised, and what sort of body do they 35
 Jn 12:24 have when they come back?' •They are stupid questions. Whatever you sow in the 36 ground has to die before it is given new life •and the thing that you sow is not 37 what is going to come; you sow a bare grain, say of wheat or something like that, 38 and then God gives it the sort of body that he has chosen: each sort of seed gets 38 its own sort of body.

Everything that is flesh is not the same flesh: there is human flesh, animals' 39 flesh, the flesh of birds and the flesh of fish. •Then there are heavenly bodies and 40
 there are earthly bodies; but the heavenly bodies have a beauty of their own and 41
 Dn 12:13 the earthly bodies a different one. •The sun has its brightness, the moon a different 41 brightness, and the stars a different brightness, and the stars differ from each 42 other in brightness. •It is the same with the resurrection of the dead: the thing 42 that is sown is perishable but what is raised is imperishable; •the thing that is 43 sown is contemptible but what is raised is glorious; the thing that is sown is weak 44
 2:14-15 + 2 Co 5:1 but what is raised is powerful; •when it is sown it embodies the soul, when it is 44
 Heb 4:12 + Jude 19 + raised it embodies the spirit.^l

If the soul has its own embodiment, so does the spirit have its own embodiment.
 Gn 2:7 The first man, Adam, as scripture says, became a living soul;^m but the last Adam 45
 15:20-28 + has become a life-giving spirit. •That is, first the one with the soul, not the spirit, 46 and after that, the one with the spirit. •The first man, being from the earth, is 47
 Dn 7:13 earthly by nature; the second man is from heaven. •As this earthly man was, so 48
 Rm 8:29 + Ph 3:21 are we on earth; and as the heavenly man is, so are we in heaven. •And we, who 49 have been modelled on the earthly man, will be modelled on the heavenly man.

Jn 3:5-6 Or else, brothers, put it this way: flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom 50
 6:10 + of God: and the perishable cannot inherit what lasts for ever. •I will tell you 51
 1 Th 4:15-17 something that has been secret: that we are not all going to die, but we shall all 52 be changed.ⁿ •This will be instantaneous, in the twinkling of an eye, when the 52
 Nb 10:3 + J1 2:1 + last trumpet sounds. It will sound, and the dead will be raised, imperishable, 53
 Mt 24:31 + 2 Co 5:1-5 and we shall be changed as well,^o •because our present perishable nature must 53 put on imperishability and this mortal nature must put on immortality.

A hymn of triumph. Conclusion

When this perishable nature has put on imperishability,^p and when this 54

- mortal nature has put on immortality, then the words of scripture^a will come true: Death is swallowed up in victory. • Death, where is your victory? Death, where is your sting? • Now the sting of death is sin, and sin gets its power from the Law. So let us thank God for giving us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Never give in then, my dear brothers, never admit defeat; keep on working at the Lord's work always, knowing that, in the Lord, you cannot be labouring in vain.

- 16 Now about the collection made for the saints:^a you are to do as I told the churches in Galatia to do. • Every Sunday,^b each one of you must put aside what he can afford, so that collections need not be made after I have come. When I am with you, I will send your offering to Jerusalem by the hand of whatever men you give letters of reference to; • if it seems worth while for me to go too, they can travel with me. I shall be coming to you after I have passed through Macedonia—and I am doing no more than pass through Macedonia—and I may be staying with you, perhaps even passing the winter, to make sure that it is you who send me on my way wherever my travels take me. • As you see, I do not want to make it only a passing visit^c to you and I hope to spend some time with you, the Lord permitting. • In any case I shall be staying at Ephesus until Pentecost • because a big and important door^d has opened for my work and there is a great deal of opposition. If Timothy comes, show him that he has nothing to be afraid of in you: like me, he is doing the Lord's work, • and nobody is to be scornful of him. Send

f. Parousia (presence), a Greek word adopted by early Christians to indicate the glorious coming of Christ on his 'day', 1 Co 1:8+, at the end of time, Mt 24:3+; cf. also 1 Th 2:19; 3:13; 4:15; 5:32; 2 Th 2:1; Jm 5:7,8; 2 P 1:16; 3:4,12; 1 Jn 2:28. In 2 Th 2:8,9 the same word is used to indicate the coming of the Lawless One. Cf. the similar terms 'revelation', 1 Co 1:7+, and 'appearing', 1 Tm 6:14+.

g. All forces hostile to the sovereignty of God, cf. 1 Co 2:6; Ep 1:21; Col 1:16; 2:15; 1 P 3:22.

h. When the whole cosmos has been subjected to him, Jesus will go to the Father and say his task is complete. The translation 'scripture says' is incorrect.

i. What this practice was is unknown: Paul does not say if he approved of it or not; he uses it merely for an ad hominem argument.

j. What episode Paul is referring to is unknown.

k. Quoted from Menander's Thais: it may have become a popular proverb.

l. Lit. It is sown a physical (psychikon) body, it is raised a spiritual (pneumatikon) body. In Paul, as in the O.T., psyche (Hebr. nephesh; cf. Gn 2:7) is what gives life to animals, to the human body, 1 Co 15:45; or it is the actual 'life' of the body, Rm 16:4; Ph 2:30; 1 Th 2:8, cf. Mt 2:20; Mk 3:4; Lk 12:20; Jn 10:11; Ac 20:10; etc., its 'living soul', 2 Co 1:23. The term can also mean any human being, Rm 2:9; 13:1; 2 Co 12:15; Ac 2:41,43, etc. As it only gives natural life, 1 Co 2:14; cf. Jude 19, it is less important than pneuma by which a human life is divinised by a process that begins through the gift of the Spirit, Rm 5:5+; cf. 1:9+, and is completed after death. Greek philosophers thought of the higher soul (the nous) escaping from 'the body', to survive immortally. Christians thought of immortality more in terms of the restoration of the whole person, involving a resurrection of the body effected by the Spirit or divine principle which God withdrew from human beings because of sins, Gn 6:3, but restored to all who are united to the risen Christ, Rm 1:4+; 8:11, who is the 'heavenly' man and life-giving Spirit, 1 Co 15:45-49. The 'body' is no longer psychikon but pneumatikon, it is incorruptible, immortal, 1 Co 15:53, glorious, 1 Co 15:43; cf. Rm 8:18; 2 Co 4:17; Ph 3:21; Col 3:4, no longer subject to the laws of matter, Jn 20:19,26; it does not even answer the description of matter, Lk 24:16. Psyche can be used in a wider sense as the opposite of the body to indicate what it is in a human being that behaves and feels, Ph 1:27; Ep 6:6; Col 3:23; cf. Mt 22:37p; 26:38p; Lk 1:46; Jn 12:27; Ac 4:32; 14:2; 1 P 2:11; etc., or even to indicate the spiritual and immortal soul, Mt 10:28, 39p; Ac 2:27; Jm 1:21; 5:20; 1 P 1:9; Rv 6:9; etc.

m. Something that is alive because it has a psyche giving it a merely natural life, subject to decay and corruption.

n. The Vulg. reading 'we all die but we shall not all be changed' is incorrect.

o. I.e. those who will be alive at the time, among whom Paul could theoretically have been included, cf. 1 Th 5:1+.

p. Om. 'When this perishable nature has put on imperishability'.

q. A free quotation.

16 a. On this collection see Rm 15:26-28; Ga 2:10; 2 Co 8:9; Ac 24:17. The 'saints' (cf. 2 Co 8:4) are the Christians in Jerusalem who from the earliest days stood in need of help, Ac 11:29-30. Paul was very anxious to have this collection made, since he regarded it as a sign and a pledge of unity between the churches he had founded and those of the Judaeo-Christians.

b. Lit. 'First day of the week', i.e. 'The Lord's Day', cf. Ac 20:7; Rv 1:10; Mt 28:1.

c. An alternative translation 'This time, I do not want to pay you a passing visit'; this would presuppose a short visit recently made, which is hardly likely.

d. The same image is used in 2 Co 2:12; Col 4:3; it indicates Paul's missionary opportunities, cf. Rv 3:8.

Ga 6:11+ This greeting is in my own hand—Paul.

C 4:18 If anyone does not love the Lord, a curse on him. 'Maran atha.'ⁱ

Ph 4:5 The grace of the Lord Jesus be with you.

My love is with you all in Christ Jesus.

16 e. The phrase is ambiguous: either Paul and the 'brothers' of Ephesus are waiting for Timothy, or Paul expects Timothy and the 'brothers' who are his travelling companions (of whom Erastus was one, Ac 19:22).

f. In case his presence aggravated party feeling among his own supporters, 1:12; 3:4-6; 4:6.

g. Probably these had brought the letter from the Corinthians to Paul, 7:1.

h. The Roman province is meant.

i. These Aramaic words ('the Lord is coming') had passed into liturgical use: they expressed the hope that the parousia would not be long delayed. An alternative reading is Marana tha (Lord, come!), Rv 22:20. Cf. Rm 13:12; Ph 4:5; Jm 5:8; 1 P 4:7.

THE SECOND LETTER OF PAUL TO THE CHURCH AT CORINTH

INTRODUCTION

Address and greetings. Thanksgiving

Rm 1:1+

1 From Paul, appointed by God to be an apostle of Christ Jesus, and from Timothy, one of the brothers, to the church of God at Corinth and to all the saints in the whole of Achaia. •Grace and peace to you from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Ac 16:1+

Ac 9:13+

3 Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, a gentle Father and the God of all consolation, •who comforts us in all our sorrows, so that we can offer others, in their sorrows, the consolation that we have received from God ourselves. •Indeed, as the sufferings of Christ overflow to us, so, through Christ, does our consolation overflow. •When we are made to suffer, it is for your consolation and salvation. When, instead, we are comforted, this should be a consolation to you, supporting you in patiently bearing the same sufferings as we bear. •And our hope for you is confident, since we know that, sharing our sufferings, you will also share our consolations.

1 Co 1:24+

8 For we should like you to realise, brothers, that the things we had to undergo^a in Asia were more of a burden than we could carry, so that we despaired of coming through alive. •Yes, we were carrying our own death warrant with us, and it has taught us not to rely on ourselves but only on God, who raises the dead to life. •And he saved us from dying, as he will save us again; yes, that is our firm hope in him, that in the future he will save us again. •You must all join in the prayers for us: the more people there are asking for help for us, the more will be giving thanks when it is granted to us.

Why Paul changed his plans

12 There is one thing we are proud of, and our conscience tells us it is true: that we have always treated everybody, and especially you, with the reverence^b and sincerity which come from God, and by the grace of God we have done this without ulterior motives. •There are no hidden meanings in our letters besides what you can read for yourselves and understand. •And I hope that, although you do not know us very well yet, you will have come to recognise, when the day of our Lord Jesus comes, that you can be as proud of us as we are of you.

15 Because I was so sure of this, I had meant to come to you first, so that you would benefit doubly;^c •staying with you before going to Macedonia and coming back to you again on the way back from Macedonia, for you to see me on my way to Judaea.^d •Do you think I was not sure of my own intentions when I planned this? Do you really think that when I am making my plans, my motives are ordinary human ones, and that I say Yes, yes, and No, no, at the same time? I swear by God's truth, there is no Yes and No about what we say to you. •The Son of God, the Christ Jesus that we proclaimed among you—I mean Silvanus^e and Timothy and I—was never Yes and No: with him it was always Yes, •and however many the promises God made, the Yes to them all is in him. That is why it is 'through him' that we answer Amen to the praise of God. •Remember it is God himself who assures us all, and you, of our standing in Christ, and has anointed us, •marking us with his seal and giving us the pledge, the Spirit, that we carry in our hearts.

By my life, I call God to witness that the reason why I did not come to Corinth after all was to spare your feelings. •We are not dictators over your faith, but are fellow workers with you for your happiness; in the faith you are steady enough. 2 Well then, I made up my mind not to pay you a second distressing visit.^a I may have hurt you, but if so I have hurt the only people who could give me any pleasure. •I wrote as I did^b to make sure that, when I came, I should not be distressed by the very people who should have made me happy. I am sure you all know that I could never be happy unless you were. •When I wrote to you, in deep distress and anguish of mind, and in tears, it was not to make you feel hurt but to let you know how much love I have for you.

Someone has been the cause of pain; and the cause of pain not to me, but to some degree—not to overstate it—to all of you. •The punishment already imposed by the majority on the man in question^c is enough; •and the best thing now is to give him your forgiveness and encouragement, or he might break down from so much misery. •So I am asking you to give some definite proof of your love for him. •What I really wrote for, after all, was to test you and see whether you are completely obedient. •Anybody that you forgive, I forgive; and as for my forgiving anything—if there has been anything to be forgiven, I have forgiven it for your sake in the presence of Christ. •And so we will not be outwitted by Satan—we know well enough what his intentions are.

From Troas to Macedonia. The apostolate: its importance

When I went up to Troas to preach the Good News of Christ, and the door was wide open for my work there in the Lord, •I was so continually uneasy in mind at not meeting brother Titus^d there, I said good-bye to them and went on to Macedonia.

Thanks be to God who, wherever he goes, makes us, in Christ, partners of his triumph,^e and through us is spreading the knowledge of himself, like a sweet smell, everywhere. •We are Christ's incense to God for those who are being saved and for those who are not; •for the last, the smell of death that leads to death, for the first the sweet smell of life that leads to life. And who could be qualified for work like this? •At least we do not go round offering the word of God for sale, as many other people do. In Christ, we speak as men of sincerity, as envoys of God and in God's presence.

3 Does this sound like a new attempt to commend ourselves to you? Unlike other people, we need no letters of recommendation either to you or from you, •because you are yourselves our letter, written in our^a hearts, that anybody can see and read, •and it is plain that you are a letter from Christ, drawn up by us, and written not with ink but with the Spirit of the living God, not on stone tablets but on the tablets of your living hearts.

Before God, we are confident of this through Christ: •not that we are qualified in ourselves to claim anything as our own work: all our qualifications come from God. •He is the one who has given us the qualifications to be the administrators of this new covenant, which is not a covenant of written letters but of the Spirit: the written letters bring death, but the Spirit gives life. •Now if the administering of death, in the written letters engraved on stones, was accompanied by such a brightness that the Israelites could not bear looking at the face of Moses, though 8 it was a brightness that faded, •then how much greater will be the brightness that 9 surrounds the administering of the Spirit! •For if there was any splendour in administering condemnation, there must be very much greater splendour in 10 administering justification. •In fact, compared with this greater splendour, the 11 thing that used to have such splendour now seems to have none; •and if what was so temporary had any splendour, there must be much more in what is going to last for ever.

12 Having this hope, we can be quite confident; •not like Moses, who put a veil 13 over his face so that the Israelites would not notice the ending of what had to 14 fade.^b •And anyway, their minds had been dulled; indeed, to this very day, that same veil is still there when the old covenant is being read, a veil never lifted, since 15 Christ alone can remove it.^c •Yes, even today, whenever Moses is read, the veil is 16 over their minds. •It will not be removed until they turn to the Lord. •Now this 17 Lord is the Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom. •And we, with our unveiled^d faces reflecting like mirrors^e the brightness of the Lord,^f all grow brighter and brighter as we are turned into the image^g that we reflect; this is the work of the Lord who is Spirit.

1 4 Since we have by an act of mercy been entrusted with this work of adminis-
 2 tration, there is no weakening on our part. •On the contrary, we will have none of the reticence of those who are ashamed, no deceitfulness or watering 3 down the word of God; but the way we commend ourselves to every human being with a conscience is by stating the truth openly in the sight of God. •If our 4 gospel does not penetrate the veil, then the veil is on those who are not on the way to salvation; •the unbelievers whose minds the god of this world^a has blinded, to stop them seeing the light shed by the Good News of the glory of Christ, who 5 is the image of God. •For it is not ourselves that we are preaching, but Christ
 6 Jesus as the Lord, and ourselves as your servants for Jesus' sake. •It is the same God that said, 'Let there be light shining out of darkness', who has shone in our minds to radiate the light of the knowledge of God's glory, the glory on the face of Christ.

The trials and hopes of the apostolate

7 We are only the earthenware jars^b that hold this treasure, to make it clear 8 that such an overwhelming power comes from God and not from us. •We are in difficulties on all sides, but never cornered; we see no answer to our problems, 9 but never despair; •we have been persecuted, but never deserted; knocked down, 10 but never killed; •always, wherever we may be, we carry with us in our body the death of Jesus, so that the life of Jesus, too, may always be seen in our body.
 11 Indeed, while we are still alive, we are consigned to our death every day, for the

He was commissioned by Paul to visit Corinth and to settle its problems; in this he was entirely successful, 2 Co 7:5-7. Soon afterwards Paul sent him to Corinth to organise the collection. We meet him again in Crete (63-64) controlling the communities Paul had founded there after his release from the first Roman captivity. It was from there that Paul wrote to Titus asking him to meet him again at Nicopolis in Epirus, Tt 3:12. During Paul's second Roman captivity (66-67) Titus was in Dalmatia, 2 Tm 4:10. Titus with his shrewdness and his strong, well-balanced character, seems to have made an admirable colleague for Paul.

sake of Jesus, so that in our mortal flesh the life of Jesus, too, may be openly shown. •So death is at work in us, but life in you.

But as we have the same spirit of faith that is mentioned in scripture—

Ps 116:10 I believed, and therefore I spoke—we too believe and therefore we too speak, knowing that he who raised the Lord Jesus to life will raise us with Jesus in our turn, and put us by his side and you with us. •You see, all this is for your benefit, so that the more grace is multiplied among people, the more thanksgiving there will be, to the glory of God.

That is why there is no weakening on our part, and instead, though this outer man of ours may be falling into decay, the inner man is renewed day by day. Yes, the troubles which are soon over, though they weigh little, train us for the carrying of a weight of eternal glory which is out of all proportion to them. •And so we have no eyes for things that are visible, but only for things that are invisible; for visible things last only for a time, and the invisible things are eternal.

For we know that when the tent that we live in on earth is folded up, there is a house built by God for us, an everlasting home not made by human hands, in the heavens. •In this present state, it is true, we groan as we wait with longing to put on our heavenly home^a over the other; •we should like to be found wearing clothes and not without them.^b •Yes, we groan and find it a burden being still in this tent, not that we want to strip it off, but to put the second garment over it and to have what must die taken up into life. •This is the purpose for which God made us, and he has given us the pledge of the Spirit.

We are always full of confidence, then, when we remember that to live in the body means to be exiled from the Lord, •going as we do by faith and not by sight—we are full of confidence, I say, and actually want to be exiled from the body and make our home with the Lord.^c •Whether we are living in the body or exiled from it, we are intent on pleasing him. •For all the truth about us will be brought out in the law court of Christ, and each of us will get what he deserves for the things he did in the body, good or bad.

The apostolate in action

And so it is with the fear of the Lord in mind that we try to win people over. God knows us for what we really are, and I hope that in your consciences you know us too. •This is not another attempt to commend ourselves to you: we are simply giving you reasons to be proud of us, so that you will have an answer ready for the people who can boast more about what they seem than what they are. If we seemed out of our senses, it was for God; but if we are being reasonable now, it is for your sake.^d •And this is because the love of Christ overwhelms us when we reflect that if one man has died for all, then all men should be dead; and the reason he died for all was so that living men should live no longer for themselves, but for him who died and was raised to life for them.

From now onwards, therefore, we do not judge anyone by the standards of the flesh. Even if we did once know Christ in the flesh,^e that is not how we know him now. •And for anyone who is in Christ, there is a new creation;^f the old creation has gone, and now the new one is here.^g •It is all God's work. It was God who reconciled us to himself through Christ and gave us the work of handing on this reconciliation. •In other words, God in Christ was reconciling the world to himself, not holding men's faults against them, and he has entrusted to us the news that they are reconciled. •So we are ambassadors for Christ; it is as though God were appealing through us, and the appeal that we make in Christ's name is: be reconciled to God. •For our sake God made the sinless one into sin,^h so that in him we might become the goodness of God. 6 As his fellow workers, we beg you once again not to neglect the grace of God that you have received. •For he says: At the favourable time, I have listened to you; on the day of salvation I came to your help. Well, now is the favourable time; this is the day of salvation.^a

3 We do nothing that people might object to, so as not to bring discredit on our 8:21
 4 function as God's servants. •Instead, we prove we are servants of God by great 4:8-10
 5 fortitude in times of suffering: in times of hardship and distress; •when we are 1 Co 4:9-13
 6 flogged, or sent to prison, or mobbed; labouring, sleepless, starving. •We prove 8:21
 7 we are God's servants by our purity, knowledge, patience and kindness; by a 8:21

Paul opens his heart. A warning

11 Corinthians, we have spoken to you very frankly;^b our mind has been opened 7:3
 12 in front of you. •Any constraint that you feel is not on our side; the constraint 7:3
 13 is in your own selves. •I speak as if to children of mine: as a fair exchange, open 8:21
 14 your minds in the same way. 8:21
 15 •Do not harness yourselves in an uneven team with unbelievers. Virtue is no 8:21
 16 companion for crime. Light and darkness have nothing in common. •Christ is 8:21
 17 not the ally of Beliar,^d nor has a believer anything to share with an unbeliever. 8:21
 18 The temple of God has no common ground with idols, and that is what we 8:21
 19 are—the temple of the living God. We have God's word for it: *I will make 8:21
 20 my home among them and live with them; I will be their God and they shall be my 8:21
 21 people.* •Then *come away from them and keep aloof, says the Lord. Touch nothing 8:21
 22 that is unclean, and I will welcome you •and be your father, and you shall be my 8:21
 23 sons and daughters, says the Almighty Lord.* 8:21
 1 With promises like these made to us, dear brothers, let us wash off all that 8:21
 2 can soil either body or spirit, to reach perfection of holiness in the fear of 8:21
 3 God. 8:21
 4 Keep a place for us in your hearts. We have not injured anyone, or ruined 8:21
 5 anyone, or exploited anyone. •I am not saying this to put any blame on you; 8:21
 6 as I have already told you, you are in our hearts—together we live or together 8:21

5 a. That is, to be given our 'spiritual body', 1 Co 15: 44+, without having to suffer death and corruption, v. 4.

b. That is to say, on the supposition that we are still alive when Christ returns in glory. Paul wants to be of the number of those who will live to see the coming of the Lord and whose bodies will be transformed without having to die. Over the 'natural body' they will, as it were, 'put on' the 'spiritual body', 1 Co 15:44,53,54, which will be 'absorbed' by the former.

c. Here and in Ph 1:23 Paul has in mind a union of Christians with Christ on the death of each individual. This does not contradict the biblical doctrine of the final universal resurrection, Rm 2:6+; 1 Co 15:44+, but this expectation of happiness for the soul that has left the body after death betrays the influence of Greek thought, an influence already making itself felt in the Judaism of the period, cf. Lk 16:22; 23:43; 1 P 3:19+. Cf. also the texts referring to ecstatic states when the soul is 'out of the body', 2 Co 12:2f; cf. Rv 1:10; 4:2; 17:3; 21:10.

d. Paul is taxed with 'folly'; he retorts that this is in God's cause. But he adds that he can be 'reasonable' when he wishes, for the sake of his children in Christ.

e. Paul seems to be protesting against the restriction of the apostolic privilege to those who had known Jesus in his earthly life, cf. Rm 1:1+; 1 Co 1:12+.

f. God who created all things through Christ, cf. Jn 1:3, has restored his work, deformed by sin, by re-creating it in Christ, Col 1:15-20+. The central figure of this 'new creation', here and Ga 6:15—which extends to the whole universe, Col 1:19+; cf. 2 P 3:13; Rv 21:1

—is the 'new man' created in Christ, Ep 2:15+, to lead a new life, Rm 6:4, of virtue and holiness, Ep 2:10; 4:24+; Col 3:10+. Cf. the 'new birth' of baptism, Rm 6:4+.

g. Var. 'all is new'.

h. By a kind of legal fiction God identified Jesus with sin so that he might bear the curse incurred by sin, Ga 3:13; Rm 8:3.

6 a. There is an intermediary period, Rm 13:11+, between the time of Christ's coming, Rm 3:26+, and his return, 1 Co 1:8+. This period is the 'day of salvation', a time allowed for conversion, Ac 3:20f; it is granted to the 'remnant', Rm 11:5, and to the pagans, Rm 11:25; Ep 2:12f; cf. 2 Co 8:14; Lk 21:24. Though the duration is uncertain, 1 Th 5:1+, this time of pilgrimage must be regarded as being short, 1 P 1:17; 1 Co 7:26-31; cf. Rv 10:16; 12:12; 20:3, and full of trials, Ep 5:16; 6:13, and sufferings which are a prelude to the glory to come, Rm 8:11. The end is at hand, 1 P 4:7; cf. Rv 1:3+ and 1 Co 16:22; Ph 4:5; Jm 5:8, the day approaches, Rm 13:11, and it is necessary to be on the watch, 1 Th 5:6; cf. Mk 13:33, and to use the time well that remains, Col 4:5; Ep 5:16, for one's own salvation and that of others, Ga 6:10, leaving the final vindication to God, Rm 12:19; 1 Co 4:5.

b. Lit. 'our mouth is open to (or: for) you'.

c. 6:14-7:1 is a warning against the infiltration of pagan practices which would split the church and cut it off from its founder. This section is somewhat alien to the context, cf. Introduction.

Paul in Macedonia; he is joined by Titus

Even after we had come to Macedonia, however, there was no rest for this 5 body of ours.^a Far from it; we found trouble on all sides: quarrels outside, misgivings inside. •But God comforts the miserable, and he comforted us, by the 6
2:13 arrival of Titus, •and not only by his arrival but also by the comfort which he 7 1 Th 3:6 had gained from you. He has told us all about how you want to see me, how sorry you were, and how concerned for me, and so I am happier now than I was before.
Heb 12:11 But to tell the truth, even if I distressed you by my letter,^b I do not regret it. 8
I did regret it before, and I see that that letter did distress you, at least for a time; but I am happy now—not because I made you suffer, but because your suffering 9 led to your repentance. Yours has been a kind of suffering that God approves, and so you have come to no kind of harm from us. •To suffer in God's way 10 means changing for the better and leaves no regrets, but to suffer as the world knows suffering brings death. •Just look at what suffering in God's way has 11 brought you: what keenness, what explanations, what indignation, what alarm!
Yes, and what aching to see me, what concern for me, and what justice done!^c
In every way you have shown yourselves blameless in this affair. •So then, though 12
I wrote the letter to you, it was not written for the sake either of the offender or of the one offended;^d it was to make you realise, in the sight of God, your own concern for us. •That is what we have found so encouraging. 13
With this encouragement, too, we had the even greater happiness of finding Titus so happy; thanks to you all, he has no more worries; •I had rather boasted 14 to him about you, and now I have not been made to look foolish; in fact, our boasting to Titus has proved to be as true as anything that we ever said to you.
His own personal affection for you is all the greater when he remembers how 15
1 Co 2:3+ willing you have all been, and with what deep respect you welcomed him. •I am 16
2 Th 3:4 very happy knowing that I can rely on you so completely.

II. ORGANISATION OF THE COLLECTION

Why the Corinthians should be generous

11:8-9 8 Now here, brothers, is the news of the grace of God which was given in the 1 1 Co 16:5 churches in Macedonia; •and of how, throughout great trials by suffering, 2 of their constant cheerfulness and their intense poverty have overflowed in a wealth of generosity. •I can swear that they gave not only as much as they could afford, 3 but far more, and quite spontaneously, •begging and begging us for the favour 4 1 Co 16:1+ of sharing in this service to the saints •and, what was quite unexpected, they 5 offered their own selves first to God and, under God, to us.

Because of this, we have asked Titus, since he has already made a beginning, 6 to bring this work of mercy to the same point of success among you. •You 7 1 Co 1:5 always have the most of everything—of faith, of eloquence, of understanding, of keenness for any cause, and the biggest share of our affection^a—so we expect you to put the most into this work of mercy too. •It is not an order that I am 8 giving you; I am just testing the genuineness of your love against the keenness of others. •Remember how generous the Lord Jesus was:^b he was rich, but he 9
Mt 5:3+; Ph 2:6-7 became poor for your^c sake, to make you rich out of his poverty. •As I say, I am 10
1 Co 1:5 only making a suggestion; it is only fair to you, since you were the first, a year
Heb 12:2 ago, not only in taking action but even in deciding to. •So now finish the work 11 and let the results be worthy, as far as you can afford it, of the decision you made so promptly. •As long as the readiness is there, a man is acceptable with whatever 12
he can afford; never mind what is beyond his means. •This does not mean that 13 to give relief to others you ought to make things difficult for yourselves: it is

- 14 a question of balancing •what happens to be your surplus now against their present need, and one day they may have something to spare that will supply 15 your own need. That is how we strike a balance: •as scripture says: The man who gathered much had none too much, the man who gathered little did not go short. Rm 15:26-27
 Ex 16:18

The delegates recommended to the Corinthians

- 16 I thank God for putting into Titus' heart the same concern for you that I have 17 myself. •He did what we asked him; indeed he is more concerned than ever, and 18 is visiting you on his own initiative. •As his companion we are sending the 19 brother^d who is famous in all the churches for spreading the gospel. •More than 20 that, he happens to be the same brother who has been elected by the churches 21 to be our companion on this errand of mercy that, for the glory of God, we have 22 undertaken to satisfy our impatience to help. •We hope that in this way there 23 will be no accusations made about our administering such a large fund; •for we 24 are trying to do right not only in the sight of God but also in the sight of men. •To accompany these, we are sending a third brother,^e of whose keenness we have often had proof in many different ways, and who is particularly keen about this, because he has great confidence in you. •Titus, perhaps I should add, is my own colleague and fellow worker in your interests; the other two brothers, who are delegates of the churches, are a real glory to Christ. •So then, in front of all the churches, give them a proof of your love, and prove to them that we are right to be proud of you. Pr 3:4 LXX
 Rm 12:17

- 1 9 There is really no need for me to write to you^a on the subject of offering 2 your services to the saints, •since I know how anxious you are to help; in fact, I boast about you to the Macedonians, telling them, 'Achaia has been ready 3 since last year'. So your zeal has been a spur to many more. •I am sending the brothers all the same, to make sure that our boasting about you does not prove to have been empty this time, and that you really are ready as I said you would 4 be. •If some of the Macedonians who are coming with me found you unprepared, we should be humiliated—to say nothing of yourselves—after being so confident.
 5 That is why I have thought it necessary to ask these brothers to go on to you ahead of us, and make sure in advance that the gift you promised is all ready, and that it all comes as a gift out of your generosity and not by being extorted from you.

Blessings to be expected from the collection

- 6 Do not forget: thin sowing means thin reaping; the more you sow, the more 7 you reap. •Each one should give what he has decided in his own mind, not 8 grudgingly or because he is made to, for God loves a cheerful giver. •And there is no limit to the blessings which God can send you—he will make sure that you will always have all you need for yourselves in every possible circumstance, and 9 still have something to spare for all sorts of good works. •As scripture says: He was free in almsgiving, and gave to the poor: his good deeds will never be forgotten. Pr 11:24-25

b. The 'severe letter', cf. 2:3+.

c. I.e. to the guilty man. Paul is enumerating the effects his 'severe letter' had on the Corinthians, cf. 2:5-8.

d. Probably one of Paul's envoys.

8 a. Var. 'the charity towards us which unites us to you'.

b. Lit. 'the generosity (or perhaps 'grace') of the Lord Jesus'.

c. Var. 'our'.

d. Possibly Luke.

e. Identity unknown.

9 a. Since Paul has just written of this at some length, it is possible that ch. 9 was a short note to the churches of Achaia, being inserted here subsequently to follow the instructions on the same subject addressed to the church of Corinth in ch. 8, cf. Introduction.

10 This is a personal matter; this is Paul himself appealing to you by the 1 gentleness and patience of Christ—I, the man who is so humble when he 2 is facing you, but bullies you when he is at a distance.^a •I only ask that I do not 2 have to bully you when I come, with all the confident assurance I mean to show when I come face to face with people I could name who think we go by ordinary 3 human motives. •We live in the flesh, of course, but the muscles that we fight 3 with are not flesh. •Our war is not fought with weapons of flesh, yet they are 4 strong enough, in God's cause,^b to demolish fortresses. We demolish sophistries, 4 and the arrogance that tries to resist the knowledge of God; every thought is 5 our prisoner, captured to be brought into obedience to Christ. •Once you have 6 given your complete obedience, we are prepared to punish any disobedience.
 Face plain facts.^c Anybody who is convinced that he belongs to Christ must 7 go on to reflect that we all belong to Christ no less than he does. •Maybe I do 8 boast rather too much about our authority, but the Lord gave it to me for building 9 you up and not for pulling you down, and I shall not be ashamed of it. •I do not 9 want you to think of me as someone who only frightens you by letter. •Someone 10 said, 'He writes powerful and strongly-worded letters but when he is with you 10 you see only half a man and no preacher at all'. •The man who said that can 11 remember this: whatever we are like in the words of our letters when we are 11 absent, that is what we shall be like in our actions when we are present.

We are not being so bold as to rank ourselves, or invite comparison, with 12 certain people who write their own references. Measuring themselves against 12 themselves, and comparing themselves to themselves, they are simply foolish.
 We, on the other hand, are not going to boast without a standard to measure 13 against:^d taking for our measure the yardstick which God gave us to measure 13 with, which is long enough to reach to you. •We are not stretching further than 14 we ought; otherwise we should not have reached you, as we did come all the 14 way to you with the gospel of Christ. •So we are not boasting without any measure, 15 about work that was done by other people; in fact, we trust that, as your faith 15 grows, we shall get taller and taller, when judged by our own standard.^e •I mean, 16 we shall be carrying the gospel to places far beyond you, without encroaching on 16 anyone else's field, not boasting of the work already done. •If anyone wants to 17 boast, let him boast of the Lord. •It is not the man who commends himself that 17 can be accepted, but the man who is commended by the Lord.

11 I only wish you were able to tolerate a little foolishness from me. But of 1 course: you are tolerant towards me.^a •You see, the jealousy that I feel 2 for you is God's own jealousy: I arranged for you to marry Christ so that I might 2 give you away as a chaste virgin to this one husband. •But the serpent, with his 3 cunning, seduced Eve, and I am afraid that in the same way your ideas may get 3 corrupted and turned away from simple^b devotion to Christ. •Because any new- 4 comer has only to proclaim a new Jesus, different from the one that we preached, or you have only to receive a new spirit, different from the one you have already received, or a new gospel, different from the one you have already accepted—and you welcome it with open arms. •As far as I can tell, these arch-apostles have nothing more than I have. •I may not be a polished speechmaker, but as for knowledge, that is a different matter; surely we have made this plain, speaking on every subject in front of all of you.^c

Or was I wrong, lowering myself so as to lift you high, by preaching the gospel of God to you and taking no fee for it? •I was robbing other churches living on them so that I could serve you. •When I was with you and ran out of money, I was no burden to anyone; the brothers who came from Macedonia provided me with everything I wanted. I was very careful, and I always shall be, not to be a burden to you in any way, •and by Christ's truth in me, this cause of boasting will never be taken from me in the regions of Achaia. •Would I do that if I did not love you? God knows I do. •I intend to go on doing what I am doing now—leaving no opportunity for those people who are looking for an opportunity to claim^d equality with us in what they boast of. •These people are counterfeit apostles, they are dishonest workmen disguised as apostles of Christ. •There is nothing unexpected about that; if Satan himself goes disguised as an angel of light, there is no need to be surprised when his servants, too, disguise themselves as the servants of righteousness. They will come to the end that they deserve.

But if anyone wants some brazen speaking—I am still talking as a fool—then I can be as brazen as any of them, and about the same things.^g •Hebrews, are they? So am I. Israelites? So am I. Descendants of Abraham? So am I. •The servants of Christ? I must be mad to say this, but so am I, and more than they; more, because I have worked harder, I have been sent to prison more often, and whipped so many times more, often almost to death. •Five times I had the thirty-nine lashes from the Jews; •three times I have been beaten with sticks; once I was stoned; three times I have been shipwrecked and once adrift in the open sea for a night and a day.^h •Constantly travelling, I have been in danger from rivers and in danger from brigands, in danger from my own people and in danger from pagans; in danger in the towns, in danger in the open country, danger at sea and danger from so-called brothers. •I have worked and laboured, often without sleep; I have been hungry and thirsty and often starving; I have been in the cold without clothes. •And, to leave out much more, there is my daily preoccupation: my anxiety for all the churches. •When any man has had scruples, I have had scruples with him; when any man is made to fall, I am tortured.

d. Paul's selflessness is a guarantee of his apostolic mission; his opponents dare not claim the same for themselves.

e. Var. 'God'.

f. Var. 'I say it to our shame that we are weak'.

g. The needs of controversy oblige Paul on several occasions to appeal, as he does here, to his past life as a faithful Jew: Ga 1:13,14; Rm 11:1; Ph 3:4-6; cf. Ac 22:3f; 26:4-5.

h. For the most part nothing further is known of these hardships.

Ac 9:22-25 in Damascus, the ethnarch of King Aretas put guards round the city to catch Jos 2:15 me, •and I had to be let down over the wall in a hamper, through a window, in 33 order to escape.

12 Must I go on boasting, though there is nothing to be gained by it?^a But 1
 I will move on to the visions and revelations I have had from the Lord.
 I know a man in Christ who, fourteen years ago, was caught up—whether still in 2
 the body or out of the body, I do not know; God knows—right into the third Ex 33:20+ heaven.^b •I do know, however, that this same person—whether in the body or 3 out of the body, I do not know; God knows—•was caught up into paradise and 4 heard things which must not and cannot be put into human language. •I will 5 boast about a man like that, but not about anything of my own except my weaknesses. •If I should decide to boast, I should not be made to look foolish, because 6
 I should only be speaking the truth; but I am not going to, in case anyone should begin to think I am better than he can actually see and hear me^c to be.

In view of the extraordinary nature of these revelations, to stop me from 7 getting too proud I was given a thorn in the flesh,^d an angel of Satan to beat me
 Mt 26:39, and stop me from getting too proud!^e •About this thing, I have pleaded with the 8
 Is 40:27 Lord three times for it to leave me, •but he has said, 'My grace is enough for 9 Rm 1:16:5/3 you: my power is at its best in weakness'. So I shall be very happy to make my weaknesses my special boast so that the power of Christ may stay over me, •and 10
 Col 1:24 that is why I am quite content with my weaknesses, and with insults, hardships, Ph 4:13 persecutions, and the agonies I go through for Christ's sake. For it is when I am weak that I am strong.

I have been talking like a fool, but you forced me to do it: you are the ones 11 who should have been commending me. Though I am a nobody, there is not 12 a thing these arch-apostles have that I do not have as well. •You have seen done 12 1 Co 15:10 among you all the things that mark the true apostle, unfailingly produced: the Ac 1:8+ signs, the marvels, the miracles. •Is there anything of which you have had less than 13
 Rm 15:19 the other churches have had, except that I have not myself been a burden on 1 Co 2:4 you? For this unfairness, please forgive me.^f •I am all prepared now to come to 14
 1 Th 1:5 you for the third time, and I am not going to be a burden on you: it is you I want, Ac 18:3+ not your possessions. Children are not expected to save up for their parents, but 13:1 parents for children. •I am perfectly willing to spend what I have, and to be expended, in the interests of your souls. Because I love you more, must I be loved 15 the less?^g

All very well, you say: I personally put no pressure on you, but like the cunning 16 fellow that I am, I took you in by a trick. •So we exploited you, did we, through 17 8:18-22 one of the men that I have sent to you? •Well, Titus went at my urging, and I sent the brother that came with him. Can Titus have exploited you? You know that he and I have always been guided by the same spirit and trodden in the same tracks.

Paul's fears and anxieties

All this time^h you have been thinking that our defence is addressed to you, 19 but it is before God that we, in Christ, are speaking; and it is all, my dear brothers, for your benefit. •What I am afraid of is that when I come I may find 20 you different from what I want you to be, and you may find that I am not as you Rm 1:29+ would like me to be; and then there will be wrangling, jealousy, and tempers roused, intrigues and backbiting and gossip, obstinacies and disorder. •I am 21 afraid that on my next visit, my God may make me ashamed on your account and I shall be grieving over all those who sinned before and have still not repented of the impurities, fornication and debauchery they committed.

12 This will be the third time^a I have come to you. The evidence of three, or at 1
 13 least two, witnesses is necessary to sustain the charge. •I gave warning when 2
 I was with you the second time and I give warning now, too, before I come, to those who sinned before and to any others, that when I come again, I shall have

- 3 no mercy. •You want proof, you say, that it is Christ speaking in me: you have 4 known him not as a weakling, but as a power among you? •Yes, but he was crucified through weakness, and still he lives now through the power of God. Rm 1:4+
 So then, we are weak, as he was, but we shall live with him, through the power Rm 8:11+
1 Co 1:25
 of God, for your benefit.^b
- 5 Examine yourselves to make sure you are in the faith; test yourselves. Do you acknowledge that Jesus Christ is really in you? If not, you have failed the 6 test, •but we, as I hope you will come to see, have not failed it. •We pray to God
 7 that you will do nothing wrong: not that we want to appear as the ones who have 8 been successful—we would rather that you did well even though we failed. •We 9 have no power to resist the truth; only to further it. •We are only too glad to be Ac 4:20 weak provided you are strong.^c What we ask in our prayers is for you to be made 10 perfect. •That is why I am writing this from a distance, so that when I am with you I shall not need to be strict, with the authority which the Lord gave me for building up and not for destroying. 10:8

THE LETTER OF PAUL TO THE CHURCH IN GALATIA

God our Father and of the Lord Jesus Christ, •who in order to rescue us from 4

2 Th 2:2 I am astonished at the promptness with which you have turned away from the 6
Mt 9:16 one who called you and have decided to follow a different version of the Good 7

5:10 troublemakers among you want to change the Good News of Christ; •and let 9
Rm 9:3+ me warn you that if anyone preaches a version of the Good News different from 10
1 Co 11:2+ the one we have already preached to you, whether it be ourselves or an angel 11

Rm 1:1 before: if anyone preaches a version of the Good News different from the one 13 you have already heard, he is to be condemned. •So now whom am I trying to 14 please—man, or God? Would you say it is men's approval I am looking for?^e If 15
I still wanted that,^f I should not be what I am—a servant of Christ.

I. PAUL'S APOLOGIA

God's call

1:1 The fact is,^g brothers, and I want you to realise this, the Good News I 11 preached is not a human message •that I was given by men, it is something 12
Mt 16:17 I learnt only through a revelation of Jesus Christ.^h •You must have heard of 13
Ac 8:1-3+ my career as a practising Jew, how merciless I was in persecuting the Church of 14
2 Co 11:12+ God, how much damage I did to it, •how I stood out among other Jews of my 15
Mk 7:3f generation, and how enthusiastic I was for the traditions of my ancestors.
Is 49:1 Then God, who had specially chosen me while I was still in my mother's 16
Jr 1:5 womb, called me through his grace and chose •to reveal his Son in me,ⁱ so that 17
Lk 1:15 I might preach the Good News about him to the pagans. I did not stop to discuss 18
Mt 16:17 this with any human being, •nor did I go up^j to Jerusalem to see those who were 19
Ac 9:3-19+ already apostles before me, but I went off to Arabia^k at once and later went 20
Rm 1:1+ straight back from there to Damascus. •Even when after three years I went up 21
Ac 9:23-30+ to Jerusalem to visit Cephas and stayed with him for fifteen days, •I did not see 22
2:9 any of the other apostles; I only saw James, the brother of the Lord,^l •and I 23
Ac 12:17+

- 21 swear before God that what I have just written is the literal truth. •After that Rm 1:9-11
 22 I went to Syria and Cilicia, •and was still not known by sight to the churches of Ac 9:30; 11:25-26
 23 Christ in Judaea, •who had heard nothing except that their one-time persecutor 24 was now preaching the faith he had previously tried to destroy; •and they gave glory to God for me.

The meeting at Jerusalem

- 1 2 It was not till fourteen years^a had passed that I went up to Jerusalem again. Ac 11:30+; 15:1+ 2 I went with Barnabas and took Titus with me. •I went there as the result of Ac 4:36+ a revelation, and privately I laid before the leading men the Good News as I 2 Co 2:13+ proclaim it among the pagans; I did so for fear the course I was adopting or had Ph 2:16 3 already adopted would not be allowed.^b •And what happened? Even though Titus
 4 who had come with me is a Greek, he was not obliged to be circumcised.^c •The Rm 6:15+ question came up only because some who do not really belong to the brotherhood 5 have furtively crept in to spy on the liberty we enjoy in Christ Jesus, and want to reduce us all to slavery. •I was so determined to safeguard for you the true meaning of the Good News, that I refused even out of deference to yield to 6 such people for one moment.^d •As a result, these people who are acknowledged leaders—not that their importance matters to me, since God has no favourites— Dt 10:17+ 7 these leaders, as I say, had nothing to add to the Good News as I preach it.^e •On Ac 10:34 the contrary, they recognised that I had been commissioned to preach the Good News to the uncircumcised just as Peter had been commissioned to preach it to Ac 15:3f, 12
 8 the circumcised. •The same person whose action had made Peter the apostle of Rm 15:17-19
 9 the circumcised had given me a similar mission to the pagans. •So, James, 1:19+
 Cephas and John,^f these leaders, these pillars, shook hands with Barnabas and Ac 12:17+ me as a sign of partnership: we were to go to the pagans and they to the Ep 3:8 10 circumcised.^g •The only thing they insisted on was that we should remember to Rv 3:12 help the poor, as indeed I was anxious to do. 1 Co 16:1+

1 a. This opening is shorter and less friendly than in any other letter: there is not a single word of praise for the Galatians. In vv. 1 and 4, Paul brings in the two main themes of his letter: 1, he is a true apostle, ch. 1-2, 2, he brings the Good News that we are saved through faith in Jesus Christ, and that Christians are therefore free, ch. 3-5.

b. The present world as opposed to the 'world to come' of the messianic era. It coincides with the rule of Satan, Ac 26:18, 'god of this world', 2 Co 4:4, cf. Ep 2:2; Jn 12:31, and with the rule of sin and law, Ga 3:19. By dying and rising Christ has freed us from these forces and made us members of his kingdom, of God's kingdom, Rm 14:17; Col 1:13; Ep 5:5, though we will not be completely freed till we also rise from the dead at the parousia, cf. Rm 5-8.

c. This warning takes the place of the thanksgiving with which Paul's letters usually begin, Rm 1:1+.

d. Lit. anathema, cf. Rm 9:3+.

e. It appears that the Judaisers accused Paul of trying to make the pagans' conversion easier by not insisting on circumcision. But on this occasion at least, he retorts, he cannot be suspected of a conciliatory attitude.

f. As once he did, i.e. before his conversion when he preached circumcision.

g. Var. 'But' or 'Now'.

h. The two aspects of revelation, i.e. 'as made by Christ' and 'about Christ', v. 16. This should not be taken as meaning that Paul received all his doctrine without human intermediaries, and much less that on the Damascus road all was revealed to him at once. He is referring to the doctrine that it is not obeying the Law that saves, but having faith: this is the only topic of discussion here.

i. Others translate 'reveal his Son to me'. Paul is not denying that his vision was real, 1 Co 9:1; 15:8; cf. Ac 9:7; 22:14; 26:16, he is stressing the inwardness of this real vision and relating this inwardness to his call as apostle of the gentiles.

j. Var. 'leave for', 'go to'.

k. Probably the kingdom of the Nabataean Arabs to the S. of Damascus, 1 M 5:25+, where Paul took refuge from Aretas, 2 Co 11:32.

l. Lit. 'but only James...' Others translate 'except James', either identifying this James with the son of Alphaeus, Mt 10:3p, and taking him for one of the Twelve, or else understanding 'apostle' in the wider sense, cf. Rm 1:1+.

2 a. Reckoning from the last meeting with Peter or else, preferably, from Paul's conversion. It is possible that the 'three years' of 1:18 and the 'fourteen' of 2:1 are no more than one-and-a-half and twelve-and-a-half respectively, since it was customary to count even the last few days or the first few days of a year as a whole year.

b. Lit. 'for fear I was running or had run to no purpose'. Paul is not having second thoughts about the truth of his gospel, he is concerned that when new churches are founded they should keep in touch with the mother church; this is why he felt the collection for the 'poor' in Jerusalem to be important, cf. 1 Co 16:1+; see v. 10.

c. Paul insisted that Timothy be circumcised since his mother was a Jewess, Ac 16:3, cf. 1 Co 9:20: a Jew being defined as one whose mother is Jewish.

d. Lit. 'we did not yield...' By omitting 'not', the Old Latin version makes Paul admit that he gave way for a moment. Om. 'out of deference'.

e. Lit. 'laid down nothing more for me', cf. v. 2.

f. 'James, Cephas and John'; var. 'James, Peter and John', or 'James and John'.

g. This distinction is not racial but geographical: 'the circumcised' (lit. 'the circumcision') refers primarily to the Jews in Palestine, and when Paul went among the gentiles the resident Jews were his first concern, Ac 13:5+.

Ac 15:1 Peter and Paul at Antioch

When Cephas came to Antioch, however, I opposed him to his face, since 11
 he was manifestly in the wrong.^h •His custom had been to eat with the pagans,ⁱ 12 but after certain friends of James arrived he stopped doing this and kept away from them altogether for fear of the group that insisted on circumcision. •The 13 other Jews joined him in this pretence, and even Barnabas felt himself obliged to copy their behaviour.

When I saw they were not respecting the true meaning of the Good News, 14
 I said to Cephas in front of everyone, 'In spite of being a Jew, you live like the pagans and not like the Jews, so you have no right to make the pagans copy Jewish ways.'

The Good News as proclaimed by Paul^j

Though we were born Jews and not pagan sinners,^k •we acknowledge that 15 what makes a man righteous is not obedience to the Law, but faith in Jesus 16 Christ. We had to become believers in Christ Jesus no less than you had, and now we hold that faith in Christ rather than fidelity to the Law is what justifies us, and that no one can be justified by keeping the Law. •Now if we were to 17 admit that the result of looking to Christ to justify us is to make us sinners like the rest, it would follow that Christ had induced us to sin, which would be absurd. •If I were to return to a position I had already abandoned, I should be 18 admitting I had done something wrong. •In other words, through the Law I am 19 dead to the Law,^l so that now I can live for God. I have been crucified with Christ, •and I live now not with my own life but with the life of Christ who 20 lives in me.^m The life I now live in this bodyⁿ I live in faith: faith in the Son of God^o who loved me and who sacrificed himself for my sake. •I cannot bring 21 myself to give up God's gift:^p if the Law can justify us, there is no point in the death of Christ.

II. DOCTRINAL MATTERSRm 1:16+ Justification by faith

3 Are you people in Galatia mad? Has someone put a spell on you, in spite 1 of the plain explanation you have had of the crucifixion of Jesus Christ?^a Let me ask you one question: was it because you practised the Law that you 2 received the Spirit, or because you believed what was preached to you? •Are you 3 foolish enough to end in outward observances^b what you began in the Spirit?
 Have all the favours you received been wasted?^c And if this were so, they would 4 most certainly have been wasted. •Does God give you the Spirit so freely and 5 work miracles among you because you practise the Law, or because you believed what was preached to you?

Take Abraham for example: he put his faith in God, and this faith was 6 considered as justifying him. •Don't you see that it is those who rely on faith who 7 are the sons of Abraham? •Scripture foresaw that God was going to use faith 8 to justify the pagans, and proclaimed the Good News long ago when Abraham was told: In you all the pagans will be blessed. •Those therefore who rely on 9 faith receive the same blessing as Abraham, the man of faith.

Rm 7:7+ The curse brought by the Law

On the other hand, those who rely on the keeping of the Law are under a 10 curse, since scripture says: Cursed be everyone who does not persevere in observing everything prescribed in the book of the Law. •The Law will not justify anyone 11 in the sight of God, because we are told: the righteous man finds life through faith.
 The Law is not even based on faith,^d since we are told: The man who practises 12 these precepts finds life through practising them. •Christ redeemed us from the 13

curse of the Law by being cursed for our sake,^c since scripture says: Cursed be everyone who is hanged on a tree. • This was done so that in Christ Jesus the blessing of Abraham might include the pagans, and so that through faith we might receive the promised Spirit.^f

The Law did not cancel the promise

Compare this, brothers, with what happens in ordinary life. If a will has been drawn up in due form, no one is allowed to disregard it or add to it. • Now the promises were addressed to Abraham and to his descendants—notice, in passing, that scripture does not use a plural word as if there were several descendants, it uses the singular: to his posterity,^g which is Christ. • But my point is this: once God had expressed his will in due form, no law that came four hundred and thirty years later could cancel that and make the promise meaningless.^h • If you inherit something as a legal right, it does not come to you as the result of a promise, and it was precisely in the form of a promise that God made his gift to Abraham.

The purpose of the Law

What then was the purpose of adding the Law? This was done to specify crimes,ⁱ until the posterity came^j to whom the promise was addressed. The Law was promulgated by angels,^k assisted by an intermediary. • Now there can only be an intermediary between two parties, yet God is one.^l • Does this mean that there is opposition between the Law and the promises of God? Of course not. We could have been justified by the Law if the Law we were given had been capable of giving life, • but it is not: scripture makes no exceptions when it says that sin is master everywhere. In this way the promise can only be given through faith in Jesus Christ and can only be given to those who have this faith.^m

h. Peter's conduct was not in itself blameworthy, and in different circumstances Paul was to do the same, Ac 16:3; 21:26; 1 Co 8:13; Rm 14:21; cf. 1 Co 9:20. But on this occasion such a policy suggested that the only true Christians were converted Jews who observed the Law, and threatened to produce two separate communities that could not even meet to celebrate the Eucharist. Peter's behaviour should have advertised his real attitude but instead of that he disguised it, v. 13.

i. Converts from paganism, so also in v. 14, as opposed to the 'circumcised' who are converted Jews.

j. Paul is not only speaking to Peter but more particularly to all the Judaisers, e.g. those of Antioch and still more those of Galatia.

k. This is slightly ironical, though Paul never doubted that Israel kept a privileged position, Rm 1:16; 3:1; 9:4-5, even when unfaithful, Rm 11:12f.

l. So laconic as to be obscure: there have been various explanations: 1. Christians, crucified with Christ, are dead with Christ and therefore, like Christ, dead to the Mosaic Law, cf. Rm 7:1f.—and indeed in virtue of that Law, Ga 3:13; this is why Christians already share the life of the risen Christ, Rm 6:4-10; 7:4-6 with notes. 2. Christians only renounced the Law for a deeper obedience to the O.T., Ga 3:19,24; Rm 10:4. 3. Christians are only dead to the Mosaic Law in obedience to a higher law, the law of faith and of the Spirit, Rm 8:2.

m. The living acts of a Christian become somehow the acts of Christ.

n. Lit. 'in the flesh'. Though still physically alive, Rm 7:5+, Christians are already spiritually alive, cf. Ep 3:17; on this paradox, cf. Rm 8.

o. Var. 'faith in God and in Christ'.

p. By returning to the Law, cf. 3:18.

3 a. The foundation of everything Paul teaches is the idea that we are redeemed because Christ died and rose again, cf. 1 Co 15:3f.

b. Reference to being circumcised as urged by Judaising preachers.

c. Others translate 'Have you suffered so much and all to no purpose?'

d. Laws expert to be obeyed in every point, v. 10 and 5:3; cf. Jm 2:10, but do nothing, of themselves, to assure this, cf. Ac 15:10; Rm 7:7+.

e. To free the human race from the curse God laid on it for defying the law, Christ made himself answerable for the curse, cf. Rm 8:3+; 2 Co 5:21+; Col 2:14+. The somewhat remote analogy between the crucified Christ and the criminal of Dt 21:23 is used merely to illustrate this doctrine.

f. Lit. 'the promise of the Spirit'. Var. 'the blessing of the Spirit'.

g. Lit. 'It does not say "And to posterities" as if there were several people, but "And to your posterity" as if there were one'. The use in scripture of a collective capable of indicating an individual enables Paul to illustrate his argument with a verbal pun.

h. God would have contradicted himself had he replaced a scheme of salvation based on a spontaneous promise (compared to a will in v. 15) with one based on a bilateral contract, v. 20. He could not have made the fulfilment of the promise depend on the observance of a law, as this would have been to make the promise a promise no longer, vv. 21f. The Law was given for quite a different purpose, vv. 19,24.

i. On the meaning of this state statement, lit. 'on account of crimes', cf. Rm 7:7+.

j. Lit. 'Why then the Law? It was added on account of crimes until that posterity came...' Var. 'Why then the law of works? It was added until that posterity came...'.

k. In Jewish tradition angels were present at Sinai when the Law was given. The 'intermediary' is Moses, cf. Ac 7:38+.

l. The Law was given through an intermediary; the promise came directly from God.

m. Justification is a free gift; to receive this gift a person must first recognise that it is not the payment of a debt.

The coming of faith

Before faith came, we were allowed no freedom by the Law; we were being Rm 3:22; looked after till faith was revealed. •The Law was to be our guardian until the 10:4 Christ came and we could be justified by faith. •Now that that time has come
 4:5-7 we are no longer under that guardian, •and you are, all of you,ⁿ sons of God
 Jn 1:12 through faith in Christ Jesus. •All baptised in Christ,^o you have all clothed Rm 8:14f;29 yourselves in Christ, •and there are no more distinctions between Jew and Rm 6:4+; 13:14+ Greek, slave and free, male and female, but all of you are one in Christ Jesus.^p

Sons of God

4 Let me put this another way:^a an heir, even if he has actually inherited 1
 Rm 4:1+ everything, is no different from a slave for as long as he remains a child.
 Heb 9:16 He is under the control of guardians and administrators until he reaches the 2
 Col 2:8 age fixed by his father. •Now before we came of age we were as good as slaves to 3
 Ep 1:10 the elemental principles of this world,^b •but when the appointed time^c came, 4
 Rm 1:3 God sent his Son, born of a woman, born a subject of the Law, •to redeem the 5
 Rm 3:24+ subjects of the Law and to enable us to be adopted as sons.^d •The proof that you 6
 Rm 8:15-17 are sons is that God has sent the Spirit of his Son into our hearts: the Spirit
 Jn 15:15 that cries, 'Abba, Father', •and it is this that makes you a son, you are not a 7 slave any more; and if God has made you son, then he has made you heir.
 1 Co 12:2 Once you were ignorant of God, and enslaved to 'gods' who are not really 8
 1 Co 8:4-5 gods at all; •but now that you have come to acknowledge God—or rather, now 9
 1 Co 13:12 that God has acknowledged you^e—how can you want to go back to elemental
 Col 2:16,20 things like these, that can do nothing and give nothing, and be their slaves? •You 10
 Ph 2:16 and your special days and months and seasons and years! •You make me feel I 11 have wasted my time with you.

A personal appeal

1 Co 9:21 Brothers, all I ask is that you should copy me as I copied you.^f You have 12
 2 Th 3:7-+ never treated me in an unfriendly way before; •even at the beginning, when that 13
 Ac 16:6+ illness^g gave me the opportunity to preach the Good News to you, •you never 14
 Mt 10:40+ showed the least sign of being revolted or disgusted by my disease that was such 15 a trial to you; instead you welcomed me as an angel of God, as if I were Christ 16 Jesus himself. •What has become of this enthusiasm you had? I swear that you 17 would even have gone so far as to pluck out your eyes and give them to me. •Is it 18 telling you the truth that has made me your enemy? •The blame lies in the way 19 they have tried to win you over: by separating you from me, they want to win 20 you over to themselves. •It is always a good thing to win people over^h—and 21
 I do not have to be there with you—but it must be for a good purpose, •my 22
 1 Co 4:14-15 children! I must go through the pain of giving birth to you all over again, until 23
 2 Co 6:13 Christ is formed in you. •I wish I were with you now so that I could know exactly 24
 1 Th 2:7-8 what to say; as it is, I have no idea what to do for the best.
 Phm 10

The two covenants: Hagar and Sarah

You want to be subject to the Law? Then listen to what the Law says.ⁱ •It 21
 Gn 16:15; 21:2 says, if you remember, that Abraham had two sons, one by the slave-girl, and one 22 by his free-born wife. •The child of the slave-girl was born in the ordinary way;^j 23
 Gn 17:16 the child of the free woman was born as the result of a promise. •This can be 24 1 Co 10:6+ regarded as an allegory: the women stand for the two covenants. The first who 25 comes from Mount Sinai, and whose children are slaves, is Hagar—•since Sinai Jn 8:32f is in Arabia^k—and she corresponds to the present Jerusalem^l that is a slave like 26
 Ps 87:5 her children. •The Jerusalem above, however, is free and is our mother, •since 27 Rv 21:2 scripture says: Shout for joy, you barren women who bore no children! Break into Is 54:1 shouts of joy and gladness, you who were never in labour. For there are more sons of

- 28 the forsaken one than sons of the wedded wife. • Now you, my brothers, like Isaac, 29 are children of the promise, • and as at that time the child born in the ordinary 30 way persecuted the child born in the Spirit's way, so also now.^m • Does not scripture say: Drive away that slave-girl and her son; this slave-girl's son is not to 31 share the inheritance with the son of the free woman? • So, my brothers, we are the children, not of the slave-girl, but of the free-born wife.

III. EXHORTATION

Christian liberty

Rm 6:15+

- 1 5 When Christ freed us, he meant us to remain free.^a Stand firm, therefore,
 2 and do not submit again to the yoke of slavery. • It is I, Paul, who tell you this: if you allow yourselves to be circumcised, Christ will be of no benefit to 3 you at all. • With all solemnity I repeat my warning: Everyone who accepts 4 circumcision is obliged to keep the whole Law. • But if you do look to the Law to make you justified, then you have separated yourselves from Christ, and have 5 fallen from grace. • Christians are told by the Spirit to look to faith for those 6 rewards that righteousness hopes for,^b • since in Christ Jesus whether you are circumcised or not makes no difference—what matters is faith that makes its power felt through love.
- 7 You began your race well:^c who made you less anxious to obey the truth?
 8 You were not prompted by him who called you! • The yeast seems to be spreading 9 through the whole batch of you. • I feel sure that, united in the Lord, you^d will 10 agree with me, and anybody who troubles you in future will be condemned, 11 no matter who he is. • As for me, my brothers, if I still preach circumcision,^e why am I still persecuted? If I did that now, would there be any scandal of the 12 cross? • Tell those who are disturbing you I would like to see the knife slip.^f

Liberty and charity

- 13 My brothers, you were called, as you know, to liberty; but be careful, or this liberty will provide an opening for self-indulgence. Serve one another, rather, in

Rm 6:15+
 1 P 2:16
 Jude 4

n. All, i.e. not only 'we', who are Jews, but 'you', who are pagans.

o. Faith and baptism are not being contrasted: one involves the other, cf. Rm 6:4+.

p. Var. 'you are all of Christ Jesus'.

4 a. A further comparison, again taken from the law courts. Though the Jews are chosen as the heir presumptive, yet they are only slaves, v. 3, to the Law; a Christian who wants to submit to this slavery is going back to a state of childhood, cf. v. 9.

b. Reference to the elements that make up the physical universe, cf. v. 9; Col 2:8,20; Paul uses the phrase to indicate both the Law that minutely regulated the use of these elements, v. 10; Col 2:16, and the spirits that used the Law, Ga 3:19+; Col 2:15+, to dominate the universe, Col 2:18+.

c. Lit. 'fulness of time'; the phrase indicates how when the messianic age comes it will fill a need felt for centuries, rather like filling up a jug. Cf. Ac 1:7+ and Mk 1:15; 1 Co 10:11; Ep 1:10; Heb 1:2; 9:26; 1 P 1:20.

d. The two aspects of redemption, negative and positive: the slave attains freedom by becoming a son. First and foremost the adoption to sonship is not simply a legal right to inherit, v. 7, but the real and inward giving of the Spirit, v. 6.

e. The Galatians were converted by God who 'knew' them before they 'knew' him.

f. Probably by refusing to practise the Law's ritual, cf. 1 Co 9:21.

g. This probably prolonged Paul's stay in Galatia, and he took the opportunity to preach the Good News.

h. Var. 'Be won over to what is good'.

i. I.e. the witness of the scriptures, cf. Rm 3:19+; to inherit the promise it is not enough just to be a descendant of Abraham, cf. Mt 3:9; it is not enough to be descended from Abraham like Ishmael, it is necessary to be descended as the result of promise, like Isaac, v. 23; it is necessary to be a spiritual descendant, not just a genealogical one, v. 29; thus Isaac's birth prefigured the rebirth of Christians, v. 28; cf. Rm 9:6f. This basic argument is embellished with other more contrived comparisons.

j. Lit. 'according to the flesh', i.e. in the ordinary course of nature, cf. Rm 7:5+, without God working a miracle to fulfil his promise.

k. 'since Sinai is in Arabia'; var. 'Hagar stands for Sinai in Arabia' (or 'in Arabic').

l. I.e. enslaved to the Law, as opposed to the messianic Jerusalem, cf. Is 2:2, long barren, now a mother, v. 27; cf. Is 54:1-6.

m. Having demonstrated the Ishmael-Jews, Isaac-Christians, parallel, Paul makes two observations, vv. 29 and 30. According to some Jewish traditions Ishmael 'persecuted' Isaac, and according to the sacred text itself, Sarah sees Ishmael as her son's rival and demands Hagar's expulsion, Gn 21:9.

5 a. Human beings must choose either Christ or the Law as author of salvation. Some witnesses (Vulg.) join these words with the preceding verse 'with the freedom by which Christ has made us free'.

b. Or else 'The righteousness that was hoped for'.

c. One of Paul's favourite images, cf. 2:2;

1 Co 9:24-26; Ph 2:16; 3:12-14; 2 Tm 4:7; Heb 12:1.

d. Or else 'I have confidence in the Lord that you'.

e. As Paul's enemies apparently claimed, cf. 1:10; 2:3+.

f. Lit. 'I wish that those who are disturbing you might go even further (than circumcision) and castrate themselves'. Perhaps alluding to castration in the cult of Cybele, the sarcasm resembling that of Ph 3:2.

Rm 13:8-10, Lv 19:18 works of love, •since the whole of the Law is summarised in a single command: 14
Love your neighbour as yourself. •If you go snapping at each other and tearing 15 each other to pieces, you had better watch or you will destroy the whole community.

Rm 8:5f Let me put it like this: if you are guided by the Spirit you will be in no danger 16 of yielding to self-indulgence, •since self-indulgence is the opposite of the Spirit, 17 the Spirit is totally against such a thing, and it is precisely because the two are so opposed that you do not always carry out your good intentions. •If you are 18

Rm 8:14 Mt 7:17 led by the Spirit, no law can touch you. •When self-indulgence is at work the 19 results are obvious: fornication, gross indecency and sexual irresponsibility;
 1 Co 3:3, Ep 5:3 idolatry and sorcery; feuds and wrangling, jealousy, bad temper and quarrels; 20
 Jm 1:21 disagreements, factions, •envy;^g drunkenness, orgies and similar things. I warn 21
 1 Co 6:10 you now, as I warned you before: those who behave like this will not inherit the
 2 Co 6:6 kingdom of God. •What the Spirit brings is very different: love, joy, peace, 22
 Ep 5:9 patience, kindness, goodness, trustfulness, •gentleness and self-control.^h There 23
 1 Tm 4:12 2 P 1:5-7 can be no law against things like that, of course. •You cannot belong to Christ 24
 1 Tm 1:9 Jesus unless you crucify all self-indulgent passions and desires.

Rm 6:6 Col 3:5 Since the Spirit is our life, let us be directed by the Spirit. •We must stop 25
 Rm 8:14 Ph 2:3 being conceited, provocative and envious. 26

On kindness and perseverance

Mt 18:15 6 Brothers, if one of you misbehaves, the more spiritual of you who set him 1
 2 Th 3:14-15 right should do so in a spirit of gentleness, not forgetting that you may be 2
 2 Tm 2:25 tempted yourselves. •You should carry each other's troubles and fulfil^a the 2
 Jm 4:19f law of Christ. •It is the people who are not important who often make the 3
 1 Co 13:4-7 mistake of thinking that they are. •Let each of you examine his own conduct; 4 Rm 14:12 if you find anything to boast about, it will at least be something of your own, not just something better than your neighbour has. •Everyone has his own burden 5 to carry.

Rm 15:27 People under instruction should always contribute something to the support 6 of the man who is instructing them.

Jb 13:9 Don't delude yourself into thinking God can be cheated: where a man sows, 7
 Ho 8:7 there he reaps: •if he sows in the field of self-indulgence he will get a harvest of 8
 Dt 30:15-20 corruption out of it; if he sows in the field of the Spirit he will get from it a
 Jb 15:35 harvest of eternal life. •We must never get tired of doing good because if we 9
 Pr 11:18 don't give up the struggle we shall get our harvest at the proper time. •While 10
 Rm 6:21-22 we have the chance,^b we must do good^c to all,^d and especially to our brothers 1 Co 15:35-49 in the faith.

Epilogue

Rm 16:17 Take good note of what I am adding in my own handwriting and in large 11
 1 Co 16:21 letters.^e •It is only self-interest that makes them want^f to force circumcision on 12
 Col 4:18 you—they want to escape persecution for the cross of Christ—•they accept 13
 Rm 2:21f circumcision but do not keep the Law themselves; they only want you to be Rm 3:27+ circumcised so that they can boast of the fact. •As for me, the only thing I can 5:6+ boast about is the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom the world is 1 Co 7:19 crucified to me, and I to the world.^g •^hIt does not matter if a person is circumcised 15
 2 Co 5:17+ or not; what matters is for him to become an altogether new creature. •Peace 16
 Ps 125:5 and mercy to all who follow this rule, who form the Israel of God.ⁱ

I want no more trouble from anybody after this; the marks on my body are 17

The triumph and the supremacy of Christ

- 15 That will explain why I, having once heard about your faith in the Lord Jesus, 16 and the love that you show^a towards all the saints, •have never failed to remember 17 you in my prayers and to thank God for you. •May the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, give you a spirit^r of wisdom and perception the eyes of your mind^s so that you can see what hope his call holds for you, what 19 rich glories he has promised the saints will inherit •and how infinitely great is the power that he has exercised for us believers. This you can tell from the strength 20 of his power •at work in Christ, when he used it to raise him from the dead and 21 to make him sit at his right hand, in heaven, •far above every Sovereignty, Authority, Power, or Domination,^t or any other name that can be named, not 22 only in this age but also in the age to come. •He has put all things under his feet, body, the fullness of him who fills the whole creation.^u

2 Co 4:4

1 a. Add. 'who are at Ephesus'. The words 'at Ephesus' were probably not part of the original text. The words 'who are' could be part of a very early addition. Some critics think they are authentic, that they were followed by a blank to be filled in with the name of whichever church was being sent the letter.

b. All the way through the letter, 1:20; 2:6; 3:10; 6:12, Paul reverts to this opening reference to heaven. The spiritual blessings listed in the following verses must wait till the end of the world before they can be fully realised in heaven where they have been formulated since all eternity.

c. First blessing: through their union with the glorified Christ the faithful already enjoy, in a hidden sort of way, the eternal happiness to which the chosen are called. 'Love' here is primarily the love God has for us, and that leads him to 'choose' us and to call us to be 'holy', cf. Col 3:12; 1 Th 1:4; 2 Th 2:13; Rm 11:28, but does not exclude our love for God that results from and is a response to his own love for us, cf. Rm 5:5.

d. Second blessing: Jesus Christ, the only Son, is both the source and the model of the way God has chosen for us to become holy, i.e. by adopting us as his heirs, cf. Rm 8:29.

e. The word 'grace' (charis) as it is used here emphasises not so much the interior gift that makes a human being holy, as the gratuitousness of God's favour and the way he manifests his glory, cf. Ex 24:16f. These are the two themes that run through this account of God's blessings: their source is God's liberality, and their purpose is to make his glory appreciated by creatures. Everything comes from him, and everything should lead to him.

f. Var. (Vulg) 'his beloved Son'.

g. Third blessing: our redemption by an event in time, i.e. the death of Jesus.

h. God the Father.

i. Fourth blessing: the revelation of the 'mystery', Rm 16:25f.

j. Lit. 'for a dispensation of the times' fullness', cf. Ga 4:4f.

k. The main theme of this letter is how the whole body of creation, having been cut off from the Creator by sin, is decomposing, and how its rebirth is effected by Christ reuniting all its parts into an organism with himself as the head, so as to reattach it to God. The human (Jew and pagan) and the angelic worlds are brought together again through the fact that they were saved by a single act, cf. 4:10f.

l. Christ.

m. Fifth blessing: the Jews are chosen to be the human share allotted to God, and are to be his witness until the coming of the Messiah. Paul, being a Jew, here uses 'we'.

n. Sixth blessing: the pagans are called to share the salvation that had, till then, been reserved for the Jews; that they will be saved is proved by the fact that they receive the Spirit as was promised.

o. Paul completes his trinitarian account of God's plan with the Spirit, since the giving of the Spirit shows the plan has reached its final stage. Nevertheless, though this gift has already begun, it is only given in a hidden way while the unspiritual world lasts, and will only be given fully when the kingdom of God is complete and Christ comes in glory.

p. Lit. 'the setting free of that (enslaved people) which has been acquired' i.e. by God, and at the cost of the life of his Son. This is one of the occasions when Paul widens an O.T. concept (like 'blessing', 'saint', 'choice', 'adoption', 'redemption', 'share', 'promise') by applying it to the Church as the new Israel and the body of the saved.

q. Om. 'and the love that you show'.

r. This gift is what technically would be called (actual) grace.

s. Lit. 'heart': used in the Bible for the seat of knowledge as well as of love.

t. Names traditional in Jewish literature for angelic hierarchies.

u. Lit. 'fills all in all'. The Church, as the body of Christ 1 Co 12:12f, can be called the fullness (pleroma; cf. infra 3:19; 4:13) in so far as it includes the whole new creation that shares (since it forms the setting of the human race) in the cosmic rebirth under Christ its ruler and head, cf. Col 1:15-20f. The adverbial phrase 'all in all' is used to suggest something of limitless size, cf. 1 Co 12:6; 15:28; Col 3:11.

2 a. Air is the habitat of demons and of their ruler Satan.

b. Paul writes as a Jew.

Rm 2:3;9,23 too in the past, living sensual lives, ruled entirely by our own physical desires 5:6 and our own ideas; so that by nature we were as much under God's anger as the

Rm 1:16+ God; •not by anything that you have done, so that nobody can claim the credit. 9
2 Co 5:17+ We are God's work of art, created in Christ Jesus to live the good life as from the 10

Do not forget, then, that there was a time when you^f who were pagans 11

 Ph 2:13

c. 'We' here means both the pagans, cf. vv. 1-2, and the Jews, cf. v. 3. V. 3 is a parenthesis.

d. 'with Christ'; var. 'in Christ', 'it is through grace'; var. (Vulg) 'through whose grace'.

e. Here as in Col 2:12; 3:1-4 the use of the past tense shows that the resurrection and triumph of Christians in heaven is considered as actually existing, whereas the future tense in Rm 6:3-11; 8:11, 17f treats it as something that has still to take place. Treating the eschatological reality as already existing is a characteristic of Paul's letters written from prison.

f. The description of this past that Paul now gives is meant to apply to all pagans in a general way—not specifically to those he is writing to.

g. I.e. you had no Messiah.

h. The successive covenants made by God with Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, David etc.; cf. Ex 19:1+; Lv 26:42, 45; Si 44-45; Ws 18:22; 2 M 8:15; Rm 9:4.

i. Hope of a Messiah, which was hitherto confined to Israel, 1:12.

j. The pagans had many gods but not the one true God, 1 Co 8:5f.

k. The crucifixion of Christ that brought together Jews and pagans vv. 14-15, and reconciled both with the Father vv. 16-18.

l. The wall separating the court of the Jews from the court of the pagans in the Temple, cf. Ac 21:28f.

m. The Mosaic Law gave the Jews a privileged status and separated them from pagans. Jesus abolished this Law by fulfilling it once for all on the cross, Col 2:14+.

n. This New Man is the prototype of the new humanity that God recreated (2 Co 5:17+) in the person of Christ, the second Adam (1 Co 15:45), after killing the sinfully corrupt race of the first Adam in the crucifixion (Rm 5:12f; 8:3; 1 Co 15:21). This New Adam has been created in 'the goodness and holiness of the truth' 4:24, and he is unique because in him the boundaries between any one group and the rest of the human race all disappear, Col 3:10f; Ga 3:27f.

o. This 'single Body' is both the physical body of Jesus that was executed by crucifixion, Col 1:22+, and the Church or 'mystical' body of Christ in which, once they are reconciled, all the parts function in their own place, 1 Co 12:12+.

p. Through the apostles who in his name preached the Good News of salvation and peace.

q. The one Spirit that gives life to the single body (of Christ who is one with his Church) is the Holy Spirit who has changed the form of the body now it has risen, and by doing so has come down on each of the parts of which it is made up. The trinitarian structure of this section is repeated in v. 22.

r. Paul inserts vv. 14-18 (how Christ has united pagans and Jews) between his contrasting descriptions of pagans before (vv. 11-13) and after (19-22) conversion.

s. The N.T. prophets, cf. 3:5; 4:11; Ac 11:27+, together with the apostles, are the witnesses to whom the divine plan was first revealed and who were the first to preach the Good News, cf. Lk 11:49; Mt 23:34; 10:41. This is why the Church as well as being founded on Christ, 1 Co 3:10f, is also said to be founded on them.

t. 'every'; var. 'the entire'.

3 a. V. 1 (continued in v. 15) breaks off abruptly, the parenthetical development of vv. 2-14 being suggested by the mention of pagans in v. 1. On the grace of being the apostle of the pagans, cf. 3:7f; Rm 1:5; 15:15f; 1 Co 3:10; Ga 2:9.

b. Cf. 2 Co 12:1, 7. The immediate reference is to what was revealed to Paul on the way to Damascus, cf. Ga 1:16; Ac 9:15; 22:21; 26:16-18.

c. The N.T. prophets, cf. 2:20+. The O.T. prophets had only an obscure and imperfect knowledge of the mystery of the Messiah, cf. 1 P 1:10-12; Mt 13:17.

d. I.e. as the Judaeo-Christians, cf. 2:19.

e. Var. (Vulg) 'showing clearly to all'.

f. The evil spirits were unaware of God's plan for salvation and so they persuaded human beings to crucify Christ, 1 Co 2:8; and it is only the existence of the Church that makes them aware of it now, cf. 1 P 1:12.

g. Var. 'our glory'.

h. Add. (Vulg) 'of our Lord Jesus Christ'.

i. A play on the Greek words for 'father' and 'family' (pater; patria): patria is used for any social group descended from a common ancestor and the one ancestor common to human beings and angels is God, the supreme Father.

j. Stoics used this expression to mean the totality of the cosmos. Paul uses it to suggest the cosmic function of Christ in the rebirth of the world. It could be referred to the size of the mystery of salvation, or preferably to Christ's universal love on which (next verse) the mystery depends. Cf. 1:17-19, 23; 2:7; 3:8; Col 2:2f.

k. This love for us that Christ proved by accepting death, 5:2, 25; Ga 2:20, is identical with the love the Father has, 2:4, 7; 2 Co 5:14, 18-19; Rm 8:35, 37, 39. Cf. 1 Co 13:1+.

l. The love of God cannot be 'grasped' (v. 18, using a philosophical term technical in Greek) but can be 'known' by a mystic's awareness of it through love, cf. 1:17f; 3:3f; Ho 2:22+; Jn 10:14+. This awareness is something deeper than scientific knowledge, cf. 1 Co 13, and is more like knowing that one is loved by the other than knowing the other that one loves, cf. Ga 4:9; even awareness of this sort however can never 'grasp' this sort of love.

m. Lit. 'in order that you may be filled to all the fulness (pleroma) of God'. (Var. 'in order that all the fulness of God may be filled'.) Christ who is filled with the divine life fills Christians with it, Col 2:9, and in this way a Christian enters both the Church and the new cosmos which he helps to build and which is the fulness of the total Christ, 1:23; 2:22; 4:12-13; Col 2:10+.

n. Var. (Vulg) 'can do all'.

II. EXHORTATION

A call to unity^a

4 I, the prisoner in the Lord, implore you therefore to lead a life worthy of your 1 vocation. •Bear with one another charitably, in complete selflessness, 2 gentleness and patience. •Do all you can to preserve the unity of the Spirit by the 3 peace that binds you together. •There is one Body, one Spirit, just as you were all 4 called into one and the same hope when you were called. •There is one Lord, one 5 faith, one baptism, •and one God who is Father of all, over all, through all and 6 within all.^b

Each one of us, however, has been given his own share of grace,^c given as Christ allotted it. •It was said that he would:

*When he ascended to the height, he captured prisoners,
 he gave gifts to men.^d*

When it says, 'he ascended', what can it mean if not that he descended^e right down to the lower regions of the earth?^f •The one who rose higher than all the heavens to fill all things^g is none other than the one who descended. •And to some, his gift was that they should be apostles; to some, prophets; to some, evangelists; to some, pastors and teachers;^h •so that the saints togetherⁱ make a unity in the work of service, building up the body of Christ. •In this way we are all to come to unity in our faith and in our knowledge of the Son of God, until we become the perfect Man,^j fully mature with the fullness of Christ himself.

Then we shall not be children any longer, or tossed one way and another and carried along by every wind of doctrine, at the mercy of all the tricks men play and their cleverness in practising deceit. •If we live by the truth and in love, we shall grow in all ways into Christ, who is the head •by whom the whole body is fitted and joined together, every joint^k adding its own strength, for each separate part to work according to its function. So the body grows until it has built itself up, in love.

The new life in Christ

In particular, I want to urge you in the name of the Lord, not to go on living the aimless kind of life that pagans live. •Intellectually they are in the dark, and they are estranged from the life of God, without knowledge because they have shut their hearts to it. •Their sense of right and wrong once dulled,^l they have abandoned themselves to sexuality and eagerly pursue a career of indecency of every kind.^m •Now that is hardly the way you have learnt from Christ, •unless you failed to hear him properly when you were taught what the truth is in Jesus.
 You must give up your old way of life; you must put aside your old self, which gets corrupted by following illusory desires. •Your mind must be renewed by a spiritual revolution •so that you can put on the new self that has been created in God's way, in the goodness and holiness of the truth.ⁿ

So from now on, there must be no more lies: You must speak the truth to one another, since we are all parts of one another. •Even if you are angry, you must not sin: never let the sun set on your anger •or else you will give the devil a foothold.
 Anyone who was a thief must stop stealing; he should try to find some useful manual work instead, and be able to do some good^o by helping others^p that are in need. •Guard against foul talk; let your words be for the improvement of others, as occasion offers, and do good to your listeners, •otherwise you will only be grieving the Holy Spirit of God who has marked you with his seal for you to be set free when the day comes.^q •Never have grudges against others, or lose your temper, or raise your voice to anybody, or call each other names, or allow any sort of spitefulness. •Be friends with one another, and kind, forgiving each other as readily as God forgave you^r in Christ.

- ¹ 5 Try, then, to imitate God, as children of his that he loves, •and follow Christ by loving as he loved you, giving himself up in our place as a fragrant offering and a sacrifice to God. •Among you there must be not even a mention of fornication or impurity in any of its forms, or promiscuity: this would hardly become the saints! •There must be no coarseness, or salacious talk and jokes—all this is wrong for you; raise your voices in thanksgiving instead. •For you can be quite certain that nobody who actually indulges in fornication or impurity or promiscuity—which is worshipping a false god^a—can inherit anything of the kingdom of God. •Do not let anyone deceive you with empty arguments: it is for this loose living that God's anger comes down on those who rebel against him. •Make sure that you are not included with them. •You were darkness once, but now you are light in the Lord; be like children of light, •for the effects of the light are seen in complete goodness and right living and truth.
- ¹⁰ Try to discover what the Lord wants of you, •having nothing to do with the futile works of darkness but exposing them by contrast. •The things which are done in secret are things that people are ashamed even to speak of; •but anything exposed by the light will be illuminated •and anything illuminated turns into light.^b That is why it is said:^c

Wake up from your sleep, rise from the dead,
and Christ will shine on you.^d

- ¹⁵ So be very careful about the sort of lives you lead, like intelligent and not like senseless people. •This may be a wicked age, but your lives should redeem it.
- ¹⁷ And do not be thoughtless but recognise what is the will of the Lord. •Do not drug yourselves with wine, this is simply dissipation; be filled with the Spirit.
- ¹⁹ Sing the words and tunes of the psalms and hymns when you are together, and go on singing and chanting to the Lord in your hearts, •so that always and everywhere you are giving thanks to God who is our Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

4 a. Paul lists three different threats to the Church's unity: arguments between Christians vv. 1-3, diversity of service in the Church vv. 7-11, unorthodox teaching vv. 14-15. These threats are all averted by applying the principle of unity in Christ, vv. 4-6, 12-13, 18.

b. Var. (Vulg) 'within all of us'.

c. Charisms or special graces given to individuals for the benefit of the whole community, cf. 1 Co 12:1+.

d. Following rabbinic practice Paul quotes this text for the sake of two phrases: 'he ascended' vv. 9-10, and 'he gave gifts' v. 11, which he interprets as the ascension of Jesus and the descent of the Spirit.

e. Add. (Vulg) 'first of all'.

f. Lit. 'into the lower parts of the earth'. The most appropriate interpretation is that 'the earth' is itself the 'lower region' to which Christ descended to give 'the gifts' to mankind, and Paul's argument is that 'these gifts can only be from the one who ascended'. But the phrase can be taken to mean the subterranean kingdom of the dead, Nb 16:33f, to which Christ descended before the resurrection, 1 P 3:19f.

g. By ascending through all the cosmic spheres and taking possession of them all one after another, Christ becomes the head of the whole pleroma or total cosmos. 1:10+, and makes the entire universe acknowledge him as 'Lord', cf. 1:20-23; Col 1:19; Ph 2:8-11.

h. Paul limits his list to charisms that relate to teaching and which are the only ones that apply in this context, vv. 13-15.

i. The particular 'saints' Paul mentions here seem to be missionaries and other teachers, cf. 3:5, but may include all the faithful in so far as they all help to build up the Church, cf. Ac 9:13+.

j. This does not refer primarily to the individual Christian. The sense is collective. It can be taken as referring to Christ himself, the New Man, the archetype of all who are reborn 2:15+, or else (and this sense is to be preferred) as referring to the total Christ, i.e. the whole body, 1 Co 12:12+, made of head v. 15; 1:22; Col 1:18, and the rest of the body v. 16; 5:30.

k. Var. (Vulg) 'each member'.

l. Var. (Vulg) 'Being devoid of hope'.

m. Or 'sexuality and every kind of indecency and greed'.

n. Each human being should 'put on the New Man', Ep 2:15+ (here, as in v. 22, translated 'self'), so as to be re-created in him, cf. Ga 3:27; Rm 13:14. In some places Paul talks in the same way about the 'new creature', 2 Co 5:17+.

o. Lit. 'working the good thing with his own hand'. 'Good' and '(own) hand' are omitted or interchanged in various readings: the original text may have been ambiguous.

p. Var. (Vulg) 'for building up the faith'.

q. The one Holy Spirit that keeps the one body of Christ united, 4:4; 1 Co 12:13, is 'grieved', cf. 4:30; Is 63:10, by anything that harms the unity of the body.

r. 'you'; var. 'us'. The same in 5:2.

5 a. 'promiscuity'; lit. 'greed', apparently sexual greed in this context. Uncontrolled greed treats all creatures with the worship due to God and so turns them into idols.

b. The wrong sort of way to talk about sexual immorality is the way that leaves the subject in a dangerous obscurity, v. 3. To talk about it in such a way, however, that it is recognised for what it is will lead to its being corrected: this sort of light is the light of Christ that puts an end to darkness.

c. This (like 1 Tm 3:16) seems to be an extract from an early Christian hymn. On baptism as an enlightening, cf. Heb 6:4; 10:32 (cf. Rm 6:4+).

d. Var. 'and you will touch Christ'.

The morals of the home

Give way to one another in obedience to Christ. •Wives should regard their husbands as they regard the Lord, •since^e as Christ is head of the Church and saves the whole body, so is a husband the head of his wife; •and as the Church submits to Christ, so should wives to their husbands, in everything. •Husbands should love their wives just as Christ loved the Church and sacrificed himself for her •to make her holy. He made her clean by washing her in water with a form of words, •so that when he took her to himself she would be glorious, with no speck or wrinkle or anything like that, but holy and faultless.^f •In the same way, husbands must love their wives as they love their own bodies; for a man to love his wife is for him to love himself. •A man never hates his own body, but he feeds it and looks after it; and that is the way Christ treats the Church, •because it is his body—and we are its living parts.^g •For this reason, a man must leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife, and the two will become one body. •This mystery has many implications; but I am saying it applies to Christ and the Church.^h •To sum up; you too, each one of you, must love his wife as he loves himself; and let every wife respect her husband.

6 Children, be obedient to your parents in the Lord^a—that is your duty. •The first commandment that has a promise attached to it is: Honour your father and mother, •and the promise is: and you will prosper and have a long life in the land. And parents, never drive your children to resentment but in bringing them up correct them and guide them as the Lord does.

Slaves, be obedient to the men who are called your masters in this world, with deep respect^b and sincere loyalty, as you are obedient to Christ: •not only when you are under their eye, as if you had only to please men, but because you are slaves of Christ and wholeheartedly do the will of God. •Work hard and willingly, but do it for the sake of the Lord and not for the sake of men. •You can be sure that everyone, whether a slave or a free man, will be properly rewarded by the Lord for whatever work he has done well. •And those of you who are employers, treat your slaves in the same spirit; do without threats, remembering that they and you have the same Master in heaven and he is not impressed by one person more than by another.

The spiritual war

Finally, grow strong in the Lord, with the strength of his power. •Put God's armour on^c so as to be able to resist the devil's tactics. •For it is not against human enemies that we have^d to struggle, but against the Sovereignities and the Powers who originate the darkness in this world, the spiritual army of evil in the heavens.^e That is why you must rely on God's armour, or you will not be able to put up any resistance when the worst happens, or have enough resources to hold your ground.

So stand your ground, with truth buckled round your waist, and integrity for a breastplate, •wearing for shoes on your feet the eagerness to spread the gospel of peace •and always carrying the shield of faith so that you can use it to put out the burning arrows of the evil one. •And then you must accept salvation from God to be your helmet and receive the word of God from the Spirit to use as a sword.

Pray all the time, asking for what you need, praying in the Spirit on every possible occasion. Never get tired of staying awake to pray for all the saints; and pray for me to be given an opportunity to open my mouth^f and speak without fear and give out the mystery of the gospel^g •of which I am an ambassador in chains; pray that in proclaiming it I may speak as boldly as I ought to.

Personal news and final salutation

I should like you to know, as well, what is happening to me and what I am doing; my dear brother Tychicus, my loyal helper in the Lord, will tell you

- 22 everything. •I am sending him to you precisely for this purpose, to give you news about us and reassure you.
- 23 May God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ grant peace, love and faith to
- 24 all the brothers. •May grace and eternal life be with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ.^h e. By drawing a parallel between a human marriage and the marriage of Christ to his Church, vv. 23-32, Paul makes these two concepts illumine each other. Christ is the husband of the Church because he is her head and because he loves the Church as much as a man loves his own body when he loves his wife. Having established this, the comparison naturally suggests an ideal for human marriage. The symbol of Israel as the wife of Yahweh is common in the O.T., Ho 1:2+.

f. It was customary in the Middle East, at the time this letter was written, for the 'sons of the wedding' to escort the bride to her husband after she had bathed and dressed. As applied mystically to the Church, Christ washes his bride himself in the bath of baptism, and makes her immaculate (note the mention of a baptismal formula) and introduces her to himself.

g. Add. (Vulg) 'made from his flesh and blood'.

h. Paul makes this Gn text a prophecy of the marriage of Christ and the Church: a mystery, like that of the salvation of the pagans, that has been hidden but is now revealed, cf. 1:9f; 3:3f.

6 a. Om. 'in the Lord'.

b. Lit. 'fear and trembling', cf. 1 Co 2:3+.

c. God in the O.T. arms himself against his enemies, cf. Is 11:4-5; 59:16-18; Ws 5:17-23. These are the arms of Yahweh with which, Paul says, the Christian is to arm himself.

d. Var. 'you have'.

e. These are the spirits who were thought to move the stars and, consequently, the universe. They lived in 'the heavens', 1:20f; 3:10; Ph 2:10, or in 'the air', 2:2, i.e. the space between the surface of the earth and the heaven where God lives. Some of them are among the 'elemental principles of the world', Ga 4:3. They disobeyed God and want to enslave the human race to themselves in sin 2:2. We used to be their slaves but Christ came to free us, 1:21; Col 1:13; 2:15,20, and if Christians are armed with the power of Christ, they will be able to fight them.

f. Lit. 'that I may be given speech in opening of my mouth', Hebraism, cf. Ezk 3:27; 29:21; Ps 51:15; cf. Col 4:3.

g. Om. 'of the gospel'.

h. Or 'May grace be with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in eternal life'. Add. (Vulg.) 'Amen', cf. Ph 4:23.

I thank my God whenever I think of you; and •every time I pray for all of you, I 3 pray with joy,^b •remembering how you have helped to spread the Good News^c 5 from the day you first heard it^d right up to the present. •I am quite certain that 6 the One who began this good work in you will see that it is finished when the Day of Christ Jesus comes. •It is only natural that I should feel like this towards 7 you all, since you have shared the privileges which have been mine: both my chains and my work defending and establishing the gospel. You have a permanent 8 place in my heart, •and God knows how much I miss you all, loving you as Christ 9 Jesus loves you. •My prayer is that your love for each other may increase more 9 and more and never stop improving your knowledge and deepening your perception •so that you can always recognise what is best.^e This will help you to 10 become pure and blameless, and prepare you for the Day of Christ, •when you 11 will reach the perfect goodness which Jesus Christ produces in us for the glory and praise of God.

Paul's own circumstances

actually been a help to the Good News.

My chains, in Christ, have become famous not only all over the Praetorium^g but 13 everywhere, •and most of the brothers have taken courage in the Lord from these 14 chains of mine and are getting more and more daring in announcing the Message^h without any fear. •It is true that some of them are doing it just out of rivalry 15 and competition, but the rest preach Christ with the right intention, •out of 16 nothing but love, as they know that this is my invariable way of defending the gospel. •The others, who proclaim Christ for jealous or selfish motives, do not 17 mind if they make my chains heavier to bear. •But does it matter? Whether 18 from dishonest motives or in sincerity, Christ is proclaimed; and that makes me happy; •and I shall continue being happy, because I know this will help to save 19 me, thanks to your prayers and to the help which will be given to me by the Spirit of Jesus. •My one hope and trust is that I shall never have to admit defeat, 20 but that now as always I shall have the courage for Christ to be glorified in my body,ⁱ whether by my life or by my death. •Life to me, of course, is Christ, but 21 then death would bring me something more; •but then again, if living in this 22 body means doing work which is having good results—I do not know what

- 23 I should choose. •I am caught in this dilemma: I want to be gone and be with 2 Co 5:6-9 24 Christ,^j which would be very much the better, •but for me to stay alive in this 25 body is a more urgent need for your sake. •This weighs with me so much that I feel 2:24 sure I shall survive and stay with you all,^k and help you to progress in the faith 26 and even increase your joy in it; •and so you will have another reason to give praise to Christ Jesus on my account when I am with you again. 1:4+; 2:16

Fight for the faith

- 27 Avoid anything in your everyday lives^l that would be unworthy of the gospel of Christ, so that, whether I come to you and see for myself, or stay at a distance and only hear about you, I shall know that you are unanimous in meeting the 28 attack with firm resistance, united by your love for the faith of the gospel •and quite unshaken by your enemies. This would be the sure sign that they will lose 29 and you will be saved. It would be a sign from God •that he has given you the 30 privilege not only of believing in Christ, but of suffering for him as well. •You and I are together in the same fight as you saw me fighting before and, as you will and a common mind. That is the one thing which would make me completely 3 happy.^c •There must be no competition among you, no conceit; but everybody is to be self-effacing. Always consider the other person to be better than yourself, 4 so that nobody thinks of his own interests first but everybody thinks of other

 5 people's interests instead. •In your minds you must be the same as Christ Jesus;^d Jn 13:15

1 a. The word 'episcopos' ('overseer', 'supervisor' or 'shepherd') has not yet acquired the same meaning as 'bishop', cf. Ti 1:5f. The 'deacons' are their assistants, Ac 6:1-6.

b. Joy is one of the chief characteristics of this letter; cf. 1:18,25; 2:2,17,28,29; 3:1; 4:1,4,10.

c. Not only by sending money, 4:14-16, but by suffering for the Good News, 1:29-30.

d. Since the day they were converted, cf. Ac 16:12-40.

e. The ability to see what is morally good is one of the consequences of mutual love.

f. I.e. Paul's arrest and imprisonment awaiting trial.

g. If Paul is writing from his house-arrest in Rome, this must refer to members of the Praetorian Guard (who were quartered just outside the city wall). If Paul is writing from Ephesus or Caesarea, he is referring to the staff of the Praetorium which was the name of the official residence of the governor in each of those cities.

h. Add. 'of God' (Vulg.) or 'of the Lord'.

i. By baptism and Eucharist a Christian is so closely united to Christ, cf. 1 Co 6:15; 10:17; 12:12f,27; Ga 2:20; Ep 5:30, that his life, sufferings and death can be attributed mystically to Christ living in him and being glorified in him, cf. 1 Co 6:20; Rm 14:8. This union would be particularly close in the case of an apostle like Paul, cf. Col 1:24; 2 Co 4:10f.

j. As in 2 Cor 5:8+, this supposes that the (good) Christian who dies is with Christ at once without any temporal gap between death and 'last judgement'.

k. This presentiment (it was no more than that, cf. 2:17) was not mistaken, cf. Ac 20:1-6 and the Pastoral Letters, unlike what he had thought was a last farewell to the Ephesians, Ac 20:25.

l. Lit. 'Live your city-life (i.e. ordinary social life) worthily of the gospel'. The New City of God's kingdom has Christ for its ruler, the gospel for its law, and the Christians as its free citizens, cf. 3:20; Ep 2:19.

m. The first reference is to the persecution Paul had to put up with when he was with them in Philippi, Ac 16:19f; 1 Th 2:2; the second is to his present imprisonment awaiting trial.

2 a. Lit. 'If there is any exhortation in Christ, if there is any incentive in love'; this is a very friendly but a very powerful appeal, in the name of all that is holiest.

b. Almost certainly meant to be taken as a trinitarian reference: in this case 'love' is appropriated to the Father, cf. 2 Co 13:13+.

c. This urgent plea for unity suggests that internal divisions threatened the peace of the church of Philippi, cf. 1:27; 2:14; 4:2. Note how Paul keeps insisting that he is addressing all of them, 1:1,4,7,25; 2:17,26; 4:21.

d. Vv. 6-11 are a hymn, though whether composed or only quoted by Paul is uncertain. Each stanza deals with one stage of the mystery of Christ: divine pre-existence, kenosis in the Incarnation, his further kenosis in death, his glorification, adoration by the cosmos, new title of Lord. This hymn is concerned solely with the historical Christ in whose personality godhead and manhood are not divided; Paul nowhere divorces the humanity and divinity of Jesus, though he does distinguish his various stages of existence, cf. Col 1:13f.

e. Lit. 'Who subsisting in the form of God': here 'form' means all the attributes that express and reveal the essential 'nature' of God: Christ, being God, had all the divine prerogatives by right.

f. Lit. 'did not deem being on an equality with God as something to grasp' or 'hold on to'. This refers not to his equality by nature 'subsisting in the form of God', and which Christ could not have surrendered, but to his being publicly treated and honoured as equal to God

The true way of Christian salvation

Ga 5:12	It is no trouble to me to repeat what I have already written to you, and as far
2:17+	as you are concerned, it will make for safety. •Beware of dogs! ^b Watch out for	2
Jr 4:4+	the people who are making mischief. Watch out for the cutters. ^c •We are the	3

- real people of the circumcision, we who worship in accordance with the Spirit of God;^d we have our own glory from Christ Jesus without having to rely on a physical operation.^e • If it came to relying on physical evidence, I should be fully qualified myself. Take any man who thinks he can rely on what is physical: I am even better qualified. • I was born of the race of Israel and of the tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew born of Hebrew parents,^f and I was circumcised when I was eight days old. As for the Law, I was a Pharisee; • as for working for religion, I was a persecutor of the Church; as far as the Law can make you perfect, I was faultless. But because of Christ, I have come to consider all these advantages that I had as disadvantages. • Not only that, but I believe nothing can happen that will outweigh the supreme advantage of knowing Christ Jesus my Lord. For him I have accepted the loss of everything, and I look on everything as so much rubbish if only I can have Christ • and be given a place in him. I am no longer trying for perfection by my own efforts, the perfection that comes from the Law, but I want only the perfection that comes through faith in Christ, and is from God and based on faith.^g • All I want is to know Christ and the power of his resurrection and to share his sufferings by reproducing the pattern of his death. • That is the way I can hope to take my place in the resurrection of the dead.^h • Not that I have become perfect yet: I have not yet won, but I am still running, trying to capture the prize for which Christ Jesus captured me.ⁱ • I can assure you my brothers, I am far from thinking that I have already won. All I can say is that I forget the past and I strain ahead for what is still to come; • I am racing for the finish, for the prize to which God calls us upwards to receive in Christ Jesus. • We who are called 'perfect'^j must all think in this way.^k If there is some point on which you see things differently, God will make it clear to you; • meanwhile, let us go forward on the road that has brought us to where we are.^l which was a thing that Jesus (unlike Adam, Gn 3:5,22, who wanted to be seen to be like God) could and did give up in his human life.
- My brothers, be united in following my rule of life. Take as your models everybody who is already doing this and study them as you used to study us.

g. 'He emptied himself': this is not so much a reference to the fact of the incarnation, as to the way it took place. What Jesus freely gave up was not his divine nature, but the glory to which his divine nature entitled him, and which had been his before the incarnation, Jn 17:5, and which 'normally' speaking would have been observable in his human body (cf. the transfiguration, Mt 17:1-8). He voluntarily deprived himself of this so that it could be returned to him by the Father, cf. Jn 8:50,54, after his sacrifice vv. 9-11.

h. 'slave' as opposed to 'Kyrios' v. 11, cf. Ga 4:1; Col 3:22f. Christ as man led a life of submission and humble obedience, v. 8. This is probably a reference to the 'servant' of Is 52:13-53:12, cf. Is 42:1+.

i. Not just 'a human being' but a human being 'like others', sharing all the weaknesses of the human condition apart from sin.

j. Lit. 'And in fashion found as a man'.

k. Lit. 'super-raised him': by the resurrection and ascension.

l. Named him 'Lord', v. 11; or, at a deeper level, gave him the ineffable and divine name which, through the triumph of the risen Christ, can now be expressed by the title Kyrios, Lord: cf. Ac 2:21+; 3:16+.

m. Greater even than the angels, cf. Ep 1:21; Heb 1:4; 1 P 3:22.

n. The three cosmic divisions that cover the entire creation, cf. Rv 5:3,13.

o. Var. 'and every tongue will acclaim'.

p. Om. 'Christ'. This proclamation is the essence of the Christian creed, Rm 10:9; 1 Co 12:3; cf. Col 2:6. The use of Is 45:23 (in which this homage is addressed to Yahweh himself) is a clear indication of the divine character that is meant to be understood by the title Kyrios, cf. Jn 20:28; Ac 2:36+.

q. Vulg. interpretation is 'proclaim that Jesus Christ is in the glory of God the Father'.

r. Libations were common to both Greek and Jewish sacrifices: Paul merely applies this custom metaphorically to the spiritual worship of the new creation, cf. 3:3; 4:18; Rm 1:9+.

s. Var. 'the Lord's work', or, 'the work'.

3 a. Paul interrupts the conclusion of the letter to add a long postscript.

b. Term of abuse applied by Jews to pagans, Mt 15:26 and possibly 7:6, and which Paul ironically applies to non-Christian Jews.

c. Lit. 'for the gash'. Paul uses this term (katatomē) as a contemptuous pun on 'circumcision' (peritomē), implying a comparison between physical circumcision and the self-inflicted gashes in pagan cults, cf. 1 K 18:28, cf. Ga 5:12.

d. Var. (Vulg.) 'we who worship God in spirit'.

e. Lit. 'without trusting in the flesh', which covers all those outer observances of the old Law, of which circumcision is the most typical example, cf. Rm 7:5+.

f. His parents were Pharisees, Ac 23:6, of the tribe of Benjamin, Rm 11:1. Paul spoke Aramaic, Ac 21:40, unlike the hellenist Jews, Ac 6:1+.

g. The differences between these two sorts of perfection form the entire subject of Paul's letters to the Christians of Galatia and Rome.

h. Paul is not referring to the general resurrection of both saved and damned, Jn 5:29, but to the true resurrection of the saints who are separated from the 'spiritually' dead to life with Christ, Lk 20:35+.

i. Lit. 'but I follow (to see) if indeed I may grasp, inasmuch as I was grasped by Christ Jesus', i.e. the prize which he not only strives to grasp but for which also he was grasped on the road to Damascus.

Ac 20:19 I have told you often, and I repeat it today with tears, there are many who are 18 behaving as the enemies of the cross of Christ. •They are destined to be lost. 19

Last advice

I appeal to Evodia and I appeal to Syntyche to come to agreement with each 2 other, in the Lord; •and I ask you, Syzygus,^a to be truly a 'companion' and to 3 help them in this. These women were a help to me when I was fighting to defend the Good News—and so, at the same time, were Clement and the others who worked with me. Their names are written in the book of life.

I want you to be happy, always happy in the Lord; I repeat, what I want is 4 your happiness. •Let your tolerance be evident to everyone: the Lord is very 5 near. •There is no need to worry; but if there is anything you need, pray for it, 6 asking God for it with prayer and thanksgiving, •and that peace of God, which 7 is so much greater than we can understand, will guard your hearts and your thoughts,^b in Christ Jesus. •Finally, brothers, fill your minds with everything that 8 is true, everything that is noble, everything that is good and pure, everything that we love and honour,^c and everything that can be thought virtuous or worthy of praise. •Keep doing all the things that you learnt from me and have been 9 taught by me and have heard or seen that I do. Then the God of peace will be with you. 10

Thanks for help received

1:4+ It is a great joy to me, in the Lord, that at last you have shown some concern 10 for me again; though of course you were concerned before, and only lacked an opportunity. •I am not talking about shortage of money: I have learnt to manage 11 on whatever I have, •I know how to be poor and I know how to be rich too. 12 Heb 13:5 I have been through my initiation and now I am ready for anything anywhere:

Ep 3:8 master with the help of the One^d who gives me strength. •All the same, it was 14

Ac 16:12f Good News, as you people of Philippi well know, when I left Macedonia, no other 16
2 Co 11:9 church helped me with gifts of money.^e You were the only ones; •and twice 16
Ac 17:1 since my stay in Thessalonika you have sent me what I needed. •It is not your 17 1 Tm 6:19 gift that I value; what is valuable to me is the interest that is mounting up in your account. •Now for the time being I have everything that I need and more: 18 2:25 I am fully provided now that I have received from Epaphroditus the offering
Gn 8:21+ that you sent, a sweet fragrance—the sacrifice that God accepts and finds 19
Heb 13:16 pleasing. •In return my God will fulfil^f all your needs, in Christ Jesus, as lavishly 19
Rm 16:27+ as only God can. •Glory to God, our Father, for ever and ever. Amen. 20

Greetings and final wish

Ac 9:13+ My greetings to every one of the saints in Christ Jesus. The brothers who are 21 with me send their greetings. •All the saints^g send their greetings, especially those 22 of the imperial household.^h •May the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ be with 23 your spirit.ⁱ

PREFACE

Address

Rm 1:1 + 1 From Paul, appointed by God to be an apostle of Christ Jesus, and from our 1
Ac 9:13 + brother Timothy •to the saints in Colossae, our faithful brothers in Christ: 2
Grace and peace to you from God our Father.^a Thanksgiving and prayer

Ep 1:15-16 We have never failed to remember you in our prayers and to give thanks for 3
Phm 4-5 you to God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, •ever since we heard about 4
1 Co 13:13 + your faith in Christ Jesus and the love that you show towards all the saints
1 P 1:3 because of the hope which is stored up for you in heaven. It is only recently that 5
Ep 1:13 you heard of this, when it was announced in the message of the truth. The Good 4:14-3: News •which has reached you is spreading all over the world and producing the 6 20:24-32 same results as it has among you ever since the day when you heard about God's 2 Co 6:1 grace and understood what this really is. •Epaphras, who taught you, is one of 7 our closest fellow workers and a faithful deputy for us as Christ's servant,^b •and 8 1 Co 13:1 + it was he who told us all about your love in the Spirit.

Ep 1:15 That will explain why, ever since the day he told us, we have never failed to 9

Ph 1:9 understanding you should reach the fullest knowledge of his will. •So you will 10
3:10 + be able to lead the kind of life which the Lord expects of you, a life acceptable Ph 1:27 to him in all its aspects; showing the results in all the good actions you do and increasing your knowledge of God. •You will have in you the strength, based on 11
Ws 5:5 + his own glorious power, never to give in, but to bear anything joyfully, •thanking 12
Ep 1:11-13: the Father who has made it possible for you to join the saints and with them

1 a. Add. (Vulg.) 'and the Lord Jesus Christ'.

b. Lit. 'A faithful servant of Christ on behalf of us';
var. (Vulg.) 'on behalf of you'.

c. Lit. 'Thanking the Father (for) having made you (var. 'us') fit for the part of the lot of the saints in the light'; var. 'for having called you (var. 'us') to...' The 'lot of the saints' is what all holy people are to inherit, i.e. the 'salvation' that had been thought of as a bequest made exclusively to Israel. Now, non-Jews are called to share it, cf. Ep 1:11-13. The word 'saints' (lit. 'holy ones') here can mean either Christians, i.e. people called to live the 'life of light' while still living on earth, Rm 1:7f, cf. Jn 8:12f, or it can mean the angels who live with God in the eschatological 'light', cf. Ac 9:13+.

d. Lit. 'In whom we have the redemption'. Add.
(Vulg.) 'by blood', cf. Ep 1:7.

e. In this poem Paul introduces two ways in which Christ can claim to be the 'head' of everything that exists: 1. he is the head of creation, of all that exists naturally, vv. 15-17; 2. he is head of the new creation and of all that exists supernaturally through having been saved, vv. 18-20. The subject of the poem is the pre-existent Christ, but considered only in so far as he was manifest in the unique historic person that is the son of God made man, cf. Ph 2:5+. It is as the incarnate God that Jesus is the 'image of God', i.e. his human nature was the visible manifestation of God who is invisible, cf. Rm 8:29+, and it is as such, in this concrete human nature, and as part of creation, that Jesus is called the 'first-born of creation'—not in the temporal sense of having been born first, but in the sense of having been given the first place of honour.

f. On the Church as Christ's body, cf. 1 Co 12:12f;
he is called the 'head' of his own body both in a temporal sense (v. 18, i.e. he was the first to rise from the dead) and in a spiritual sense (v. 20, i.e. he is the leader of all the saved).

g. Lit. 'because (God) wanted the pleroma to dwell in him'. The exact meaning of the word pleroma (i.e. the thing that fills up a gap or hole, like a patch, cf. Mt 9:16) is not certain here. Some writers have thought it must mean the same as in 2:9 (the fullness of divinity that filled Jesus), but since vv. 15-18 have already dealt with the divinity of Jesus, it seems likely that the reference here is to the biblical concept of the entire cosmos as filled with the creative presence of God, cf. Is 6:3; Jr 23:24; Ps 24:1; 50:12; 72:19; Ws 1:7;

Si 43:27 etc. This concept was also widespread in the Graeco-Roman world. Paul teaches that the incarnation and resurrection make Christ head not only of the entire human race, but of the entire created cosmos, so that everything that was involved in the fall is equally involved in the salvation, cf. Rm 8:19-22; 1 Co 3:22f; 15:20-28; Ep 1:10; 4:10; Ph 2:10f; 3:21; Heb 2:5-8.
Cf. 2:9+.

h. I.e. through and for Christ, cf. the parallel 'through him and for him' of v. 16. Alternatively, it could read 'God wanted everything... to be reconciled to himself, through him who made peace...'. cf.
Rm 5:10; 2 Co 5:18f.

i. This reconciliation of the whole universe (including angels as well as human beings) means, not that every single individual will be saved, but that all who are saved will be saved by their collective return to the right order and peace of perfect submission to God. Any individuals who do not join this new creation through grace will be forced to join it, cf. 2:15; 1 Co 15:24-25 (the heavenly spirits) and 2 Th 1:8-9; 1 Co 6:9-10; Ga 5:21; Rm 2:8; Ep 5:5 (men).

j. The context suggests that there is a closer parallel with Ep 4:18f (foreigners to God and therefore God's enemies) than with Ep 2:12 (foreigners in Israel).

k. 'he', i.e. the Father. The human, mortal body is that of his Son (lit. 'flesh body'); this provides the locus where the reconciliation takes place. Into this body the entire human race is effectively gathered, cf. Ep 2:14-16, because Christ has assumed its sin, 2 Co 5:21. The 'flesh' body is the body as affected by sin, 2 Co 5:21; cf. Rm 8:3; 7:5+; Heb 4:15.

l. Lit. 'to all creation under the sky'.

m. Lit. 'all that is lacking from the sufferings of Christ... Church'. Jesus suffered in order to establish the made me responsible for delivering God's message to you, •the message which 26 was a mystery hidden for generations and centuries and has now been revealed to 27 his saints. •It was God's purpose to reveal it to them and to show all the rich glory 27 of this mystery to pagans. The mystery is Christ among you, your hope of glory:ⁿ

 this is the Christ we proclaim, this is the wisdom in which we thoroughly train 28 everyone and instruct everyone, to make them all perfect in Christ. •It is for 29 this I struggle wearily on, helped only by his power driving me irresistibly.

Paul's concern for the Colossians' faith

2 Yes, I want you to know that I do have to struggle hard for you, and for 1 those in Laodicea, and for so many others who have never seen me face to 2 face. •It is all to bind you together in love and to stir your minds, so that your 2 understanding may come to full development, until you really know God's 3 secret^a •in which^b all the jewels of wisdom and knowledge are hidden. 3
 I say this to make sure that no one deceives you with specious arguments.^c 4
 I may be absent in body, but in spirit I am there among you, delighted to find you 5 all in harmony and to see how firm your faith in Christ is.

II. A WARNING AGAINST SOME ERRORS

Live according to the true faith in Christ, not according to false teaching

You must live your whole life according to the Christ you have received— 6
 Jesus the Lord; •you must be rooted in him and built on him and held firm by the 7 faith you have been taught, and full of thanksgiving.

Make sure that no one traps you and deprives you of your freedom^d by some 8 secondhand, empty, rational philosophy based on the principles of this world 9 instead of on Christ.

Christ alone is the true head of men and angels

In his body lives the fullness of divinity,^e and in him you too find your own 9 fulfilment, •in the one who is the head of every Sovereignty and Power.^f 10

In him you have been circumcised, with a circumcision not performed by 11 human hand, but by the complete stripping of your body of flesh.^g This is circumcision according to Christ.^h •You have been buried with him, when you 12 were baptised; and by baptism, too, you have been raised up with him through 13 your belief in the power of God who raised him from the dead. •You were dead, 13 because you were sinners and had not been circumcised: heⁱ has brought you^j to life with him, he has forgiven us^k all our sins.

He has overridden the Law, and cancelled every record of the debt that we 14 had to pay; he has done away with it by nailing it to the cross;^l •and so he got 15 rid of the Sovereignities and the Powers, and paraded them in public, behind him in his triumphal procession.^m

Against the false asceticism based on 'the principles of this world'

From now onwards, never let anyone else decide what you should eat or drink, 16 or whether you are to observe annual festivals, New Moons or sabbaths. •These 17 were only pale reflections of what was coming: the reality is Christ.ⁿ •Do not be 18 taken in by people who like grovelling^o to angels and worshipping them;^p people like that are always going on about some vision they have had,^q inflating themselves to a false importance with their worldly outlook. •A man of this sort 19 is not united to the head,^r and it is the head that adds strength and holds the whole body together, with all its joints and sinews—and this is the only way in which it can reach its full growth in God.

If you have really died with Christ to the principles of this world, why do you 20 still let rules dictate to you, as though you were still living in the world? •It is 21

- forbidden to pick up this, it is forbidden to taste that, it is forbidden to touch something else'; 'all these prohibitions are only concerned with things that perish by their very use—an example of human doctrines and regulations! It may be argued that true wisdom is to be found in these, with their self-imposed devotions, their self-abasement, and their severe treatment of the body; but once the flesh starts to protest, they are no use at all.^a Life-giving union with the glorified Christ

- 3 Since you have been brought back to true life with Christ, you must look for the things that are in heaven, where Christ is, sitting at God's right hand. Let your thoughts be on heavenly things, not on the things that are on the earth, because you have died, and now the life you have is hidden with Christ in God. But when Christ is revealed—and he is your^a life—you too will be revealed in all your glory with him.^b reign of God, and anyone who continues his work must share this suffering. Paul is not saying that he thinks his own sufferings increase the value of the redemption (since that value cannot be increased) but that he shares by his sufferings as a missionary in those that Jesus had undergone in his own mission, cf. 2 Co 1:5; Ph 1:20+. These are the sufferings predicted for the messianic era, Mt 24:8+; Ac 14:22+; 1 Tm 4:1+, and are all part of the way in which God had always intended the Church to develop; Paul feels that, being the messenger Christ has chosen to send to the pagans, he has been specially called on to experience these sufferings.

n. Previously, when it had seemed (to the Jews) that pagans could never be saved, as salvation was restricted to 'Israel', pagans had seemed to be without a Messiah and consequently to be deprived of all hope, Ep 2:12. The 'mystery' or secret of God that had now been revealed was that the pagans too were, and had been, all called to be saved through union with Christ, and so to reach eternal glory, cf. Ep 2:13-22; 3:6.

2 a. Var. 'the mystery of Christ', cf. 4:3; Ep 3:4; or 'God's mystery of Christ', or 'the mystery of God the father of Christ', or 'the mystery of God the Father, and of Christ', etc.

b. 'In which', i.e. in the 'mystery' that revealed what 'till then' had been 'hidden', namely the 'infinite wisdom' of God, cf. Rm 16:25+; 1 Tm 3:16+. That it is Christ who is revealed in the mystery, 1:27, is of course true, and he himself is also the Wisdom of God, 1 Co 1:24,30, and he is also the Mystery, 1 Co 2:7, that is hard to understand, Ep 3:8,19.

c. This will be developed in v. 8f.

d. To deny Christ after he has liberated them from the tyranny of 'darkness', 1:13f, by going back to error, would be nothing but a new slavery, cf. Ga 4:8f; 5:1.

e. The word pleroma here, cf. 1:19+, is defined as the 'divinity' that is actually 'filling' Christ now in his body: in other words, the risen Christ, through his incarnation and resurrection, unites the divine and the created. The former is what he is by his pre-existence and his present glory; the latter is, as human, what he has assumed directly, and, as cosmic, what he assumed indirectly through being human. In this way he himself is the pleroma of all possible categories of being.

f. A Christian shares this pleroma of Christ by being part of it, i.e. part of Christ's body, cf. (text and notes) 1:19; Ep 1:23; 3:19; 4:12-13, and as a consequence of this he is raised to be higher than even the highest grade of angel. The following verses develop these two ideas: disciples of Christ share his triumph, vv. 11-13, over even the highest grade of angel, vv. 14-15.

g. Surgical circumcision removes only a piece of skin.

h. The 'circumcision' instituted by Christ, i.e. baptism.

i. God the Father.

j. 'you'; var. 'us'.

k. 'us'; var. 'you'.

l. The Law was able to do nothing about a sinner except condemn him to death, Rm 7:7+: this death sentence is what God had carried out on his own Son in order to suppress it for the rest of the world, and it was for this very reason that God's Son was 'made sin', 2 Co 5:21, 'subject to the Law', Ga 4:4, and 'cursed' by the Law, Ga 3:13. In the person of his Son, whom he allowed to be executed, God nailed up and destroyed our death warrant, as well as all the charges it made against us.

m. The tradition is that the Law was brought down to Moses by angels, Ga 3:19+, and by honouring them as the lawgivers, cf. v. 18, people have been distracted from the true creator. Now that God has brought the régime of that Law to an end, by means of the crucifixion, these angelic powers have lost the one thing that had given them power, and so they too must acknowledge that Christ has triumphed over them.

n. Lit. 'but the body is Christ'—a pun on the word soma ('body') as being both that which is more real than any shadow or reflection, and the body of the risen Christ which is what gives reality to our eschatological hope, and which is the first evidence that the new creation has already begun.

o. Or 'Do not let people take the liberty of looking down on you just because they grovel...'

p. Dietary and cultic practices, v. 16, are only superstitious worries about material things and the 'spirits' that are supposed to control them, cf. Ga 4:3f.

q. Var. (Vulg.) 'they have not (in fact) had'. Paul is explaining where the teachers at Colossae have gone wrong, which is either because they attach a false importance to their 'visions' or, at a more general level, because they think their own completely unspiritual ideas are what religion is about.

r. Christ, Ep 4:15.

s. Lit. these things 'are not in any honour for satisfaction of the flesh': this may mean either that they are of no real value in subduing 'the flesh', or else 'they are of no value and only help to satisfy the flesh'.

3 a. Var. 'our'.

b. Through union with Christ in baptism, 2:12, his followers already live the identical life he lives in heaven, cf. Ep 2:6+, but this spiritual life is not manifest and glorious as it will be at the parousia.

III. EXHORTATION

General rules of Christian behaviour

That is why you must kill everything in you that belongs only to earthly life:^c 5 fornication, impurity, guilty passion, evil desires and especially greed, which is the same thing as worshipping a false god; •all this is the sort of behaviour that 6 makes God angry.^d •And it is the way in which you used to live when you were 7 surrounded by people doing the same thing, •but now you, of all people, must 8 give all these things up: getting angry, being bad-tempered, spitefulness, abusive language and dirty talk; •and never tell each other lies. You have stripped off 9 your old behaviour with your old self, •and you have put on a new self which will 10 progress towards true knowledge the more it is renewed in the image of its creator;^e •and in that image there is no room for distinction between Greek 11 and Jew, between the circumcised or the uncircumcised, or between barbarian and Scythian, slave and free man. There is only Christ: he is everything and he is in everything.^f

You are God's chosen race, his saints; he loves you, and you should be clothed 12 in sincere compassion, in kindness and humility, gentleness and patience. •Bear 13 with one another; forgive each other as soon as a quarrel begins. The Lord has forgiven you; now you must do the same. •Over all these clothes, to keep them 14 together and complete them, put on love. •And may the peace of Christ reign 15 in your hearts, because it is for this that you were called together as parts of one body. Always be thankful.

Let the message of Christ,^g in all its richness, find a home with you. Teach 16 each other, and advise each other, in all wisdom. With gratitude in your hearts sing psalms and hymns and inspired songs to God;^h •and never say or do anything 17 even in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him.

The morals of the home and householdⁱ

Wives, give way to your husbands, as you should in the Lord. •Husbands, 18 love your wives and treat them with gentleness. •Children, be obedient to your 19 parents always, because that is what will please the Lord. •Parents, never drive 20 your children to resentment or you will make them feel frustrated. 21

Slaves, be obedient to the men who are called your masters in this world; 22 not only when you are under their eye, as if you had only to please men, but wholeheartedly, out of respect for the Master.^j •Whatever your work is, put 23 your heart into it as if it were for the Lord and not for men, •knowing that the 24 Lord will repay you by making you his heirs.^k It is Christ the Lord that you are serving; •anyone who does wrong will be repaid in kind and he does not favour 25 one person more than another. 4 Masters, make sure that your slaves are given 1 what is just and fair, knowing that you too have a Master in heaven.

The apostolic spirit

Be persevering in your prayers and be thankful as you stay awake to pray. 2
 Pray for us especially, asking God to show us opportunities for announcing the 3 message and proclaiming the mystery of Christ,^a for the sake of which I am in chains; •pray that I may proclaim it as clearly as I ought. 4

Be tactful with those who are not Christians and be sure you make the best 5 use of your time with them. •Talk to them agreeably and with a flavour of wit,^b 6 and try to fit your answers to the needs of each one.

Personal news

Tychicus will tell you all the news about me. He is a brother I love very much, 7

- 8 and a loyal helper and companion in the service of the Lord. •I am sending him to you precisely for this purpose: to give you news about us^c and to reassure you.
 9 With him I am sending Onesimus, that dear and faithful brother who is a fellow citizen of yours. They will tell you everything that is happening here. Phm 10f

c. At the mystical level of union with Christ in heaven, participation in his death and resurrection through baptism is instantaneous and total, 2:12f, 20; 3:1-4; Rm 6:4+, but at the practical level of life on earth, this union has to be grown into gradually. Already 'dead' in theory, the Christian must experience death and rebirth daily, constantly, by 'killing' the old and sinful self.

d. Add. (Vulg.) 'with those who resist him', cf. Ep 5:6.

e. The human race, that was to have been the 'image of God', Gn 1:26+, lost its way trying to locate the 'knowledge of good and evil' outside and apart from the will of God, Gn 2:17+, and became the slave of sin and sinful urges, Rm 5:12+. This is the 'old self' (man) that must die, Rm 6:6; Ep 4:22; the 'new self' is reborn in Christ, Ep 2:15+, who is the true image of God, Rm 8:29+. In this way the human race can both recover its original purity and reach true moral certitude, 1:9; Heb 5:14.

f. The new creation will not be divided into races and religions and cultures and social classes in the way the present creation has been since the Fall: the whole world will be reunited in Christ.

g. Var. 'of the Lord', or 'of God': possibly the text originally read 'the Word', cf. Ph 1:14; 2:30.

h. These 'inspired songs' could be charismatic improvisations suggested by the Spirit during liturgical assembly; cf. 1 Co 12:7f; 14:26.

i. Paul christens these simple precepts of ordinary morality by introducing his phrase 'in the Lord' which must be taken here as meaning 'according to the Christian way of life'. These Christian applications are further developed in Ep 5:22f.

j. 'your masters... the Master': Paul uses the same word each time, i.e. Christ is the master equally of both slave and slave-owner.

k. That a master should name a slave as his heir, cf. Mt 21:35-8; Lk 15:19; Ga 4:1-2, is one of the most impressive proofs of how different the new creation 'in Christ' is, cf. Rm 8:15-17; Ga 4:3-7; Phm 16.

4 a. Var. 'of God', cf. 2:2.

b. Lit. 'seasoned with salt', a classical Greek cliché. Cf. Mk 9:50.

c. Var. (Vulg.) 'to get your news'.

d. On Aristarchus, cf. Ac 19:29. On Mark, cf. Ac 12:12+. 'Jesus Justus' is not mentioned anywhere else; his surname was quite common among Jews and Jewish converts, cf. Ac 1:23; 18:27. Epaphras, born at Colossae (and therefore not the same person as Epaphroditus who came from Philippi, Ph 2:25; 4:18) had been sent by Paul to evangelise Colossae, his own native town, Col 1:7. Luke is the evangelist and author of Ac: he had joined Paul towards the end of his third journey, Ac 20:5f, had been with him till they reached Rome, Ac 27:1f, and now, with Paul under arrest, he is still by his side, cf. Phm 24, as he will be again after Paul has been arrested a second time, 2 Tm 4:11. On Demas, cf. Phm 24; 2 Tm 4:10. Who the woman called Nympha was (or man, if the correct spelling is Nymphas) is unknown. Archippus, v. 17, is probably the son of Philemon, Phm 2; what the service was the Lord wanted him to do is not known.

e. Paul expected his letters to be read in public to the assembled brothers, 1 Th 5:27, and then passed on to neighbouring churches, cf. 2 Co 1:1. The letter that was to be brought back from Laodicea to Colossae was probably the one that Paul wrote to Ephesus.

f. Add. (Vulg.) 'Amen', cf. Ph 4:23.

The faith and the patience of the Thessalonians

- 13 Another reason why we constantly thank God for you is that as soon as you heard the message that we brought you as God's message, you accepted it for what it really is, God's message^d and not some human thinking; and it is still^e a living churches of God in Christ Jesus which are in Judaea, in suffering the same people who put the Lord Jesus to death, and the prophets too. And now they have been persecuting us, and acting in a way that cannot please God and makes them

Timothy's mission to Thessalonika

- 1 3 When we could not bear the waiting any longer, we decided it would be best 2 to be left without a companion at Athens, and •sent our brother Timothy, who is God's helper^a in spreading the Good News of Christ, to keep you firm and

Mt 16:24p
 Ac 14:22
 Rm 8:36
 2 Th 1:5

 Heb 10:32,36

1 a. Add. 'from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ', cf. 2 Th 1:2.

b. Var. 'the Good News of God', or 'of our God'. The Good News is more than a proclamation, it is the whole new economy of salvation.

c. Lit. 'wrath'. Vv. 9-10 seem to give an extremely condensed summary of Paul's characteristic 'proclamation'. The two main elements of the Good News as preached by Paul were: his emphasis on monotheism, and the prominence he gives to the return of the risen Lord, cf. Rm 1:1-4,20f; 1 Co 1:18,21; Ga 1:3f; 3:1; Ac 14:15-17; 17:21-31, etc.

2 a. Lit. 'being able to be with weight as apostles of Christ': interpreted morally, this can mean that Paul could have insisted on his own dignity and prestige, or that materially he could have expected to have been fed and kept at their expense, cf. 2:9; 2 Th 3:8; 2 Co 11:9.

b. Lit. 'babies'; var. 'gentle'.

c. Var. 'called you'.

d. A brief summary of the apostolic tradition: the message is first 'received', 4:1; 2 Th 3:6; 1 Co 15:1; Ga 1:9; Ph 4:9; Col 2:6, or 'heard', Rm 10:17 +; Ep 1:13; Ac 15:7, etc. It then penetrates the mind or heart, Rm 10:8-10, where if it is welcomed, 1:6; 2 Th 2:10; 2 Co 11:4; Ac 8:14, etc. Mk 4:20, it proves that the hearer acknowledges that God has been speaking through his missionary, 4:1f; 2 Co 3:5; 15:3.

e. Or 'has become'; God acts through his message that has been welcomed by the believer, cf. 1:8; 2 Th 3:1.

f. The harsh tone of vv. 15-16 gives a good idea of how bitter the atmosphere was in Jerusalem, Mt 5:12; 21:33-46; 23:29-37; Ac 2:23 +, owing to the way Paul upset the Jewish community by preaching to pagans v. 16; cf. Ac 13:5 +. Later on Paul was able to take a more balanced attitude than he takes here, by frequent references to the special position of God's chosen people, cf. Rm 9:11; Ga 4:21-31. He tried hard to reconcile convert pagan with Jewish Christian, cf. 1 Co 16:1 +; Ep 2:11-22.

g. Lit. 'the wrath'; add. 'of God'.

3 a. Om. 'who is God's helper', var. 'who is God's slave' or 'God's slave and our helper'.

the Tempter^b might have tried you too hard, and all our work might have been wasted.

Paul thanks God for good reports of the Thessalonians

However, Timothy is now back from you and he has given us good news of your faith and your love, telling us that you always remember us with pleasure and want to see us quite as much as we want to see you. •And so, brothers, your faith has been a great comfort to us in the middle of our own troubles and sorrows; now we can breathe again, as you are still holding firm in the Lord. •How can we thank God enough for you, for all the joy we feel before our God on your account? We are earnestly praying night and day to be able to see you face to face again and make up any shortcomings^c in your faith.

May God our Father himself, and our Lord Jesus Christ, make it easy for us to come to you. •May the Lord be generous in increasing your love and make you love one another and the whole human race^d as much as we love you. •And may he so confirm your hearts in holiness that you may be blameless in the sight of our God and Father when our Lord Jesus Christ comes with all his saints.^e

Live in holiness and charity

4 Finally, brothers, we urge you and appeal to you in the Lord Jesus^a to make more and more progress in the kind of life that you are meant to live: the life that God wants, as you learnt from us, and as you are already living it.^b •You have not forgotten the instructions we gave you on the authority of the Lord Jesus.

What God wants is for you all to be holy.^c He wants you to keep away from fornication, •and each one of you to know how to use the body that belongs to him^d in a way that is holy and honourable, •not giving way to selfish lust like the pagans who do not know God. •He wants nobody at all ever to sin by taking advantage of a brother in these matters; the Lord always punishes sins of that sort, as we told you before and assured you. •We have been called by God to be holy, not to be immoral; •in other words, anyone who objects is not objecting to a human authority, but to God, who gives you his Holy Spirit.^e

As for loving our brothers, there is no need for anyone to write to you about that, since you have learnt from God yourselves to love one another, •and in fact this is what you are doing with all the brothers throughout the whole of Macedonia. However, we do urge you, brothers, to go on making even greater progress •and to make a point of living quietly, attending to your own business and earning your living, just as we told you to, •so that you are seen to be respectable by those outside the Church, though you do not have to depend on them.

The dead and the living at the time of the Lord's coming^f

We want you to be quite certain, brothers, about those who have died,^g to make sure that you do not grieve about them, like the other people who have no hope. We believe that Jesus died and rose again, and that it will be the same for those who have died in Jesus: God will bring them with him. •We can tell you this from the Lord's own teaching,^h that any of usⁱ who are left alive until the Lord's coming will not have any advantage over those who have died. •At the trumpet of God, the voice of the archangel will call out the command and the Lord himself will come down from heaven;^j those who have died in Christ will be the first to rise, and then those of us who are still alive^k will be taken up in the clouds, together with them, to meet the Lord in the air. So we shall stay with the Lord for ever.^l With such thoughts as these you should comfort one another.

Watchfulness while awaiting the coming of the Lord^a

5 You will not be expecting us to write anything to you, brothers, about 'times and seasons',^b •since you know very well that the Day of the Lord is going to

3 come like a thief in the night. •It is when people are saying, 'How quiet and peaceful it is' that the worst suddenly happens, as suddenly as labour pains come on a pregnant woman; and there will be no way for anybody to evade it.

4 But it is not as if you live in the dark, my brothers, for that Day^c to overtake
5 you like a thief. •No, you are all sons of light and sons of the day: we do not belong
6 to the night or to darkness, •so we should not go on sleeping, as everyone else
7 does, but stay wide awake and sober. •Night is the time for sleepers to sleep and 8 drunkards to be drunk, •but we belong to the day and we should be sober; let us 9 put on faith and love for a breastplate, and the hope of salvation for a helmet.
10 God never meant us to experience the Retribution, but to win salvation through 11 our Lord Jesus Christ, •who died for us so that, alive or dead,^d we should still live united to him. •So give encouragement to each other, and keep strengthening one another, as you do already.

Some demands made by life in community

12 We appeal to you, my brothers, to be considerate to those who are working 13 amongst you and are above you in the Lord as your teachers. •Have the greatest respect and affection for them because of their work.

14 Be at peace among yourselves. •And this is what we ask you to do, brothers:
warn the idlers, give courage to those who are apprehensive, care for the weak and 15 be patient with everyone. •Make sure that people do not try to take revenge;
16 you must all think of what is best for each other and for the community. •Be 17 happy at all times; •pray constantly; •and for all things give thanks to God, 18 because this is what God expects you to do in Christ Jesus.

b. 'Tempter', i.e. 'Satan' as in 2:18, cf. Mk 1:13.

c. This would refer to gaps in their knowledge of Christian doctrine, as well as gaps in their code of Christian behaviour, cf. Rm 14:1; 2 Co 10:15; Ph 1:25.

d. Brotherly love of one another in the Christian community is only the beginning of charity; it has to spread to love for the whole human race.

e. Add. 'Amen'. Holiness, 4:3+, begins with brotherly love but will not be perfect till the parousia. In this context 'saints' can refer to the chosen, the saved or the angels, Ac 9:13+.

4 a. Paul speaks 'in' (v.1) 'by' (v.2) or 'in the name of' Christ, cf. 4:15; 2 Th 3:6,12. His doctrine on moral behaviour which is based on the earliest Christian teaching invests ordinary day-to-day life with a new depth: it has the seal of Christ on it, Col 3:18+.

b. Om. 'and as you are already living it'.

c. It is the will of God, cf. Mt 6:10, that makes people holy, vv. 3,7; 2 Th 2:13; Ep 1:4. It is God who makes them holy, 5:23; 1 Co 6:11. Christ has made himself our 'holiness', 1 Co 1:30. The Holy Spirit is involved in making us holy, v.8; 2 Th 2:13; 1 Co 6:11.

d. Lit. 'each one of you to 'know' (or 'be able') to possess the vessel of himself in sanctification and honour'. 'Vessel' means 'wife' in 1 P 3:7 and many rabbinic texts, but it means 'body' in 5:23; cf. Rm 12:1; 1 Co 6:19.

e. Ezekiel foretold that the Spirit would be given to the messianic people: this reference draws attention to the continuity between the church of Thessalonika and the giving of this gift to the early Christian community, Ac 2:16f,33,38 etc. On the gift of the Spirit to the spirit of each believer, cf. Rm 5:5+.

f. The converts in Thessalonika had obviously been worried about this and uncertain what the Christian position was. Replying to their questions Paul affirms the fundamental doctrine of the resurrection so as to strengthen the faith and hope of all the converts.

g. Lit. 'we do not wish you to be ignorant, brothers, concerning the sleeping'. The euphemism was common in the O.T., the N.T., and in Greek literature: the natural concomitant was to call the resurrection (to new life or from death) an 'awakening'.

h. No precise reference in the written gospels can be given for this saying of Jesus, but cf. Mt 24 with vv. 15-17. Perhaps Paul is relying here on the authority he had been given by the vision on the Damascus road, cf. Dn 7:1,13,16.

i. 'us'; Paul includes himself among those who will be present at the parousia: more by aspiration, however, than by conviction, cf. 5:1+.

j. The trumpet, voice and clouds were traditional signs that accompanied manifestations of God, cf. Ex 13:32+; 19:16+ and they were adopted as conventional elements of apocalyptic literature, cf. Mt 24:30f+; 2 Th 1:8+.

k. Om. '(we) who are still alive'.

l. Of all the details given here: that the dead will answer the summons by returning to life, that they and the living will be taken to meet the Lord, and that they will accompany him to the judgement with which the eternal kingdom begins, the essential one is the last: eternal life with Christ, cf. 5:10; 2 Th 2:1. That is to be the 'salvation', the 'glory', the 'kingdom' that Jesus shares among his chosen followers.

5 a. Paul asserts that he has no idea when the Last Day will come, and he merely repeats what the Lord said, Mt 24:36p; Ac 1:7, about having to stay awake till it comes; Mt 24:42p,50; 25:13. The Day of the Lord, 1 Co 1:8+, will come like a thief, cf. Mt 24:43p, so it is necessary to stay awake, v.6. cf. Rm 13:14; 1 Co 16:13; Col 4:2; 1 P 1:13; 5:8; Rv 3:2f; 16:15. It will come soon, 2 Co 6:2+. At first Paul expected he would live to see the Last Day, 1 Th 4:17; cf. 1 Co 15:51; he later realised he might die before it, 2 Co 5:3; Ph 1:23, and he warns people it will not come as soon as they thought, 2 Th 2:1f. More than anything, the prospect of how long it would take to convert the pagans, Rm 11:25, made it certain that the Last Day would not come for a very long time, cf. Mt 25:19; Lk 20:9; 2 P 3:4.

b. 'about times and seasons': a cliché, cf. Ac 1:7+, underlying which is the idea of God as outside time and yet as controlling it and its divisions, Ac 17:26.

c. Mention of 'the Day' without further qualification, 1 Co 1:8+, helps Paul to introduce the mention of light and day and contrast 'wakefulness' with the dark, night and sleep (in a different sense from 4:13f), and also make the contrast between Christians (sons of the light) and others (sons of darkness), cf. Jn 8:12+.

d. Lit. 'awake or asleep' in same sense as 4:14-17: all the faithful will share in the final salvation.

5 e. Paul seems to have developed no coherent system of anthropology: this is the only place he mentions a tripartite division of body (cf. Rm 7:24+), soul (cf. 1 Co 15:44+) and spirit (which can be taken in two ways: as the divine presence in a human being, giving him new life in union with Christ, Rm 5:5+, or more probably as the innermost depths of the human being, open and awake to the Spirit, cf. Rm 1:9+).

THE SECOND LETTER OF PAUL TO THE CHURCH IN THESSALONIKA

Address

1 Th 1:1

- 1 From Paul, Silvanus and Timothy, to the Church in Thessalonika which is in 2 1 God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ; •wishing you grace and peace from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Ac 15:22+;

Thanksgiving and encouragement. The Last Judgement

- 3 We feel we must be continually thanking God for you, brothers; quite rightly, because your faith is growing so wonderfully and the love that you have for one
4 another never stops increasing; •and among the churches of God we can take special pride in you for your constancy and faith under all the persecutions and 5 troubles you have to bear. •It all shows that God's judgement is just, and the purpose of it is that you may be found worthy of the kingdom of God; it is for the sake of this that you are suffering now.
- 6 God will very rightly repay with injury those who are injuring you, •and reward
7 you, who are suffering now, with the same peace as he will give us,^a when the Lord
8 Jesus appears from heaven with the angels of his power. •He will come in flaming fire^b to impose the penalty on all who do not acknowledge God and refuse to accept
9 the Good News of our Lord Jesus.^c •It will be their punishment to be lost eternally, excluded from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his strength
10 on that day when he comes to be glorified among his saints and seen in his glory by all who believe in him;^d and you are believers, through our witness.^e
- 11 Knowing this, we pray continually that our God will make you worthy of his call, and by his power fulfil all your^f desires for goodness and complete all that 12 you have been doing through faith; •because in this way the name of our Lord Jesus Christ will be glorified in you and you in him, by the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

The coming of the Lord and the prelude to it^a

- 1 To turn now, brothers, to the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and how we 2 shall all be gathered round him: •please do not get excited too soon or alarmed by any prediction or rumour or any letter claiming to come from us,

Mt 24:37;
1 Co 15:23
1 Th 4:15-17
3:17

1 a. Paul often compares his own situation with that of the churches he is writing to, cf. 1 Th 2:3; 1 Co 4:8; Ph 1:30, etc.

b. Heaven, cf. 1 Th 4:16, the angels, cf. Mt 13:39, 41,49; 16:27p; 24:31; 25:31; Lk 12:8f (and probably the 'saints' of 1 Th 3:13), the 'fire' of various theophanies, cf. Ex 13:22+; 19:16+, are all conventional elements of apocalyptic literature, cf. 1 Th 4:16+.

c. I.e. both pagans, 1 Th 4:5, and Jews, Rm 10:16.

d. Paul here seems to be thinking of angels (the 'saints', cf. Ac 9:13+) and Christians ('those who believe').

e. Vv.6-10 form a parenthesis, v.11 follows on from v.5.

f. Or 'his'.

2 a. In 1 Th 4:13-5:11 Paul avoided suggesting anything that would indicate when the parousia would take place, cf. 1 Th 5:1+. Obviously replying to further questions, Paul does not now repeat all he said, about what would happen to the living and the dead: all he is concerned with is to emphasise that the coming is not imminent, and that it cannot take place till certain specific signs have preceded it.

1 Co 1:8 + Ga 1:6 implying that the Day of the Lord has already arrived. •Never let anyone 3 deceive you in this way.

Rv 13:1-8 It cannot happen until the Great Revolt^b has taken place and the Rebel, the Lost One, has appeared. •This is the Enemy,^c the one who claims to be so much 4 greater than all that men call 'god', so much greater than anything that is worshipped, that he enthrones himself in God's sanctuary and claims that he is God. Is 14:13 Ezk 28:2 Surely you remember me telling you about this when I was with you? •And you 5 know, too, what is still holding him back^d from appearing before his appointed Rv 20:3 time. •Rebellion is at its work already, but in secret,^e and the one who is holding Rv 17:5 it back has first to be removed •before the Rebel appears openly.^f The Lord^g 8 will kill him with the breath of his mouth and will annihilate him with his glorious appearance at his coming.

Rv 19:11-21 But when the Rebel comes, Satan will set to work:^h there will be all kinds of 9 miracles and a deceptive show of signs and portents, •and everything evil that Rv 13:13-17 can deceive those who are bound for destruction because they would not grasp Mt 24:12 Jn 8:44 the love of the truth which could have saved them. •The reason why God 11 is sending a power to delude them and make them believe what is untrue •is 12 Jn 3:19; 9:39 to condemn all who refused to believe in the truth and chose wickedness instead.ⁱ

Encouragement to persevere^j

1 Th 1:4-5 But we feel that we must be continually thanking God for you, brothers whom 13 the Lord loves, because God chose you from the beginning^k to be saved by the sanctifying Spirit and by faith in the truth. •Through the Good News that we 14 brought he called you to this so that you should share the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. •Stand firm, then, brothers, and keep the traditions that we taught you, 15 whether by word of mouth or by letter.^l •May our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and 16 God our Father who has given us his love and, through his grace, such inexhaustible comfort and such sure hope, •comfort you and strengthen you in everything 17 good that you do or say.

Ps 147:15 Ep 6:19f Col 4:3 1 Th 5:25 Heb 13:18 Rm 10:16 Mt 6:13 1 Th 5:24 1 Jn 2:14 + 2 Co 7:16 1 Co 13:13 + 3 Finally, brothers, pray for us; pray that the Lord's message may spread 1 quickly, and be received with honour as it was among you; •and pray that we 2 may be preserved from the interference of bigoted and evil people, for faith is not given to everyone. •But the Lord is faithful, and he will give you strength and 3 guard you from the evil one,^a •and we, in the Lord, have every confidence that 4 you are doing and will go on doing all that we tell you. •May the Lord turn your 5 hearts towards the love of God and the fortitude of Christ.

Against idleness and disunity

1 Th 4:11-12; 5:14 2:15 + ; 3:14 • In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, we urge you, brothers, to keep away from 6 any of the brothers who refuses to work or to live according to the tradition we passed on to you.

Ac 18:3 + 1 Co 11:1 Ga 4:12 1 Th 2:9 + Mt 6:11 Mt 10:10 You know how you are supposed to imitate us:^b now we were not idle when 7 we were with you, •nor did we ever have our meals at anyone's table without 8 paying for them; no, we worked night and day, slaving and straining, so as not to be a burden on any of you. •This was not because we had no right to be, but in 9 order to make ourselves an example for you to follow.

Gn 3:19 We gave you a rule when we were with you: not to let anyone have any food if 10 he refused to do any work.^c •Now we hear that there are some of you who are 11 living in idleness, doing no work themselves but interfering with everyone else's. In the Lord Jesus Christ, we order and call on people of this kind to go on quietly 12 working and earning the food that they eat.

Ga 6:9 3:6 1 Co 5:5, 9-11 2 Co 2:7 Ga 6:1 1 Th 5:14 Mt 18:15-18 My brothers, never grow tired of doing what is right. •If anyone refuses to obey 13 what I have written in this letter, take note of him and have nothing to do with 14 him, so that he will feel that he is in the wrong; •though you are not to regard him 15 as an enemy but as a brother in need of correction.

Jesus Christ be with you all.^e 2:2

b. The way this Revolt (apostasia) is mentioned here shows that the Thessalonians had already been told something about it. The word is used here in its usual sense of 'secession' or 'defection' but with a specifically religious reference, Ac 5:37; 21:21; Heb 3:12. It seems that the rebels are not only those who have never belonged to Christ but also those who have given up the faith, cf. 1 Tm 4:1; 2 Tm 3:1; 4:3f; etc.

c. The apostasy will be due to a being who is given three names. He is the 'Rebel' (lit. 'man of lawlessness' or 'man of sin'). He is a being destined to be lost (lit. 'son of perdition') v.10; Jn 17:12; cf. 1 Th 5:5. He is the enemy of God and is described here in terms reminiscent of the description of Antiochus Epiphanes in Dn 11:36. Later on in Christian tradition, based on Dn, he is called the Antichrist, cf. 1 Jn 2:18; 4:3; 2 Jn 7. Unlike Satan, whose tool he is, and who is already at work in 'secret' (lit. 'the mystery') v.7, the lawless one is represented as a person who will be revealed at the 'end of time', and whose power will persecute and seduce Christians. On the final 'test', that will only come to an end with the parousia of Christ, cf. Mt 24:24; Rv 13:1-8.

d. We do not know what Paul refers to when he talks about a cause that delays the parousia of Christ. All he says is that it is something, v.6, or someone, v.7, that can 'delay' it. This person or power blocks the coming of Christ by preventing the manifestation of the Messiah's enemy who must precede the coming of the Messiah himself.

e. Rebellion (lit. 'lawlessness') is going on, but it is underground, secretly preparing for the great revolt. When the obstacle, whatever it is, is removed, lawlessness (or the lawless one) will work unmasked.

f. The revealing of the Rebel, vv. 6-8, is the counterpart of the revealing of Christ, 1:7; 1 Co 1:7, in the same way as his parousia is the counterpart of Christ's parousia, v.8. The enemy of God becomes the enemy of Christ, but Christ will conquer his enemy.

g. Add. 'Jesus'.

—h. The Rebel is the instrument through which Satan works, cf. 1 Th 2:18, and whom he endows with superhuman power rather as Christ endows his followers with his own Spirit. Cf. the Dragon and the Beast, Rv 13:2,4.

i. Truth and untruth here have a religious as well as an intellectual reference because they involve the whole of human life and activity, cf. 1 Jn 3:19.

j. This passage, 2:13-3:5, is very closely linked to the description of the parousia. Having corrected the false ideas of the Thessalonians, Paul goes on to describe the positive consequences of his conception.

k. Var. 'as first-fruits'.

l. What Paul taught them when he was in Thessalonika and what he had written to them since he returned from there, 2:2,5; 1 Th 3:4; 4:2,6; 5:27, include, in the message of the Good News, cf. 1 Th 2:13+, the principles on which a Christian should lead his life, cf. 1 Th 4:1; 1 Co 11:2,23-25.

3 a. Or perhaps 'from evil'. Christians will be tempted but not beyond their powers of resistance, 1 Co 10:13.

b. By imitating Paul, 1 Co 4:16; Ga 4:12; Ph 3:17, Christians will be imitating Christ, 1 Th 1:6; Ph 2:5; cf. Mt 16:24; 1 P 2:21; 1 Jn 2:6, who is himself the one that Paul is imitating, 1 Co 11:1. Christians must also imitate God, Ep 5:1 (cf. Mt 5:48), and they must imitate each other, 1 Th 1:7; 2:14; Heb 6:12. Behind this community of life is the idea of a model of doctrine, Rm 6:17, that has been received by tradition, v.6; 1 Co 11:2+; 1 Th 2:13+. The leaders who transmit the doctrine must themselves be 'models' v.9; Ph 3:17; 1 Tm 1:16; 4:12; Tt 2:7; 1 P 5:3, whose faith and life are to be imitated, Heb 13:7.

c. This may have been laid down by Jesus, but it may have been a proverb: it has been called the golden rule for Christian work.

d. Var. (Vulg.) 'everywhere'.

e. Add. 'Amen', cf. 1 Th 3:13; 5:28.

1 From Paul, apostle of Christ Jesus appointed by the command^a of God our

As I asked you when I was leaving for Macedonia, please stay at Ephesus, to insist that certain people stop teaching strange doctrines •and taking notice of myths and endless genealogies;^c these things are only likely to raise irrelevant doubts instead of furthering the designs of God^d which are revealed in faith.
The only purpose of this instruction is that there should be love, coming out of a pure heart, a clear conscience and a sincere faith. •There are some people who have gone off the straight course and taken a road that leads to empty speculation; •they claim to be doctors of the Law but they understand neither the arguments they are using nor the opinions they are upholding.

irreligious and the wicked, for the sacrilegious and the irreverent; they are for people who kill their fathers or mothers and for murderers, •for those who are immoral with women or with boys or with men, for liars and for perjurers—and

I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who has given me strength, and who judged a blasphemer and did all I could to injure and discredit the faith. Mercy, however, was shown me, because until I became a believer I had been acting in ignorance;

and the grace of our Lord filled me with faith and with the love that is in Christ Jesus. •Here is a saying that you can rely onⁱ and nobody should doubt: that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners. I myself am the greatest of them; and if mercy has been shown to me, it is because Jesus Christ meant to make me the greatest evidence of his inexhaustible patience for all the other people who would later have to trust in him to come to eternal life. •To the eternal

Timothy's responsibility

- 18 Timothy, my son, these are the instructions that I am giving you: I ask you to remember the words once spoken over you by the prophets,^k and taking them 19 to heart to fight like a good soldier •with faith and a good conscience for your weapons. Some people have put conscience aside and wrecked their faith in Liturgical prayer

- 1 2 My advice is^a that, first of all, there should be prayers offered for everyone 2 —petitions, intercessions and thanksgiving—•and especially for kings and others in authority,^b so that we may be able to live religious and reverent lives 3 in peace and quiet. •To do this is right, and will please God our saviour: •he 4 wants everyone to be saved^c and reach full knowledge of the truth. •For there is only one God, and there is only one mediator between God and mankind, 6 himself a man, Christ Jesus, •who sacrificed himself as a ransom for them all.
7 He is the evidence of this, sent at the appointed time,^d and •I have been named a herald and apostle of it and—I am telling the truth and no lie—a teacher of the faith and the truth to the pagans.

in prayer, with no anger or argument.

Tt 1:6-9

1:15+

2 Tm 2:24

1 a. Var. 'the promise'.

b. Paul hardly ever uses the title 'saviour' in his other letters, Ep 5:23; Ph 3:20, but in the Pastoral Letters he makes use of it both when referring to the Father, 1 Tm 2:3; 4:10; Tt 1:3; 2:10; 3:4, and when referring to Christ, 2 Tm 1:10; Tt 1:4; 3:6.

c. Genealogies of O.T. patriarchs and heroes constructed by Jewish writers in the same style as those in the Book of Jubilees.

d. Var. (Vulg.) 'the building-up of God's house'.

e. The 'Law of Moses'.

f. Lit. 'Now the Law is good if anyone uses it lawfully', i.e. without asking it to be more than it claims to be.

g. Seen as a penal code, the aim of the Law is to make provision not for the righteous, but for offenders, by threatening, accusing and punishing them.

h. One characteristic of the Pastoral Letters is this insistence on 'sound doctrine', cf. 6:3; 2 Tm 1:13; 4:3; Tt 1:9,13; 2:1,8.

i. Lit. 'faithful is the word (or 'saying')': this is one of the characteristic phrases of the Pastoral Letters, cf. 3:1; 4:9; 2 Tm 2:11; Tt 3:8.

j. Lit. 'incorruptible' or 'imperishable'; var. (Vulg.) 'immortal'.

part played by the 'prophets' when the college of elders laid their hands on his head, Ac 13:1-3; 11:27+.

2 a. 'My advice is'; var. 'Advise'.

b. Nero was emperor when this was written: the end of the verse probably reflects Paul's apprehensions about what the future would bring. On Paul's political loyalty, cf. Rm 13:1-7.

c. This is a statement with enormous theological implications, and it provides the correct interpretation of some passages in the letter to the Christians at Rome, cf. Rm 9:18,21.

d. Cf. 6:13. By his willingness to die for the whole human race Christ showed the human race that God wanted everybody to be saved. He was the Father's 'witness' all through his life, but never so supremely as at the moment of his execution. (The Greek word for 'witness' is the same as for 'martyr'.)

e. It is not clear whether Paul is implying that women are saved by the 'one-body' relationship with their marriage partners or whether childbearing itself, as the mediation of life and the bringing up of children, constitutes a vocation. He may quite easily have been thinking specifically of the 'false teachers' who condemned marriage, 4:3.

3 a. The word 'episcopos' ('overseer', 'supervisor' or 'president') has not yet acquired the same meaning as 'bishop', cf. Tt 1:5f+.

k. Here and in 4:14 Paul reminds Timothy of the character. He must not have been married more than once, and he must be 3:12 temperate, discreet and courteous, hospitable and a good teacher; •not a heavy 1 Co 1:2+ drinker, nor hot-tempered, but kind and peaceable. He must not be a lover of 1 Co 5:12+ money. •He must be a man who manages his own family well and brings his children up to obey him and be well-behaved: •how can any man who does not understand how to manage his own family have responsibility for the church of God? •He should not be a new convert, in case pride might turn his head and then he might be condemned as the devil was condemned. •It is also necessary that people outside the Church should speak well of him, so that he never gets a bad reputation and falls into the devil's trap.

Ac 6:1-6 Deacons

In the same way, deacons must be respectable men whose word can be 1 P 5:2 trusted, moderate in the amount of wine they drink and with no squalid greed Rm 16:25+ for money. •They must be conscientious believers in the mystery of the faith.
 They are to be examined first, and only admitted to serve as deacons if there is nothing against them. •In the same way, the women^b must be respectable, 3:2,4 not gossips but sober and quite reliable. •Deacons must not have been married more than once, and must be men who manage their children and families well. • Those of them who carry out their duties well as deacons will earn a high standing for themselves and be rewarded with great assurance in their work for the faith in Christ Jesus.

The Church and the mystery of the spiritual life

At the moment of writing to you, I am hoping that I may be with you soon;
 Tt 1:7 but in case I should be delayed, I wanted you to know how people ought to behave
 1 Co 1:2+ in God's family—that is, in the Church of the living God, which upholds the Ep 2:20+ truth and keeps it safe. •Without any doubt, the mystery of our religion is very Rm 16:25+ deep indeed:

Jn 1:14
 Rm 1:3-4

He^c was made visible in the flesh, attested by the Spirit,
 seen by angels,
 proclaimed to the pagans,
 believed in by the world,
 taken up in glory.^d

Jn 16:10
 Ep 3:10

Mk 16:19
 Ac 1:2,11

False teachers

4 The Spirit has explicitly said that during the last times^a there will be some 2 Tm 3:1; 4:3 who will desert the faith and choose to listen to deceitful spirits and doctrines
 Tt 1:10 that come from the devils; •and the cause of this is the lies told by hypocrites
 Heb 1:1-2 whose consciences are branded as though with a red-hot iron:^b •they will say 2 P 2:1; 3:3 marriage is forbidden, and lay down rules about abstaining from foods which 1 Jn 2:18; 4:1 God created to be accepted with thanksgiving by all who believe and who know
 Col 2:16-23 the truth.^c •Everything God has created is good, and no food is to be rejected, Gn 1:31+ 2:4 provided grace is said for it: •the word of God and the prayer make it holy.
 1 Co 10:25f, 30f If you put all this to the brothers, you will be a good servant of Christ Jesus and Mt 15:11f Rm 14:14,20 show that you have really digested the teaching of the faith and the good doctrine
 2 Tm 2:15 which you have always followed. •Have nothing to do with godless myths and
 1:4+ old wives' tales. Train yourself spiritually. •Physical exercises are useful enough, 1:15+ but the usefulness of spirituality is unlimited, since it holds out the reward of 1:1+ life here and now and of the future life as well'; •that is a saying that you can rely on and nobody should doubt it. •I mean that the point of all our toiling and battling is that we have put our trust in the living God and he is the saviour of the whole human race but particularly of all believers. •This is what you are to enforce in your teaching.

- 12 Do not let people disregard you because you are young, but be an example to all the believers in the way you speak and behave, and in your love, your faith 13 and your purity. •Make use of the time until I arrive by reading to the people, 14 preaching and teaching. •You have in you a spiritual gift which was given to you when the prophets spoke and the body of elders laid their hands on you;^d 15 do not let it lie unused. •Think hard about all this, and put it into practice, and 16 everyone will be able to see how you are advancing. •Take great care about what you do and what you teach; always do this, and in this way you will save both yourself and those who listen to you.

Pastoral practice

- 1 5 Do not speak harshly to a man older than yourself, but advise him as you 2 would your own father; treat the younger men as brothers •and older women as you would your mother. Always treat young women with propriety, as if they were sisters.

Lv 19:32
Ti 2:2

Widows

- 3 4 Be considerate to widows; I mean those who are truly widows.^a •If a widow has children or grandchildren, they are^b to learn first of all to do their duty to their own families and repay their debt to their parents, because this is what 5 pleases God. •But a woman who is really widowed and left without anybody can give herself up to God and consecrate all her days and nights to petitions 6 and prayer. •The one who thinks only of pleasure is already dead while she 7 is still alive: •remind them of all this, too, so that their lives may be blameless.
8 Anyone who does not look after his own relations, especially if they are living with him, has rejected the faith and is worse than an unbeliever.
9 Enrolment as a widow is permissible only for a woman at least sixty years
10 old who has had only one husband. •She must be a woman known for her good works and for the way in which she has brought up her children, shown hospitality to strangers and washed the saints' feet,^c helped people who are in trouble 11 and been active in all kinds of good work. •Do not accept young widows because if their natural desires get stronger than their dedication to Christ, they want 12 to marry again, •and then people condemn them for being unfaithful to their 13 original promise.^d •Besides, they learn how to be idle and go round from house to house; and then, not merely idle, they learn to be gossips and meddlers in other people's affairs, and to chatter when they would be better keeping quiet.
14 I think it is best for young widows to marry again^e and have children and a home

b. This instruction is probably intended for the deaconesses, cf. Rm 16:1, rather than for the wives of deacons.

c. He, i.e. Christ: many authorities (e.g. Vulg.) read 'It', i.e. the 'mystery', cf. Col 2:3+. Paul is quoting part of an early Christian hymn, cf. 6:15-16; 2 Tm 2:11-13; Ph 2:6-11. Also cf. Ep 1:3-14; 5:14; Col 1:15-20.

d. 'attested (lit. 'justified') by the Spirit': the holiness and divinity of Christ were proved by the fact that he rose in glory, cf. Rm 1:4+. 'Taken up in glory', i.e. at the ascension.

4 a. On the crisis that will characterise the 'last times' cf. 2 Th 2:3-12; 2 Tm 3:1; 4:3-4; 2 P 3:3; Jude 18. Also cf. Mt 24:6fp; Ac 20:29-30. As, eschatologically, the 'last times' have already begun, Rm 3:26+, we are already living in this final epoch of crisis, cf. 1 Co 7:26; Ep 5:6; 6:13; Jm 5:3; 1 Jn 2:18; 4:1,3; 2 Jn 7; Mt 26:41.

b. Lit. 'Having been marked with a red-hot branding iron on their own conscience', i.e. branded like runaway slaves.

c. The rejection of marriage was to be one of the hallmarks of Gnosticism: dietary regulations were more specifically Jewish.

d. Lit. 'a spiritual gift given by means of prophecy with imposition of hands by the body of elders'. The 'imposition of hands' can be the rite for transmitting grace or a charism, Heb 6:2, or it can be the gesture used when blessing, Mt 19:15, or curing, Mt 9:18p; Mk 6:5; 7:32; 8:23-25; 16:18; Lk 4:40; 13:13; Ac 9:12, 17; 28:8, or imparting the Holy Spirit to the newly baptised, Ac 1:5+. It can also be the rite for consecrating a person for a particular public function, Ac 6:6; 13:3, as in this passage and 5:22+; 2 Tm 1:6. Since the day on which he received the imposition of hands, Timothy has had a permanent charism ('grace-gift') that consecrates him to his ministry. For the part played by the 'prophets', cf. 1 Tm 1:18.

5 a. Three categories of widows are mentioned here: those who do not need assistance from the Church since they have relations to look after them, v. 4; those who are 'true widows' because they have no-one to look after them, and whom the Church is obliged to help, vv. 3-5,16; and those who (whether helped by the Church or not) are called by the Church to fulfil certain official functions. Widows in this third category have to satisfy quite severe regulations, vv. 9-15.

b. Var. (Vulg.) 'she is'.

c. The normal courtesy then shown to guests.

d. Lit. 'for setting aside (their) first faith', i.e. their vow or promise to consecrate themselves to God.

e. Made wiser by experience, Paul modifies what he had said, 1 Co 7:8,40.

Tt 2:8 to look after, and not give the enemy any chance^f to raise a scandal about them; there are already some who have left us to follow Satan. •If a Christian woman has widowed relatives, she should support them and not make the Church bear the expense but enable it to support those who are genuinely widows. 15 16

Tt 1:5+ The elders

The elders who do their work well while they are in charge are to be given 17
1 Th 5:12+ double consideration,^g especially those who are assiduous in preaching and Dt 25:4 teaching. •As scripture says: You must not muzzle an ox when it is treading out 18
Lk 10:7 the corn; and again: The worker deserves his pay.^h •Never accept any accusation 19
1 Co 9:9 brought against an elder unless it is supported by two or three witnesses. •If any 20
3 Jn 8 of them are at fault, reprimand them publicly, as a warning to the rest. •Before 21
Dt 19:15 God, and before Jesus Christ and the angels he has chosen, I put it to you as a Mt 18:16 duty to keep these rules impartially and never to be influenced by favouritism.
2 Co 13:1 Do not be too quick to lay hands on any man,ⁱ and never make yourself an 22 accomplice in anybody else's sin; keep yourself pure.

Si 31:28 You should give up drinking only water and have a little wine for the sake 23 of your digestion and the frequent bouts of illness that you have.

The faults of some people are obvious long before anyone makes any 24 complaint about them, while others have faults that are not discovered until Mt 5:16 afterwards. •In the same way, the good that people do can be obvious; but even 25
Mt 10:26p when it is not, it cannot be hidden for ever.

Slaves

Rm 2:24+; 6:15+; 1 Co 7:21-22; Ep 6:5-8; Col 3:22-25; Tt 2:6+; 9-10 6 All slaves 'under the yoke' must have unqualified respect for their masters, 1 so that the name of God and our teaching are not brought into disrepute.
Slaves whose masters are believers are not to think any the less of them because 2 they are brothers; on the contrary, they should serve them all the better, since those who have the benefit of their services are believers and dear to God.^a

The true teacher and the false teacher

This is what you are to teach them to believe and persuade them to do.

1:10+ Anyone who teaches anything different, and does not keep to the sound teaching 3 which is that of our Lord Jesus Christ, the doctrine which is in accordance with 1:4+ true religion, •is simply ignorant and must be full of self-conceit—with a craze 4 for questioning everything and arguing about words. All that can come of this Rm 1:29+ is jealousy, contention, abuse and wicked mistrust of one another; •and unending 5 disputes by people who are neither rational nor informed and imagine that religion is a way of making a profit. •Religion, of course, does bring 6
Tb 4:21 large profits, but only to those who are content with what they have. •We brought 7
Jb 1:21 nothing into the world, and we can take nothing out of it; •but as long as we 8
Oo 5:14 have food and clothing, let us be content with that. •People who long to be rich 9
Ps 49:17 are a prey to temptation; they get trapped into all sorts of foolish^b and dangerous ambitions which eventually plunge them into ruin and destruction. •The love 10 Mt 6:24 of money is the root of all evils^c and there are some who, pursuing it, have Tt 1:11 wandered away from the faith, and so given their souls any number of fatal wounds.

2 Tm 4:1 Timothy's vocation recalled

2 Tm 2:22 But, as a man dedicated to God, you must avoid all that. You must aim to 11
1 Co 13:13+ be saintly and religious, filled with faith and love, patient and gentle. •Fight the 12
Ga 5:22+ good fight of the faith and win for yourself the eternal life to which you were Tt 2:2 called when you made your profession and spoke up for the truth^d in front of 2 Tm 4:7 many witnesses. •Now, before God the source of all life and before Jesus Christ, 13

the King of kings and the Lord of lords,

Rich Christians

- 17 Warn those who are rich in this world's goods that they are not to look down on other people; and not to set their hopes on money, which is untrustworthy, but on God^g who, out of his riches, gives us all that we need for our happiness.
- 18 Tell them that they are to do good, and be rich in good works, to be generous

Final warning and conclusion

- 20 My dear Timothy, take great care of all that has been entrusted to you.^h Have nothing to do with the pointless philosophical discussions and antagonistic

2 TIMOTHY

THE SECOND LETTER FROM PAUL TO TIMOTHY

Greeting and thanksgiving

Rm 1:1+ 1 From Paul, appointed by God to be an apostle of Christ Jesus in his design 1
Ac 16:1+ 1 to promise life in Christ Jesus; •to Timothy, dear child of mine, wishing you 2 grace, mercy and peace from God the Father and from Christ Jesus our Lord.
Rm 1:9+ Night and day I thank God, keeping my conscience clear and remembering 3
Ph 3:5 my duty to him as my ancestors did, and always I remember you in my prayers;
4:9,21 I remember your tears^a •and long to see you again to complete my happiness. 4
Then I am reminded of the sincere faith which you have; it came first to live in 5
Ac 16:1 your grandmother Lois, and your mother Eunice, and I have no doubt that it 3:14-15 is the same faith in you as well.

The gifts that Timothy has received

Ac 4:20-21 That is why I am reminding you now to fan into a flame the gift that God 6
Rm 8:15 gave you when I laid my hands on you. •God's gift was not a spirit of timidity, 7
1 Tm 4:14+ but the Spirit of power, and love, and self-control. •So you are never to be 8 1:16 ashamed of witnessing to the Lord, or ashamed of me for being his prisoner;
Lk 9:26 but with me, bear the hardships for the sake of the Good News, relying on the Rm 1:16; power of God •who has saved us and called us to be holy^b—not because of 9 5:31 anything we ourselves have done but for his own purpose and by his own grace.
Ep 3:13 This grace had already been granted to us, in Christ Jesus, before the beginning
Tt 3:5 of time, •but it has only been revealed by the Appearing^c of our saviour Christ 10
Rm 8:28 Jesus. He abolished death, and he has proclaimed life and immortality through 10
Rm 16:25 the Good News; •and I have been named its herald, its apostle and its teacher.^d 11
Tt 2:11; 3:4
Rm 6:9; 8:2
Heb 2:14-15
1 Tm 2:7

It is only on account of this that I am experiencing fresh hardships here 12
now;^e but I have not lost confidence, because I know who it is that I have put 12 1 Tm 6:20+ my trust in, and I have no doubt at all that he is able to take care of all that 1 Co 1:8+ I have entrusted to him^f until that Day.

Keep as your pattern the sound teaching you have heard from me, in the 13
1 Tm 1:10+ faith and love that are in Christ Jesus. •You have been trusted to look after 14
1 Tm 6:20+ something precious; guard it with the help of the Holy Spirit who lives in us.
Rm 5:5+

As you know, Phygelus and Hermogenes and all the others from Asia refuse 15
4:19 to have anything more to do with me. •I hope the Lord will be kind to all the 16
1:8+ family of Onesiphorus, because he has often been a comfort to me and has never been ashamed of my chains. •On the contrary, as soon as he reached Rome, he 17 really searched hard for me and found out where I was. •May it be the Lord's 18 will that he shall find the Lord's mercy on that Day.^g You know better than anyone else how much he helped me at Ephesus.

How Timothy should face hardships

3:14 2 Accept the strength, my dear son, that comes from the grace of Christ Jesus. 1
1 Tm 4:14; 6:12 2 You have heard everything that I teach in public; hand it on to reliable 2 people so that they in turn will be able to teach others.

- 3 Put up with your share of difficulties, like a good soldier of Christ Jesus.^a 4 In the army, no soldier gets himself mixed up in civilian life, because he must 5 be at the disposal of the man who enlisted him; •or take an athlete—he cannot 6 win any crown unless he has kept all the rules of the contest; •and again, it is 7 the working farmer who has the first claim on any crop that is harvested. •Think over what I have said, and the Lord will show you how to understand it all.
 8 Remember the Good News that I carry, 'Jesus Christ risen from the dead, 9 sprung from the race of David'; •it is on account of this that I have my own hardships to bear, even to being chained like a criminal—but they cannot chain 10 up God's news. •So I bear it all for the sake of those who are chosen, so that in the end they may have the salvation that is in Christ Jesus and the eternal glory that comes with it.
 11 Here is a saying that you can rely on:^b
- If we have died with him, then we shall live with him.
 If we hold firm, then we shall reign with him.
 If we disown him, then he will disown us.
 We may be unfaithful, but he is always faithful,
 for he cannot disown his own self.

The struggle against the immediate danger from false teachers

- 14 Remind them of this; and tell them in the name of God^c that there is to be no wrangling about words: all that this ever achieves is the destruction of those 15 who are listening. •Do all you can to present yourself in front of God as a man who has come through his trials, and a man who has no cause to be ashamed of his life's work and has kept a straight course with the message of the truth.
 16 Have nothing to do with pointless philosophical discussions—they only lead 17 further and further away from true religion. •Talk of this kind corrodes like gangrene, as in the case of Hymenaeus and Philetus, •the men who have gone 18 right away from the truth and claim that the resurrection has already taken place.^d Some people's faith cannot stand up to them.
 19 However, God's solid foundation stone is still in position, and this is the inscription on it: 'The Lord knows those who are his own' and 'All who call on the name of the Lord must avoid sin'.^e 20 Not all the dishes in a large house are made of gold and silver; some are made of wood or earthenware: some are kept for special occasions and others 21 are for ordinary purposes. •Now, to avoid these faults that I am speaking about is the way for anyone to become a vessel for special occasions, fit for the Master himself to use, and kept ready for any good work.
 22 Instead of giving in to your impulses like a young man, fasten your attention on holiness, faith, love and peace, in union with all those who call on the Lord 23 with pure minds. •Avoid these futile and silly speculations, understanding that 24 they only give rise to quarrels; •and a servant of the Lord is not to engage in quarrels, but has to be kind to everyone, a good teacher, and patient.

b. Lit. 'and called us with a holy call': this may be taken in two ways here: the calling of Christians to salvation, cf. Rm 1:6-7; 8:28; 1 Co 1:2,24; Col 3:15; Ep 1:18; 4:4; Ph 3:14; etc, or (by metonymy) the state ('vocation') to which Christians have been called.

d. Add. (Vulg.) 'to the pagans'.

e. The second imprisonment at Rome.

f. Either Christian doctrine (by keeping it intact, 1 Tm 6:20+) or the good that Paul has done and his consequent merit, cf. 1 Tm 6:19; 2 Tm 4:7f.

g. 'Lord' can be taken in either case as a reference either to the Father or to the Son.

b. Vv. 11-13 are part of a Christian hymn, cf. 1 Tm 3:16+.

c. Var. (Vulg.) 'the Lord'.

d. The Greek mind found the resurrection particularly hard to accept, Ac 17:32; 1 Co 15:12. Hymenaeus and Philetus may well have given it a purely spiritual interpretation by analogy with the mystical resurrection that occurs in baptism, Rm 6:4+; Ep 2:6+.

e. Details about a building were often inscribed on its foundation stone: as the building here is the Church, the foundation stone could be either Christ himself, 1 Co 3:11, or the apostles, Ep 2:20, cf. Rv 21:14, or faith in the unbreakable promise of God, cf. 2 Tm 2:13.

Is 42:3 He has to be gentle when he corrects people who dispute what he says, never 25

Ga 6:1 truth and •come to their senses, once out of the trap where the devil caught 26 1 Jn 2:14-1 them and kept them enslaved.

The dangers of the last days

1 Tm 4:1+ 3 You may be quite sure that in the last days there are going to be 1
Rm 1:29+ some difficult times. •People will be self-centred and grasping; boastful, 2 arrogant and rude; disobedient to their parents, ungrateful, irreligious; •heartless 3 and unappeasable; they will be slanderers, profligates, savages and enemies of everything that is good; •they will be treacherous and reckless and demented 4 by pride, preferring their own pleasure to God. •They will keep up the outward 5
Mt 7:15; appearance of religion but will have rejected the inner power of it.^a Have nothing 24:4f,24 to do with people like that.
Col 2:23

Tt 1:11 Of the same kind, too, are those men who insinuate themselves into families 6 in order to get influence over silly women who are obsessed with their sins and Ac 17:21 follow one craze after another •in the attempt to educate themselves, but can 7
Jn 8:32 never come to knowledge of the truth. •Men like this defy the truth just as 8 1 Tm 2:4 Jannes and Jambres defied Moses:^b their minds are corrupt and their faith spurious. •But they will not be able to go on any longer: their foolishness, like 9 that of the other two, must become obvious to everybody.

1 Co 4:9 You know, though, what I have taught, how I have lived, what I have aimed 10
1 Co 13:13+ at; you know my faith, my patience and my love; my constancy •and the 11
Ac 14:5,22 persecutions and hardships that came to me in places like Antioch, Iconium and 2 Co 11:23f Lystra—all the persecutions I have endured; and the Lord has rescued me from Ac 14:22+ every one of them. •You are well aware, then, that anybody who tries to live 12
Rm 8:36 in devotion to Christ is certain to be attacked; •while these wicked impostors 13 1 Th 3:4-5 will go from bad to worse, deceiving others and deceived themselves.
Ti 1:10

1 Tm 6:20+ 2 You must keep to what you have been taught and know to be true; remember 14
1:5 who your teachers were,^c •and how, ever since you were a child, you have known 15
Ac 16:1 the holy scriptures—from these you can learn the wisdom that leads to salvation
2 Co 3:14-18 through faith in Christ Jesus. •All scripture is inspired by God and can^d profitably 16
Rm 15:4 be used for teaching, for refuting error, for guiding people's lives and 1 Co 10:6+ teaching them to be holy. •This is how the man who is dedicated to God 17
2 P 1:20-21 becomes fully equipped and ready for any good work.

1 Tm 6:11f A solemn charge

Ac 10:42+ 4 Before God and before Christ Jesus who is to be judge of the living and the 1
1 P 4:5 dead, I put this duty to you, in the name of his Appearing and of his kingdom:
1 Tm 6:14+ proclaim the message and, welcome or unwelcome, insist on it. Refute falsehood, 2
Ac 20:21 correct error, call to obedience—but do all with patience and with the intention
1 Tm 4:1+ of teaching. •The time is sure to come when, far from being content with sound 3 1 Tm 1:10+ teaching, people will be avid for the latest novelty and collect themselves a whole series of teachers according to their own tastes; •and then, instead of listening 4 1 Tm 1:4+ to the truth, they will turn to myths. •Be careful always to choose the right 5 course; be brave under trials; make the preaching of the Good News your life's work, in thoroughgoing service.

Paul in the evening of his life

Ph 2:17+ As for me, my life is already being poured away as a libation,^a and the time 6
Ac 20:24 has come for me to be gone. •I have fought the good fight to the end; I have run 7
1 Co 9:24 the race to the finish; I have kept the faith; •all there is to come now is the 8 1 Tm 1:18; crown of righteousness reserved for me, which the Lord, the righteous judge,

2:4-5 for his Appearing.

1:4

3 a. This is reminiscent of the 'false prophets' foretold in Mt 7:15; 24:4-5, 24. A fresh outbreak of irreligion is one of the characteristics of the 'last times', cf. 1 Tm 4:1+.

b. Paul gets the names that he gives these magicians (who are mentioned in Ex 7:11-13, 22, etc.) from Jewish tradition in which Jannes and Jambres (or 'Mambres'), represented as the leaders of the Egyptian magicians, are said to be the disciples (or even sons) of Balaam, Nb 22:2+.

c. Var. (Vulg.) 'who your teacher was'. These teachers were Lois, Eunice, 1:5, and, above all, Paul himself.

d. Or (less probably) 'all scripture that is inspired by God can...' (Vulg.). This important affirmation about the inspiration of the O.T., cf. 2 P 1:21, probably includes some Christian writings also, 1 Tm 5:18.

4 a. Libations of wine, water or oil were poured over the victims not only in pagan sacrifices but also in Jewish ones, cf. Ex 29:40; Nb 28:7.

b. Var. 'Gaul'. At that time the name 'Galatia' was still given both to the Roman province in Asia, and to the country of the Gauls.

c. Luke the evangelist, cf. Col 4:14.

d. Mark the evangelist, Ac 12:12+. His old quarrel with Paul, Ac 15:37-39, seems to have been forgotten.

e. At some recent hearing of his case.

f. Or 'and keep me safe for'.

g. Add. (Vulg.) 'Jesus Christ', and (at end) 'Amen'.

TITUS

THE LETTER FROM PAUL TO TITUS

Address

1 From Paul, servant of God, an apostle of Jesus Christ to bring those whom 1
1 God has chosen to faith and to the knowledge of the truth that leads to true 2 religion; •and to give them the hope of the eternal life that was promised so long 3 ago by God. He does not lie •and so, at the appointed time, he revealed his 4 decision, and, by the command of God our saviour, I have been commissioned to 5 proclaim it. •To Titus, true child of mine in the faith that we share, wishing you 6 grace and peace from God the Father and from Christ Jesus our saviour. 7

The appointment of elders

The reason I left you behind in Crete was for you to get everything organised 1
there^a and appoint elders^b in every town, in the way that I told you: •that is, each 2 of them must be a man of irreproachable character; he must not have been married 3 more than once, and his children must be believers and not uncontrollable or 4 liable to be charged with disorderly conduct. •Since, as president, he will be God's 5 representative, he must be irreproachable: never an arrogant or hot-tempered 6 man, nor a heavy drinker or violent, nor out to make money; •but a man who 7 is hospitable and a friend of all that is good; sensible, moral, devout and 8 self-controlled; •and he must have a firm grasp of the unchanging message of the 9 tradition, so that he can be counted on for both expounding the sound doctrine 10 and refuting those who argue against it. 11

Opposing the false teachers

And in fact you have there a great many people who need to be disciplined, 1 who talk nonsense and try to make others believe it, particularly among those 2 of the Circumcision. •They have got to be silenced: men of this kind ruin whole 3 families, by teaching things that they ought not to, and doing it with the vile motive 4 of making money. •It was one of themselves, one of their own prophets, who 5 said,^c 'Cretans were never anything but liars, dangerous animals and lazy': •and 6 that is a true statement. So you will have to be severe in correcting them, and 7 make them sound in the faith •so that they stop taking notice of Jewish myths 8 and doing what they are told to do by people who are no longer interested in the 9
truth. 10

To all who are pure themselves, everything is pure; but to those who have been 1 corrupted and lack faith, nothing can be pure—the corruption is both in their 2 minds and in their consciences. •They claim to have knowledge of God but the 3 things they do are nothing but a denial of him; they are outrageously rebellious 4 and quite incapable of doing good. 5

Some specific moral instruction

2 It is for you, then, to preach the behaviour which goes with healthy doctrine. 1
The older men should be reserved, dignified, moderate, sound in faith and 2

- 3 love and constancy. •Similarly, the older women should behave as though they were religious, with no scandalmongering and no habitual wine-drinking—they 4 are to be the teachers of the right behaviour •and show the younger women how 5 they should love their husbands and love their children, •how they are to be sensible and chaste, and how to work in their homes, and be gentle, and do as 6 their husbands tell them, so that the message of God is never disgraced. •In the 7 same way, you have got to persuade the younger men to be moderate •and in everything you do^a make yourself an example to them of working for good: when
8 you are teaching, be an example to them in your sincerity and earnestness •and in keeping all that you say so wholesome that nobody can make objections to it; and then any opponent will be at a loss, with no accusation to make against us.
9 Tell the slaves that they are to be obedient to their masters and always do what they want without any argument; •and there must be no petty thieving—they must show complete honesty at all times, so that they are in every way a credit to the teaching of God our saviour.

The basis of the Christian moral life

- 11 You see, God's grace has been revealed, and it has made salvation possible for 12 the whole human race •and taught us that what we have to do is to give up everything that does not lead to God, and all our worldly ambitions; we must be 13 self-restrained and live good and religious lives here in this present world, •while we are waiting in hope for the blessing which will come with the Appearing of the 14 glory of our great God and saviour Christ Jesus.^b •He sacrificed himself for us in order to set us free from all wickedness and to purify a people so that it could be his very own and would have no ambition except to do good.
15 Now this is what you are to say, whether you are giving instruction or correcting errors; you can do so with full authority, and no one is to question it.

General instruction for believers

1 a. As usual, Paul had begun the work of evangelisation and then left it to be completed by others, cf. 1 Co 3:6,10; Col 1:7+; Rm 15:23+.

b. In the earliest days each Christian community was governed by a body of elders ('presbyters', whence English word 'priests') or prominent people. This was the case both in Jerusalem (Ac 11:30; 15:2f; 21:18) and in the Dispersion (Ac 14:23; 20:17; Tt 1:5) and it merely continued both the ancient practice of the O.T., Ex 18:13f; Nb 11:16; Jos 8:10; 1 S 16:4; Is 9:14; Ezk 8:1, 11 etc., and the more recent practice of the Jews, Ezr 5:5; 10:14; Jdt 6:16; Lk 7:3; 22:66; Ac 4:5 etc., cf. Josephus, Philo etc. These 'episcopoi' (supervisors, overseers, watchers, guardians) who are not yet 'bishops' and who are mentioned in connection with the 'diaconoi' (servants, attendants, assistants, deputies, ministers: 'deacons': Ph 1:1; 1 Tm 3:1-13; the Apostolic Fathers) seem in some passages, Tt 1:5,7; Ac 20:17,28, to be identical with the elders. The Greek word episcopos, taken over from the pagan world probably as an equivalent for a semitic title (cf. the Mebaqer of the Essenes, and cf. Nb 4:16; 31:14; Jg 9:28; 2 K 11:15,18; 12:11, etc.) indicated the duty of an officer, while presbyteros indicated the status or dignity of the same officer. The episcopoi in the college of presbyters may have taken turns to carry out their official duties, cf. 1 Tm 5:17. It is quite certain that Christian presbyteroi or episcopoi were not merely concerned with the practical side of organising things: they had to teach, 1 Tm 3:2; 5:17; Tt 1:9, and govern, 1 Tm 3:5; Tt 1:7. They were appointed by the apostles, Ac 14:23, or their representatives, Tt 1:5, by the imposition of hands, 1 Tm 5:22, cf. 1 Tm 4:14+; 2 Tm 1:6; their powers derived from God, Ac 20:28, and were charismatic, 1 Cor 12:28. The word episcopos eventually replaced analogous titles like 'proistamenos' (official) Rm 12:8; 1 Th 5:12, poimen (pastor, shepherd) Ep 4:11, 'hegoumenos' (guide, leader) Heb 13:7,17,24. These heads of the local community who developed into our priests (presbyteroi) and bishops (episcopoi) were helped by diaconoi (deacons). The transformation of a local assembly ruled by a body of bishops or presbyters, into an assembly ruled by a single bishop set over a number of priests (a stage reached by the time of Ignatius of Antioch, died c. 107 A.D.) must have involved the intermediate stage when a single episcopos in each community was given the same powers over that local community which had previously been exercised over several communities by the apostles or their representatives like Timothy or Titus.

c. Quotation attributed to the Cretan poet Epimenides of Knossos (6th c. B.C.): first half quoted by Callimachus of Alexandria (early 3rd c. B.C.)

2 a. Or '... to be moderate in everything they do; make ...' The virtue of being 'sensible' or 'moderate', cf. 1:8, was extremely Greek: here it sums up all the possible virtues of young people, but Paul urges moderation frequently all through the Pastoral Letters, cf. 1 Tm 2:9,15; 3:2; 2 Tm 1:7; Tt 2:2,5,12.

b. This verse is regularly accepted by the Fathers as a statement of the divinity of Christ, cf. Rm 9:5+, but possibly translate '... God, and of our saviour Christ Jesus'. For Christ as 'the brightness of the glory of the Father', cf. Heb 1:3+.

ignorant, disobedient and misled and enslaved by different passions and luxuries; we lived then in wickedness and ill-will, hating each other and hateful ourselves.

1 Tm 2:11 + But when the kindness and love of God our saviour for mankind were revealed, 4
2 Tm 1:10 + it was not because he was concerned with any righteous actions we might have 5
Rm 6:1 done ourselves; it was for no reason except his own compassion that he saved us,
2 Tm 1:9 by means of the cleansing water of rebirth and by renewing us with the Holy Spirit
Rm 5:5; which he has so generously poured over us through Jesus Christ our saviour. 6
6:4 + He did this so that we should be justified by his grace, to become heirs looking 7
2 Co 13:13 + 1 Tm 1:1 + forward to inheriting eternal life.^a •This is doctrine that you can rely on. 8
Rm 3:24; 8:17,24

Personal advice to Titus.

1 Tm 1:15 + I want you to be quite uncompromising in teaching all this, so that those who now believe in God may keep their minds constantly occupied in doing good works. All this is good, and will do nothing but good to everybody. •But avoid 9 1 Tm 1:4 + pointless speculations, and those genealogies, and the quibbles and disputes about the Law—these are useless and can do no good to anyone. •If a man disputes 10 Mt 18:15-17p what you teach, then after a first and a second warning, have no more to do with him:^b •you will know that any man of that sort has already lapsed and condemned 11 himself as a sinner.

Practical recommendations, farewells and good wishes

Ac 20:4 + As soon as I have sent Artemas or Tychicus to you, lose no time in joining 12
2 Tm 4:12 me at Nicopolis, where I have decided to spend the winter. •See to all the travelling 13 Ac 18:24 + arrangements for Zenas the lawyer and Apollos, and make sure they have everything they need. •All our people are to learn to occupy themselves in doing good 14 works for their practical needs as well,^c and not to be entirely unproductive.

All those who are with me send their greetings. Greetings to those who love 15 us in the faith. Grace^d be with you all.

3 a. The effects of baptism are: rebirth, free forgiveness by Christ, reception of his Holy Spirit, cf. Rm 5:5+, and the immediate enjoyment of all rights as heir to eternal life (the presence of the Holy Spirit being a pledge of this, cf. 2 Co 1:22).

b. Lit. 'Avoid any heretical man after one or two warnings'; Paul uses a contemporary philosophical term; etymologically a 'heretic' is someone who instead of being open to all truth chooses what truths he will believe: groups of people who agree on the same choice are 'sects' (offshoots of parent bodies).

c. Lit. 'for urgent needs' or 'for the necessities of life'. This is perhaps a postscript to 3:8: they must learn to do good works not only for the good of their souls but also for a living: they are not to be parasites on society.

d. Add. 'of the Lord', or (Vulg.) 'of God'. Vulg. adds 'Amen' at the end.

THE LETTER TO THE HEBREWS

A LETTER ADDRESSED TO A JEWISH-CHRISTIAN COMMUNITY

PROLOGUE

The greatness of the incarnate Son of God

- 1 At various times in the past and in various different ways, God spoke to our 2 ancestors through the prophets; but •in our own time, the last days, he has spoken to us through his Son, the Son that he has appointed to inherit everything^a 3 and through whom he made everything there is.^b •He is the radiant light of God's glory and the perfect copy of his nature,^c sustaining the universe by his powerful command; and now that he has destroyed the defilement of sin, he has gone to 4 take his place in heaven at the right hand of divine Majesty. •So he is now as far above the angels as the title which he has inherited is higher than their own name.

I. THE SON IS GREATER THAN THE ANGELS

Proof from the scriptures

- 5 God has never said to any angel: You are my Son, today I have become your 6 father; or: I will be a father to him and he a son to me. •Again, when he brings the 7 First-born into the world,^d he says: Let all the angels of God worship him. •About 8 the angels, he says: He makes his angels winds and his servants flames of fire,^e •but to his Son he says: God, your throne shall last for ever and ever; and: his^f royal 9 sceptre is the sceptre of virtue; •virtue you love as much as you hate wickedness.
This is why God, your God, has anointed you with the oil of gladness, above all your 10 rivals.^g •And again: It is you, Lord, who laid earth's foundations in the beginning, 11 the heavens are the work of your hands; •all will vanish, though you remain, all 12 wear out like a garment; •you will roll them up like a cloak, and like a garment^h they will be changed. But yourself, you never change and your years are unending.

Ps 45:6-7
Ps 102:25-27

1 a. To be a son implies having the right to inherit, cf. Mt 21:38, Ga 4:7. Here, however, God is credited with the handing over of the whole creation because the inheritance in question is messianic and eschatological.

b. Lit. the 'aeons', hebraism for the whole of creation.

c. These two metaphors are borrowed from the sophia and logos theologies of Alexandria, Ws 7:25-26; they express both the identity of nature between Father and Son, and the distinction of person. The Son is the brightness, the light shining from its source, which is the bright glory, cf. Ex 24:16+, of the Father ('Light from Light'). He is also the replica, cf. Col 1:15+, of the Father's substance, like an exact impression made by a seal on clay or wax, cf. Jn 14:9.

d. Either at the parousia or, more probably, at the incarnation.

e. The author, thinking perhaps of the theophany on Sinai, 2:2+, takes this LXX text as a description of the nature of angels, subtle and changeable and therefore inferior to that of the Son reigning from his eschatological throne.

f. Var. 'your', cf. Ps 45 LXX.

g. Following Middle Eastern custom the psalm attributes divinity to the King-Messiah by hyperbole: here it is attributed literally, cf. v. 3. The divine Messiah is to reign for ever.

h. Vulg. omits 'like a garment'.

Ac 2:33-35+

2 We ought, then, to turn our minds more attentively than before to what we have been taught, so that we do not drift away. •If a promise that was made through angels^a proved to be so true that every infringement and disobedience brought its own proper punishment, •then we shall certainly not go unpunished if we neglect this salvation that is promised to us. The promise was first announced by the Lord himself, and is guaranteed to us by those who heard him; God himself confirmed their witness with signs and marvels and miracles of all kinds, and by freely giving the gifts of the Holy Spirit.

Ac 1:8+

Redemption brought by Christ, not by angels

Col 2:15+

He did not appoint angels to be rulers of the world to come, and that world is what we are talking about. •Somewhere there is a passage that shows us this. It runs: What is man that you should spare a thought for him, the son of man that you should care for him? •For a short while you made him lower than the angels; you crowned him with glory and splendour.^b •You have put him in command of everything. Well then, if he has put him in command of everything, he has left nothing which is not under his command. At present, it is true, we are not able to see that everything has been put under his command,^c •but we do see in Jesus one who was for a short while made lower than the angels and is now crowned with glory and splendour because he submitted to death;^d by God's grace^e he had to experience death for all mankind.

Ph 2:6-11

As it was his purpose to bring a great many of his sons into glory, it was appropriate that God, for whom everything exists and through whom everything exists, should make perfect, through suffering, the leader who would take them to their salvation.^f •For the one who sanctifies, and the ones who are sanctified, are of the same stock;^g that is why he openly calls them brothers •in the text: I shall announce your name to my brothers, praise you in full assembly; or the text: •In him I hope; or the text: Here I am with the children whom God has given me.

3 That is why all you who are holy brothers and have had the same heavenly call should turn your minds to Jesus, the apostle and the high priest^a of our religion. •He was faithful to the one who appointed him, just like Moses, who stayed faithful in all his house; •but he has been found to deserve a greater glory than Moses. It is the difference between the honour given to the man that built the house and to the house itself. •Every house is built by someone, of course; but God built everything that exists. •It is true that Moses was faithful in the house of God, as a servant, acting as witness to the things which were to be divulged later; •but Christ was faithful as a son, and as the master in the house.

How to reach God's land of rest

⁷ The Holy Spirit says: If only you would listen to him today; do not harden your hearts, as happened in the Rebellion, on the Day of Temptation in the wilderness, when your ancestors challenged me and tested me, though they had seen what I could do for forty years. That was why I was angry with that generation and said: How unreliable these people who refuse to grasp my ways! And so, in anger, I swore that not one would reach the place of rest I had for them. Ps 95:7-11
⁸ Take care, brothers, that there is not in any one of your community a wicked mind, so unbelieving as to turn away from the living God. Every day, as long as this 'today' lasts, keep encouraging one another so that none of you is hardened by the lure of sin, because we shall remain co-heirs with Christ only if we keep a grasp on our first confidence right to the end. In this saying: If only you would listen to him today; do not harden your hearts, as happened in the Rebellion, those who rebelled after they had listened were all the people who were brought out of Egypt by Moses. And those who made God angry for forty years were the ones who sinned and whose dead bodies were left lying in the wilderness. Those that he swore would never reach the place of rest he had for them were those who had been disobedient. We see, then, that it was because they were unfaithful that they were not able to reach it. Nb 14:21-23

¹ Be careful, then: the promise of reaching the place of rest he had for them still holds good, and none of you must think that he has come too late for it.^a We received the Good News exactly as they did; but hearing the message did them no good because they did not share the faith of those who listened.^b We, however,^c who have faith, shall reach a place of rest, as in the text: And so, in anger, I swore that not one would reach the place of rest I had for them. God's work was undoubtedly all finished at the beginning of the world; as one text says, referring to the seventh day: After all his work God rested on the seventh day. The text we are considering says: They shall not reach the place of rest I had for them. It is established, then, that there would be some people who would reach it, and since those who first heard the Good News failed to reach it through their disobedience, God fixed another day when, much later, he said 'today' through David in the text already quoted: If only you would listen to him today; do not harden your hearts. Ex 33:14

b. Vulg. adds 'You have made him lord over the work of your hands'.

c. The first Christians, despised and persecuted, were still waiting for the coming of God's reign on earth, 2 P 3:4. Although Christ had already entered his glory, his reign on earth has to continue in time till he has conquered all his enemies (1:13) before his full and final triumph.

d. Christ is glorified because he has suffered and this triumph shows that God accepts the redemptive nature of his death.

e. 'God's grace'; rare var. 'without God' which may have been a gloss meant to emphasise that the Messiah could suffer only in his human, not in his divine, nature; but it could be an allusion to what Jesus cried out from the cross (Mt 27:46), or it could be taken as meaning that Christ died for all, but not for God, cf. 1 Co 15:27.

f. By dying and fulfilling the will of God, Christ becomes the one perfect saviour, responsible for the entry of human beings into the glory of God.

g. From the context, the translation could read 'form a single whole'.

h. Sin and death are related because both derive from Satan whose reign is the opposite of the reign of Christ.

b. Add. unwavering right till the end'.

4 a. This 'comparison between Moses and Jesus, 3:1f; cf. Ac 7:20-44+; Jn 1:21+, can be extended to the relationship between Israelites and Christians. Since the Israelites refused to believe God's promise and so never reached the peace of the promised land, 3:7-19, this promise (which cannot be empty, because it was made by God) is still open to Christians who are invited to reach the peace of the spiritual promised land, of which the earthly promised land was only a type.

b. E.g. Joshua and Caleb, cf. Nb 13-14. Var. 'because (the message) was not accompanied by faith in what they heard'.

The word of God and Christ the priest

III. THE AUTHENTIC PRIESTHOOD OF JESUS CHRIST

Christian life and theology

On this subject we have many things to say, and they are difficult to explain 11
Si 37:28 because you have grown so slow at understanding. •Really, when you should by 12 1 Co 3:1-3 this time have become masters, you need someone to teach you all over again the

The author explains his intention

6 Let us leave behind us then^a all the elementary teaching about Christ and 1 concentrate on its completion, without going over the fundamental doctrines 2 9:14 again: the turning away from dead actions^b and towards faith in God; •the teaching 3
Ep 2:1 + about baptisms^c and the laying-on of hands; the teaching about the resurrection 4
Mt 3:2 + of the dead and eternal judgement. •This, God willing, is what we propose to do. 5

Words of hope and encouragement

9 But you, my dear people—in spite of what we have just said, we are sure you are in a better state and on the way to salvation. • God would not be so unjust as to forget all you have done, the love that you have for his name or the services you have done, and are still doing, for the saints.^e • Our one desire is that every one of you should go on showing the same earnestness to the end, to the perfect fulfilment of our hopes, • never growing careless, but imitating those who have the faith and the perseverance to inherit the promises.

13 When God made the promise to Abraham, he swore by his own self, since it was impossible for him to swear by anyone greater: • I will shower blessings on you and give you many descendants. • Because of that, Abraham persevered and saw the promise fulfilled. • Men, of course, swear an oath by something greater than themselves, and between men, confirmation by an oath puts an end to all dispute. • In the same way, when God wanted to make the heirs to the promise thoroughly realise that his purpose was unalterable, he conveyed this by an oath; so that there would be two unalterable things^f in which it was impossible for God to be lying, and so that we, now we have found safety, should have a strong encouragement to take a firm grip on the hope that is held out to us. • Here we have an anchor for our soul,^g as sure as it is firm, and reaching right through beyond the veil • where Jesus has entered before us and on our behalf, to become a high priest of the order of Melchizedek, and for ever.

d. God's people, resting in Canaan after the Exodus, is taken as a figure of God resting in heaven after the creation: the new covenant calls those who are faithful to its terms to share God's beatitude.

e. All that God has revealed through the prophets or through his Son, 1:1-2; 2:1-4; 3. Since the promises and threats of the message are still 'alive' and in force, they make it impossible for human beings to avoid declaring their true intentions, i.e. they 'judge' them.

5 a. Lit. 'in the days of his flesh' (on the word 'flesh' cf. Rm 7:5+). The emphasis of this section is on humanity: a priest must be human since he represents human beings and he must share their sufferings since he must feel compassion for them, cf. 2:17-18; 4:15. Jesus suffered in this way all through his life on earth, and especially in his agony and death.

b. Not saved from dying, since that was the whole purpose of his life, Jn 12:27f, but rescued from death after dying, Ac 2:24f. God transformed his death by raising him to glory after it, Jn 12:27f; 13:31f; 17:5; Ph 2:9-11; Heb 2:9.

c. Lit. 'because of his eulabeta' (i.e. religious awe). It was because the prayer of Christ in Gethsemane was a prayer of total submission to the will of his Father, Mt 26:39,42, that it was heard and answered.

d. Having totally succeeded in his task of being priest and victim.

e. 'The doctrine of righteousness' like 'God's oracles' can mean either the O.T., cf. 2 Tm 3:16, or the whole body of doctrine. Here it seems to mean all that Christ taught about the righteousness of God as applied to mankind, Rm 3:21-26, and especially about his own priesthood of mediation, prefigured by Melchizedek, the 'king of righteousness' 7:2.

6 a. In spite of the difficulties his readers will have, the author is going to try and stimulate them by formulating the difficult doctrine already mentioned in 5:11.

b. Anything done without faith and the divine life is called a 'dead' action because it is done in the context of sin, Rm 1:18-3:20, which leads to death, Rm 5:12,21; 6:23; 7:5; 1 Co 15:56; Ep 2:1; Col 2:13; cf. Jm 1:15; Jn 5:24; 1 Jn 3:14.

c. Not only Christian baptism, cf. Ac 1:5+; Rm 6:4+, but all the washings, lustrations and purificatory rites then practised, including the 'baptism of John' Ac 18:25; 19:1-5.

d. The irreparable apostasy of rejecting Christ and not believing in the power of his sacrifice to save.

e. The same phrase is used, Rm 15:25,31; 2 Co 8:4; 9:1,12, about a collection for the church in Jerusalem. The 'saints' are all Christians, but especially members of the mother church at Jerusalem and in particular the apostles, cf. Ac 9:13+.

f. I.e. the promise and the oath of God who 'does not lie', Tt 1:2.

g. Anchor: symbol of stability in the classical world, adopted in Christian iconography of 2nd c. as a symbol of hope.

A. CHRIST'S PRIESTHOOD HIGHER THAN LEVITICAL PRIESTHOOD

Gn 14:18 +
Ps 110:4 +
Gn 14:17-20

Melchizedek^a

7 You remember that Melchizedek, king of Salem, a priest of God Most High, went to meet Abraham who was on his way back after defeating the kings, and blessed him; •and also that it was to him that Abraham gave a tenth of all that he had. By the interpretation of his name, he is, first, 'king of righteousness' and also king of Salem, that is, 'king of peace'; •he has no father, mother or ancestry, and his life has no beginning or ending; he is like the Son of God. He remains a priest for ever.

Melchizedek accepted tithes from Abraham

Gn 14:20 Now think how great this man must have been, if the patriarch Abraham paid him a tenth of the treasure he had captured.^b •We know that any of the descendants of Levi who are admitted to the priesthood are obliged by the Law to take tithes from the people, and this is taking them from their own brothers although they too are descended from Abraham. •But this man, who was not of the same descent, took his tenth from Abraham, and he gave his blessing to the holder of the promises. •Now it is indisputable that a blessing is given by a superior to an inferior. •Further, in the one case it is ordinary mortal men who receive the tithes, and in the other, someone who is declared to be still alive. •It could be said that Levi himself, who receives tithes, actually paid them, in the person of Abraham, •because he was still in the loins of his ancestor when Melchizedek came to meet him.

From levitical priesthood to the priesthood of Melchizedek^c

Now if perfection had been reached through the levitical priesthood because the Law given to the nation rests on it, why was it still necessary for a new priesthood to arise, one of the same order as Melchizedek not counted as being 'of the same order as' Aaron? •But any change in the priesthood must mean a change in the Law as well.

So our Lord, of whom these things were said, belonged to a different tribe, the members of which have never done service at the altar; •everyone knows he came from Judah, a tribe which Moses did not even mention when dealing with priests.

The abrogation of the old Law

This^d becomes even more clearly evident when there appears a second Melchizedek, who is a priest •not by virtue of a law about physical descent,^e but by the power of an indestructible life. •For it was about him that the prophecy was made: You are a priest of the order of Melchizedek, and for ever. •The earlier commandment is thus abolished, because it was neither effective nor useful, since the Law could not make anyone perfect; but now this commandment is replaced by something better—the hope that brings us nearer to God.

Christ's priesthood is unchanging

What is more, this was not done without the taking of an oath. The others, indeed, were made priests without any oath; •but he with an oath sworn by the one who declared to him: The Lord has sworn an oath which he will never retract: you are a priest, and for ever.^f •And it follows that it is a greater covenant for which Jesus has become our guarantee. •Then there used to be a great number of those other priests, because death put an end to each one of them; •but this one, because he remains for ever, can never lose his priesthood. •It follows, then, that his power to save is utterly certain, since he is living for ever to intercede for all who come to God through him.

The perfection of the heavenly high priest

- 26 To suit us, the ideal high priest would have to be holy, innocent and uncontaminated, beyond the influence of sinners, and raised up above the 27 heavens; •one who would not need to offer sacrifices every day, as the other high priests do for their own sins and then for those of the people, because he has done
28 this once and for all^a by offering himself. •The Law appoints high priests who are men subject to weakness; but the promise on oath, which came after the Law,^b appointed the Son who is made perfect for ever.

B. THE SUPERIORITY OF THE WORSHIP, THE SANCTUARY AND THE MEDIATION PROVIDED BY CHRIST THE PRIEST

The new priesthood and the new sanctuary

- 1 8 The great point of all that we have said is that we have a high priest
2 of exactly this kind. He has his place at the right of the throne of divine
3 Majesty in the heavens, •and he is the minister of the sanctuary and of the true 4 Tent of Meeting which the Lord, and not any man, set up.^a •It is the duty of every 5 high priest to offer gifts and sacrifices, and so this one too must have something
6 to offer. •In fact, if he were on earth, he would not be a priest at all, since there
7 are others who make the offerings laid down by the Law •and these only maintain 8 the service of a model or a reflection of the heavenly realities. For Moses, when 9 he had the Tent to build, was warned by God who said: See that you make 10 everything according to the pattern shown you on the mountain.

Christ in the mediator of a greater covenant

- 6 We have seen that he has been given a ministry of a far higher order, and to the same degree it is a better covenant of which he is the mediator,^b founded on

7:12,22; 9:15; 12:24
1 Tm 2:5
1 Jn 2:1

7 ^a Melchizedek the priest-king: an O.T. type of Christ. Gn 14 is oddly silent about any ancestors or descendants of Melchizedek and this suggested the idea that he represented the eternal priesthood, vv. 1-3, cf. vv. 15-17 and Ps 110:4+. He was superior to Abraham in so far as Abraham offered him, Gn 14:20, a tithe of everything that had been captured, so a fortiori, the argument goes, he was superior to all the descendants of Abraham, including the Levites, v. 4f.

b. The tithe paid to levitical priests, Dt 14:22+, was both the stipend for their ministry at the altar and acknowledgement that as priests they were members of a higher class than those who paid. Levi (in the person of Abraham) could only have paid his tithe if Melchizedek were a priest of an even higher class than himself.

c. The argument here is based on Ps 110:4. This text prophesies that the King-Messiah will not be descended from Levi, but will be an eternal priest in the same sense as Melchizedek. This implies that when Christ comes, his sort of priesthood will replace the levitical priesthood, and this in turn will necessitate a new law since the old one was only concerned with the levitical priesthood, vv. 12, 16f, 21.

d. What has been said in v. 12.

e. Lit. 'a law of a carnal commandment', namely the law that restricted the priesthood of Levi to his physical descendants, cf. Nb 14:7f; 3:5f; Dt 10:8f; 18:1f; 33:8f.

f. Add 'of the order of Melchizedek'.

g. The one and only sacrifice of Christ is the centre of salvation history, Ac 1:7+. It closes a long epoch of preparation, 1:1f; cf. Rm 10:4; it occurs at 'the appointed time', Ga 4:4+, Rm 3:26+, and it begins the eschatological epoch. Though the Last Day, 1 Co 1:8+, Rm 2:6+, will follow, 2 Co 6:2+, only at some unspecified, 1 Th 5:1+, time in the future; salvation for the human race has been in essence certain from the moment when, in the person of Christ, it died to sin and rose to live again. Heb makes a special point of how the whole of this hope flows from the absolutely unique, unrepeatable sacrifice of Christ, 7:27; 9:12,26, 28; 10:10; cf. Rm 6:10; 1 P 3:18. Being unrepeatable, 10:12-14, this sacrifice is different from all others in the O.T. that had to be repeated again and again because they were unable actually to save anyone.

h. Cf. the promise made before the Law was given, Ga 3:17.

8 ^a The argument so far has been to prove that what Christ is, i.e. an eternal and perfect priest, is superior to what the levitical priests are, since they are all mortals and sinners, ch. 7; now the argument goes on to show that what Christ does is equally superior to what the levitical priests do: Christ's sanctuary is better because it is in heaven, 8:1-5, cf. 9:11f, while the one on earth is only a copy of it, Ex 25:40; and the covenant brought by the mediation of Christ is a better covenant, vv. 6-13, cf. 9:15f.

b. Technically Christ is the one and only true mediator; he is true man and true God, Col 2:9, and so the one and only intermediary, Rm 5:15-19; 1 Tm 2:5, cf. 1 Co 3:22-23; 11:3, between God and the human race. He unites them and reconciles them, 2 Co 5:14-20. Through him come grace, 1:16-17; Ep 1:7, and complete revelation, Heb 1:1-2. In heaven he continues to intercede for those who are faithful to him, 7:25+.

better promises. • If that first covenant had been without a fault, there would have been no need for a second one to replace it. • And in fact God does find fault with them; he says:

when I will establish a new covenant with the House of Israel and the House of Judah, but not a covenant like the one I made with their ancestors to bring them out of the land of Egypt.*

and so I on my side deserted them. It is the Lord who speaks.*

9 The first covenant also^a had its laws governing worship, and its sanctuary, a sanctuary on this earth. • There was a tent which comprised two compartments: the first, in which the lamp-stand, the table and the presentation loaves were kept, was called the Holy Place;^b • then beyond the second veil, an innermost part which was called the Holy of Holies • to which belonged the gold altar of incense,^c and the ark of the covenant, plated all over with gold. In this were kept the gold jar containing the manna, Aaron’s branch that grew the buds, and the stone tablets of the covenant. • On top of it was the throne of mercy, and outspread over it were the glorious cherubs. But now Christ has come, as the high priest of all the blessings which were to come.^e He has passed through the greater, the more perfect tent, which is better than the one made by men’s hands because it is not of this created order; • and he has entered the sanctuary^f once and for all, taking with him not the blood of goats and bull calves, but his own blood, having won an eternal redemption for us. The blood of goats and bulls and the ashes of a heifer are sprinkled on those who have incurred defilement and they restore the holiness of their outward lives; how much more effectively the blood of Christ, who offered himself as the perfect sacrifice to God through the eternal Spirit,^g can purify our inner self from dead actions so that we do our service to the living God.

Christ seals the new covenant with his blood^h

He brings a new covenant, as the mediator, only so that the people who were called to an eternal inheritance may actually receive what was promised: his death took place to cancel the sins that infringed the earlier covenant. •Now wherever a will is in question, the death of the testator must be established; •indeed, it only becomes valid with that death, since it is not meant to have any effect while the testator is still alive. •That explains why even the earlier covenant needed something to be killed in order to take effect, •and why, after Moses had announced all the commandments of the Law to the people, he took the calves' blood, the goats' blood and some water, and with these he sprinkled the book itself and all the people, using scarlet wool and hyssop; •saying as he did so: This is the blood of the covenant that God has laid down for you. •After that, he sprinkled the tent and all the liturgical vessels with blood in the same way. •In fact, according to the Law almost everything has to be purifiedⁱ with blood; and if there is no shedding of blood, there is no remission. •Obviously, only the copies of heavenly things can be purified in this way, and the heavenly things themselves have to be purified^j by a higher sort of sacrifice than this. •It is not as though Christ had entered a man-made sanctuary which was only modelled on the real one; but it was heaven itself, so that he could appear in the actual presence of God on our behalf. •And he does not have to offer himself again and again, like the high priest going into the sanctuary year after year with the blood that is not his own, •or else he would have had to suffer over and over again since the world began. Instead of that, he has made his appearance once and for all,^k now at the end of the last age, to do away with sin by sacrificing himself. •Since men only die once, and after that comes judgement, •so Christ, too, offers himself only once to take the faults of many on himself, and when he appears a second time, it will not be to deal with sin but to reward with salvation those who are waiting for him.^l

9 a. Om. 'also'.

b. In the desert Tent-Sanctuary, Ex 25-26 (cf. the Temple of Solomon, 1 K 6) a curtain hung between the Holy Place and the Holy of Holies, Ex 26:33. Only the high priest ever went into the Holy of Holies and he did so only once a year on yom kippur, the Day of Atonement. Cf. Lv 16:1+.

c. Ex 30:6; 40:26 says that the incense altar, Ex 30:1+, was in the Holy Place; Heb may be following a different liturgical tradition, or the sense may be that the place of the altar of incense was immediately in front of the curtain of the inner sanctuary.

d. The spiritual meaning of this ceremonial arrangement is that under the old covenant the people had no access to God. Under the new covenant, Christ himself is the way to the Father, Jn 14:6; cf. Heb 10:19+. The abrogation of the old worship can thus be appropriately symbolised by the Temple curtain splitting wide open at the death of Jesus, Mt 27:51p.

e. Var. 'blessings already won'.

f. In his ascension Christ 'passed through' all the successive heavenly spheres that form the 'Holy Place' of the celestial Tent, and so came into the presence of God in the celestial 'Holy of Holies'.

g. Var. 'the Holy Spirit', cf. Rm 1:4+.

h. This section is parallel to 8:6-13: it shows that the death of Christ was essential for him to act as mediator. It does this by making use of a pun: the Greek word diathēkē can mean 'pact', as in vv. 15, 18-20, or 'last will and testament', as in vv. 16-17; this makes it possible for the author to argue that a 'pact' or covenant suggests the death of a 'testator'. All pacts were sealed with the shedding of blood, Ex 24:6-8.

i. E.g. the altar, Lv 8:15; 16:19; the priests, Lv 8:24-30; the Levites, Nb 8:15; the sinful people, Lv 9:15-18; a mother, Lv 12:7-8, etc.; one exception, cf. Lv 5:11.

j. The 'purification' of the sanctuary, whether the earthly or the heavenly one, does not necessarily imply any previous 'impurity': it is a consecratory and inaugural rite.

k. The sacrifice of Christ is unique, 7:27+: being offered 'at the end of the last age' (lit. 'at the completion of the aeons'), i.e. the end of human history, there is no need for it to be repeated, since it wipes out sin, not with non-human ('alien') blood, but with Christ's own blood, cf. 9:12-14, so its effect is unconditional.

l. The first coming of Christ gave him a direct relationship to sin, Rm 8:3; 2 Co 5:21. The second coming of Christ will, since the redemption is complete, have no connection with sin. Christians wait for this parousia that will take place at the Judgement, 1 Co 1:8+; Rm 2:6+.

10 So, since the Law has no more than a reflection of these realities, and no finished picture of them, it is quite incapable of bringing the worshippers to perfection, with the same sacrifices repeatedly offered year after year. •Otherwise, the offering of them would have stopped, because the worshippers, when they had been purified once, would have no awareness of sins. •Instead of that, the sins are recalled year after year in the sacrifices. •Bulls' blood and goats' blood are useless for taking away sins, •and this is what he said, on coming into the world:

Ps 40:6-8
LXX

You who wanted no sacrifice or oblation, prepared a body for me.

*You took no pleasure in holocausts or sacrifices for sin;
then I said,*

*just as I was commanded in the scroll of the book,
'God, here I am! I am coming to obey your will.'*

Notice that he says first: You did not want what the Law lays down as the things to be offered, that is: the sacrifices, the oblations, the holocausts and the sacrifices for sin, and you took no pleasure in them; •and then he says: Here I am! I am coming to obey your will. He is abolishing the first sort to replace it with the second. •And this will was for us to be made holy by the offering of his body made once and for all by Jesus Christ.

All the priests stand at their duties every day, offering over and over again the same sacrifices which are quite incapable of taking sins away. •He, on the other hand, has offered one single sacrifice for sins, and then taken his place for ever, at the right hand of God, •where he is now waiting until his enemies are made into a footstool for him. •By virtue of that one single offering, he has achieved the eternal perfection of all whom he is sanctifying. •The Holy Spirit assures us of this; for he says, first:

*This is the covenant I will make with them
when those days arrive;*

and the Lord then goes on to say:

8:12
I will put my laws into their hearts and write them on their minds.
I will never call their sins to mind,
or their offences.

When all sins have been forgiven, there can be no more sin offerings.

In other words, brothers, through the blood of Jesus we have the right to enter the sanctuary,^a •by a new way which he has opened for us, a living opening through the curtain, that is to say, his body. •And we have the supreme high priest over all the house of God. •So as we go in, let us be sincere in heart and filled with faith, our minds sprinkled and free from any trace of bad conscience and our bodies washed with pure water. •Let us keep firm in the hope we profess, because

- 24 the one who made the promise is faithful. •Let us be concerned for each other, 3:2; 4:14;
 25 to stir a response in love and good works. •Do not stay away from the meetings 11:11 of the community, as some do, but encourage each other to go; the more so as you 1 Co 1:9+

The danger of apostasy

- 26 If, after we have been given knowledge of the truth, we should deliberately 6:4-6; 12:17 27 commit any sins, then there is no longer any sacrifice for them.^c •There will be left only the dreadful prospect of judgement and of the raging fire that is to burn Is 26:11
 28 rebels. •Anyone who disregards the Law of Moses is ruthlessly put to death on the LXX
 29 word of two witnesses or three; •and you may be sure that anyone who tramples Dt 17:6 on the Son of God, and who treats the blood of the covenant which sanctified him as if it were not holy, and who insults the Spirit of grace, will be condemned to a 30 far severer punishment. •We are all aware who it was that said: Vengeance is 6:6; 9:20
 31 mine; I will repay. And again: The Lord will judge his people. •It is a dreadful thing Ex 24:8 to fall into the hands of the living God. Dt 32:35-36

Motives for perseverance

- 32 Remember all the sufferings that you had to meet after you received the 6:4,10
 33 light,^d in earlier days; •sometimes by being yourselves publicly exposed to insults Ep 5:14 and violence, and sometimes as associates of others who were treated in the same 1 Co 4:9

 you happily accepted being stripped of your belongings, knowing that you owned Mt 5:11,40
 35 something that was better and lasting. •Be as confident now, then, since the reward Mt 6:20 36 is so great. •You will need endurance to do God's will and gain what he has Lk 21:19 promised. Ac 14:22+

The exemplary faith of our ancestors

- 1 1 Only faith can guarantee the blessings that we hope for, or prove the Rm 1:16+;
 2 existence of the realities that at present remain unseen.^a •It was for faith 4:20; 8:
 that our ancestors were commended. 2 Co 4:18
- 3 It is by faith that we understand that the world was created by one word from Gn 1
 God, so that no apparent cause can account for the things we can see.^b Rm 1:20
- 4 It was because of his faith that Abel offered God a better sacrifice than Cain, 12:24 and for that he was declared to be righteous when God made acknowledgement Gn 4:4 of his offerings. Though he is dead, he still speaks by faith. Gn 4:10
 Jb 16:18+
 Mt 23:35

10 a. Only the high priest could enter the Holy of Holies, and he could do so only once a year. From now on, all who are faithful will be able to reach God through Christ. Cf. 4:16; 7:19,25; 10:1; Rm 5:2; Ep 1:4; 2:18; 3:12; Col 1:22.

b. When Christ returns at the end of history, cf. 1 Co 1:8+. This verse may refer to the signs preceding the parousia, particularly to the disturbances that prelude the destruction of Jerusalem, itself one of the 'visitations' of the Lord.

c. The sin of apostasy or deliberate revolt against God, cf. 6:6+. The fire, v. 27, is the traditional weapon God uses in anger, Is 26:11; Mt 3:11-12; Mk 9:48-49+; Rv 11:5.

d. 'Enlightenment' or 'illumination' in N.T. as in patristic writers always refers to baptism, 6:4; Ep 5:14

(cf. Rm 6:4+).

e. Var. 'of my chains', referring to Paul's imprisonment, Ph 1:7; Col 4:18.

11 a. Var. 'Faith is the assurance of things hoped for (heaven) and the conviction of things unwanted (hell)'. The Jewish Christians to whom he is writing have been discouraged by persecution, so the author emphasises that it is only what is future and what is invisible that concerns hope. This verse was adopted as a theological definition of faith, i.e. the anticipated and assured possession of heavenly realities, cf. 6:5; Rm 5:2; Ep 1:13f. The examples taken from the lives of O.T. saints are meant to illustrate how faith is the source of patience and strength.

b. Creation seen with the eye of faith reveals 'unseen reality': before creation everything real existed in God from whom everything comes.

Si 44:16 It was because of his faith that Enoch was taken up and did not have to 5 Gn 5:24 experience death: he was not to be found because God had taken him. This was because before his assumption it is attested that he had pleased God. •Now it is 6 Rm 2:7; 10: impossible to please God without faith, since anyone who comes to him must 14 believe that he exists and rewards those who try to find him.^c
 Ex 3:14+ It was through his faith that Noah, when he had been warned by God of 7
 Jf 29:12-14 something that had never been seen before, felt a holy fear and built an ark to save Gn 6:8-22 his family. By his faith the world was convicted,^d and he was able to claim the Mt 24:37-39 righteousness which is the reward of faith.
 1 P 3:20
 2 P 2:5
 Rm 1:16+ It was by faith that Abraham obeyed the call to set out for a country that was 8
 Gn 12:1-4 the inheritance given to him and his descendants, and that he set out without Rm 1:5+ knowing where he was going. •By faith he arrived, as a foreigner, in the Promised 9 26:3; 35:12 Land, and lived there as if in a strange country, with Isaac and Jacob, who were 13:14 heirs with him of the same promise. •They lived there in tents while he looked 10
 Rv 21:10-22 forward to a city founded, designed and built by God.
 10:23 It was equally by faith that Sarah, in spite of being past the age, was made able 11
 Gn 17:19; to conceive, because she believed that he who had made the promise would be 21:2 faithful to it. •Because of this, there came from one man, and one who was 12
 Rm 4:19-21 already as good as dead himself, more descendants than could be counted, as many 22:17 as the stars of heaven or the grains of sand on the seashore.
 Ex 32:13

 LXX
 All these died in faith, before receiving any of the things that had been 13
 Jn 8:56 promised, but they saw them in the far distance and welcomed them, recognising
 Gn 23:4 that they were only strangers and nomads on earth. •People who use such terms 14
 Ps 39:12; about themselves make it quite plain that they are in search of their real homeland.
 119:19 They can hardly have meant the country they came from, since they had the 15
 13:14 opportunity to go back to it; •but in fact they were longing for a better homeland, 16
 Ph 3:20 their heavenly homeland. That is why God is not ashamed to be called their God, since he has founded the city for them.
 3:1 It was by faith that Abraham, when put to the test, offered up Isaac. He offered 17
 Rv 21:2 to sacrifice his only son even though the promises had been made to him •and he 18
 Gn 22:1-14 had been told: It is through Isaac that your name will be carried on. •He was 19
 Jm 44:20-21 confident that God had the power even to raise the dead; and so, figuratively 21:21 speaking,^e he was given back Isaac from the dead.
 Gn 21:12 It was by faith that this same Isaac gave his blessing to Jacob and Esau for the 20
 Rm 4:17-21 still distant future. •By faith Jacob, when he was dying, blessed each of Joseph's 21
 1 Co 10:6 sons, leaning on the end of his stick as though bowing to pray. •It was by faith that, 22
 Gn 27:27f, when he was about to die, Joseph recalled the Exodus of the Israelites and made 39f the arrangements for his own burial.
 Gn 48:15f
 Gn 47:31
 Gn 50:24-25 It was by faith that Moses, when he was born, was hidden by his parents for 23
 Ex 2:2 three months; they defied the royal edict when they saw he was such a fine child.^f
 Ac 7:20 It was by faith that, when he grew to manhood, Moses refused to be known as the 24
 Ex 2:11 son of Pharaoh's daughter •and chose to be ill-treated in company with God's 25 people rather than to enjoy for a time the pleasures of sin. •He considered that 26 13:13 the insults offered to the Anointed^g were something more precious than all the Ps 89:50f treasures of Egypt, because he had his eyes fixed on the reward. •It was by faith 27
 Ex 2:15 that he left Egypt and was not afraid of the king's anger; he held to his purpose
 Ex 12:11, like a man who could see the Invisible. •It was by faith that he kept the Passover 28 22:23 and sprinkled the blood to prevent the Destroyer from touching any of the first-
 Ex 14:22,27 born sons of Israel. •It was by faith they crossed the Red Sea as easily as dry land, 29 while the Egyptians, trying to do the same, were drowned.
 Jos 6:20 It was through faith that the walls of Jericho fell down when the people had 30
 Jos 2:11; been round them for seven days. •It was by faith that Rahab the prostitute 31 6:17 welcomed the spies and so was not killed with the unbelievers.
 Jm 2:25
 Is there any need to say more? There is not time for me to give an account 32
 Jg 4:6; of Gideon, Barak, Samson, Jephthah, or of David, Samuel and the prophets.
 13:24 These were men who through faith conquered kingdoms, did what is right and 33

- 34 earned the promises. They could keep a lion's mouth shut, •put out blazing fires and emerge unscathed from battle. They were weak people who were given 35 strength, to be brave in war and drive back foreign invaders. •Some came back to their wives from the dead, by resurrection; and others submitted to torture,
 36 refusing release so that they would rise again to a better life. •Some had to bear 37 being pilloried and flogged, or even chained up in prison. •They were stoned, or sawn in half,^a or beheaded; they were homeless, and dressed in the skins of sheep and goats; they were penniless and were given nothing but ill-treatment.
 38 They were too good for the world and they went out to live in deserts and 39 mountains and in caves and ravines. •These are all heroes of faith, but they did 40 not receive what was promised, •since God had made provision for us to have something better, and they were not to reach perfection except with us.[†]

The example of Jesus Christ

- 1 12 With so many witnesses in a great cloud on every side of us, we too, then,
 2 should throw off everything that hinders us, especially the sin that clings
 2 so easily, and keep running steadily in the race we have started. •Let us not lose sight of Jesus, who leads us in our faith and brings it to perfection: for the sake of the joy which was still in the future, he endured the cross, disregarding the shameful-ness of it, and from now on has taken his place at the right of God's throne.

God's fatherly instruction

- 5 Have you forgotten that encouraging text in which you are addressed as sons? My son, when the Lord corrects you, do not treat it lightly; but do not get discouraged when he reprimands you. •For the Lord trains the ones that he loves and he punishes all those that he acknowledges as his sons. •Suffering is part of your training;^b
 6 God is treating you as his sons. Has there ever been any son whose father did not
 8 train him? •If you were not getting this training, as all of you are, then you would 9 not be sons but bastards. •Besides, we have all had our human fathers who punished us, and we respected them for it; we ought to be even more willing to
 10 submit ourselves to our spiritual Father, to be given life. •Our human fathers were thinking of this short life when they punished us, and could only do what they thought best; but he does it all for our own good, so that we may share his 11 own holiness. •Of course, any punishment is most painful at the time, and far from pleasant; but later, in those on whom it has been used, it bears fruit in peace 12 and goodness. •So hold up your limp arms and steady your trembling knees •and 13 smooth out the path you tread; then the injured limb will not be wrenched, it will grow strong again.

c. The faith that is essential for salvation has two objects; belief in the existence of one personal God, Ws 13:1, who by his very nature cannot be seen, Jn 1:18; Rm 1:20; Col 1:15; 1 Tm 1:17; 6:16; Jn 20:29; 2 Co 5:7, and belief that God will pay a just wage for all effort spent in searching for him; cf. Mt 5:12p; 6:4,6,18; 10:41p; 16:27; 20:1-16; 25:31-46; Lk 6:35; 14:14; Rm 2:6; 1 Co 3:8,14; 2 Co 5:10; Ep 6:8; 2 Tm 4:8,14; 1 P 1:17; 2 Jn 8; Rv 2:23; 11:18; 14:13; 20:12-13; 22:12.

d. Noah's confidence in what God had said 'convicts' a sinner, cf. Ws 4:16; Mt 12:41.

e. Lit. 'by a parable'. The saving of Isaac from death prefigures the resurrection of all humans and, according to traditional exegesis, the death and resurrection of Christ.

f. Some authorities insert the story of the murdered Egyptian here, cf. Ex 2:11-12; Ac 7:24.

g. In the psalm, God's 'Anointed' who is 'insulted' refers to the people of God, v. 25, consecrated to Yahweh, Ex 19:6+. The author of Heb applies the text to Christ himself on whose account Moses (through faith, since the Messiah was still in the future) suffered. Cf. 10:33; 13:13.

h. Some apocryphal books say this was how king Manasseh had Isaiah executed. Add. 'tempted' (put through ordeals).

i. The eschatological epoch of 'perfection' was inaugurated by Christ, 2:10; 5:9; 7:28; 10:14, and access to the divine life has been made available only by him, 9:11f; 10:19f. The O.T. saints, who could not be 'perfected' by the Law, 7:19; 9:9; 10:1, had thus to wait till the resurrection of Christ before they could enter the perfect life of heaven, 12:23; cf. Mt 27:52f; 1 P 3:19+.

12 a. Lit. 'endured contradictions of sinners against himself'; var. '...against themselves'.

b. To the eyes of faith, the various trials of life are all part of the way God is bringing us up. The argument depends on the biblical concept of education, músar, palteia, mean 'teaching through hitting, punishing', cf. Jb 5:17; 33:19; Ps 94:12; Si 1:27; 4:17; 23:2.

g. This is the real conclusion, and an apt one for a letter that lays such emphasis on the liturgy. The 'unshakeable' kingdom summarises vv. 22-24. God reigns over both his angels and his saints in the kingdom of heaven, the eternal and spiritual Jerusalem. From now on Christians are able to enter this kingdom and live there a life that is a eucharistic liturgy.

13 a. The heads of the community.

b. Christ Jesus was the central theme on which the heads of the community preached. They may die but Christ remains, and so it is to him that Christians owe their allegiance.

c. Not the table used for the Eucharist, but either the cross on which Christ was sacrificed, or Christ himself through whom we offer the sacrifice of prayer to God. Non-Christians Jews who still 'served the tabernacle' cannot participate.

d. On the Day of Atonement the high priest went into the Holy of Holies and sprinkled it with the blood of animals that had been killed, and the bodies of these animals were burnt outside the camp. This prefigured how Jesus as expiatory victim was to be killed outside the walls of Jerusalem. The lesson drawn from this is that Christians should break with Judaism and think of themselves as exiles from the world.

e. 'Through him', add. 'therefore'.

THE LETTERS TO ALL CHRISTIANS

INTRODUCTION TO THE LETTERS TO ALL CHRISTIANS

There are seven New Testament letters which are not Pauline and which, in spite of having no other obvious connection, were very soon grouped together. Three of these letters are attributed to John, two to Peter and the other two to James and Jude. They were already given the title 'universal' or 'catholic' by the end of the 2nd century; it is not certain why, possibly because most are addressed to the whole Christian Church and not to particular communities or individuals.

The letter of James was generally accepted as canonical in the Church from the 2nd century onwards. Its author is usually identified with the James, 'brother of the Lord', Mt 13:55p; cf. 12:46+, who played an important part in the earliest Christian community in Jerusalem, Ac 12:17+; 15:13-21; 21:18-26; 1 Co 15:7; Ga 1:19; 2:9,12, and who was put to death by Jews about the year 62 (Josephus, Hegesippus). He is obviously not the apostle James, son of Zebedee, Mt 10:2p, martyred by Herod in 44, Ac 12:2, though he could theoretically be identified with the apostle James, son of Alphaeus, Mt 10:3p; even early writers, however, were doubtful and most critics nowadays reject it. Paul's turn of phrase in Ga 1:19 is ambiguous. But even without being one of the Twelve, James, as 'the brother of the Lord', was sufficiently prominent for the apostolic authority of his letter to be accepted from the beginning.

The traditional attribution of the letter to James, 'the brother of the Lord', leader of the Judaeo-Christian community in Jerusalem, is supported by internal evidence. The author was familiar with the Old Testament and with the teachings of Jesus, yet his letter, though it is full of Hebraisms and makes use of parallelism, and is in a didactic style that is characteristically semitic, was obviously written in Greek. It is written, moreover, with such elegance, such a rich vocabulary and with such a skilful use of the 'diatribe', that many critics have found it hard to believe the author was a Galilean. No accurate estimate, however, can be made as to how competent first-century Palestinians were in writing Greek, and James may have been helped by a disciple familiar with the hellenistic world and its culture.

The letter is addressed to the 'twelve tribes of the Dispersion', 1:1, i.e. to the Jewish Christians scattered all over the Graeco-Roman world but concentrated in countries near Palestine like Syria and Egypt. The whole tone of the letter shows that it was intended for Jewish converts and presumes that the readers are familiar with the Old Testament since, unlike Paul and the author of the Hebrews, James hardly ever makes use of direct quotations but argues from the imprecise and rather general allusions that underlie the whole text.

His two chief sources are the Old Testament wisdom literature, on which he bases his moral lessons, and the teaching found in the gospels. Some critics have thought of the letter as an exclusively Jewish product, but, on the contrary, ideas and even characteristic expressions of Jesus can be detected all through it, not so much by explicit quotations from written texts, as by reference to a living, oral tradition. James is a Judaeo-Christian sage who has rethought the maxims of the Jewish Wisdom tradition in the light of his Master's teachings, and is able to re-present them in an original way.

More a sermon than a letter, it probably reflects the regular teaching of Judaeo-Christian assemblies and consists of a series of moral exhortations linked either by a common theme or sometimes by nothing more than verbal assonances. The sort of subjects dealt with are: how to behave in time of trial, 1:1-12; 5:7-11; the origin of temptation, 1:13-18; how to control the tongue, 1:26; 3:1-18; good relations and sympathy with one's neighbour, 2:8,13; 3:13-4:2; 4:11f; the power of prayer, 1:5-8; 4:2f; 5:13-18 etc. In 5:14f is the locus classicus on the sacramental (cf. Council of Trent) anointing of the sick.

There are two main themes. The first praises the poor and threatens the rich, 1:9-11; 1:27-2:9; 4:13-5:6, showing a concern for the lowly, God's favoured ones, that follows one Old Testament tradition but particularly the Beatitudes, Mt 5:3+. The second insists that Christians must do good and not be content with a faith that produces nothing, 1:22-27; 2:10-26; this leads on to a section, 2:14-26, that ridicules the preaching of faith completely unrelated to good works, and some have seen this as aimed against Paul. James and Galatians-Romans have many significant points of contact, particularly noticeable in the different ways they interpret Old Testament texts on Abraham. James may be opposing Paul himself or, more probably, certain Christians who drew pernicious conclusions from Paul's teaching. Two points are worth remembering: first, that beneath the clash between their different positions, Paul and James agree on essentials, cf. 2:14+; secondly, that the problem of relating faith to works is inherent in the data of Jewish religion and may have been a traditional topic that James and Paul dealt with independently of each other.

The dating of the letter depends on how the problem just mentioned is solved. If James is thinking of what Paul taught in Galatians-Romans, it must be dated after 57/58; if not, it could be dated before the judaising crisis (about 49), which would account for its primitive Christology. In either case it must be dated before the First Letter of Peter which is indebted to James.

Jude who calls himself 'brother of James', v. 1, is also, it appears, one of the 'brothers of the Lord', Mt 13:55p. There is no reason to identify him with the apostle of the same name, Lk 6:16; Ac 1:13; cf. Jn 14:22, especially as he refers to himself as being outside the apostolic body, v. 17. Nor is it likely that an anonymous author would have adopted the name, since Jude was not sufficiently prominent to lend authority to a letter. Our hypothesis is that after his brother James had been executed in 62 A.D., Jude followed his example and warned the Jewish Christians against new threats to their faith. If this is so, his anonymous readers are those for whom James wrote, and his Greek, which is accurate, with semitic turns of phrase, may be accounted for as in the case of James. The letter was accepted as canonical by many of the churches as early as 200, though its use of two apocryphal sources, the Book of Enoch in vv. 6,14f, and the Assumption of Moses in v. 9, had prompted certain hesitations; but to quote contemporary Jewish writings is hardly equivalent to recognising their inspiration.

Jude's purpose in writing this letter is to denounce the false teachers who are a danger to Christian faith. He threatens them with the divine punishments familiar from Jewish tradition, vv. 5-7, and also seems to base his description of their false teaching on the same traditions, v. 11. He nowhere states precisely what these doctrines were, so they cannot be identified with second-century Gnosticism. He accuses them of irreligion and immorality, in particular of blasphemies against the Lord Christ and the angels, vv. 4,8-10. These may have been part of the syncretistic tendencies denounced in Colossians, the Pastoral Letters and Revelation.

The letter must be dated fairly late in the 1st century: the apostles are quoted as belonging to the past, vv. 17f; the faith is now something fixed and 'handed on once for all', v. 3; and the author appears to be acquainted with Paul's letters. It is true that 2 Peter borrows from Jude and is therefore later, but the 'Second Letter of Peter' could have been written after Peter's death (cf. infra). The limits seem to be between 70 and 80.

Two of these 'universal' letters are attributed to Peter. 1 Peter introduces the name of the apostle in the opening verse, 1:1, and has never been doubted in any part of the Church. Clement of Rome seems to have used it; Polycarp certainly did, and since the time of Irenaeus it has been expressly attributed to Peter. The apostle writes from Rome (Babylon, 5:13), and calls Mark, who is with him, his 'son'. Very little is known about Peter's last years; according to tradition he went to Rome and was martyred there under Nero (in 64 or possibly 67). His letter is addressed to the Christians 'of the Dispersion', and names five provinces, 1:1, which represent practically the whole of Asia Minor. From what he says, 1:14,18; 2:9f; 4:3, it seems that most of them were converted pagans, though there may have been some Judaeo-Christians among them. He was obviously obliged to send them a letter in Greek—James had done the same with less reason—and though Peter's Greek is unsophisticated it is too accurate and unforced for a fisherman from Galilee. Unlike the letter from James, the name of a disciple and secretary is mentioned who may have helped: this is Silvanus, 5:12, usually identified with the Silvanus who had been a companion of Paul, Ac 15:22+.

The purpose of the letter is to help its readers' faith in a time of trial. Some critics think this may refer to a persecution under Domitian or Trajan, which would date the letter much later than Peter; but the allusions in the letter are not strong enough to make this conclusion inevitable, since it seems that this 'time of trial' could refer rather to the personal malice and spiteful calumnies caused by the strictly moral life led by converts among those whose sins they no longer shared, 2:12; 3:16; 4:4,12-16.

Another argument against Petrine authorship is based on the liberal use the letter makes of John, Romans and Ephesians, and on the surprisingly little direct use it makes of the gospel. There are, however, many reminiscences of the gospel but these are so implicit as to constitute an argument against the idea that the author merely wanted to pretend the apostle had written it. There is a tendency perhaps to exaggerate the number of points of contact with James and Paul. Specifically Pauline themes, e.g. the abolition of the Jewish Law, the Body of Christ, etc., do not appear at all, and though some themes appear that are best known from Paul's letters, yet these are themes common to all early Christian theology, e.g. the redemptive nature of the death of Jesus; faith and baptism, etc. Certain formulae used in primitive preaching and certain items in anthologies of Old Testament quotations are being increasingly identified by critics, and any early writings could well have drawn on these independently. Even the remaining cases where 1 Peter is dependent on Romans or Ephesians need not militate against Petrine authorship, since Peter, feeling his lack of theological gifts, may well have had recourse to Paul's writings, especially as he was writing to people who had felt Paul's influence. It is also worth remembering that Silvanus was a disciple of both apostles and that some scholars detect affinities not only between 1 Peter and Paul but also between 1 Peter and two groups of writings whose climate is Petrine: i.e. Mark and the discourses of Peter in Acts.

If the substance of the letter were in existence before Peter's death in 64 or 67, Silvanus could still have given it its present form many years later. This hypothesis would be more likely if it could be proved that the letter was made up of fragments. It is suggested that, for example, a baptismal homily, 1:13-4:11, is one such fragment, but these identifications remain very tentative.

Though a very practical letter, it is also a valuable summary of apostolic theology. The dominating theme is fortitude in trial, for which Christ himself is the model, 2:21-25; 3:18; 4:1. Christians must suffer patiently like him when their trials are due to their faith and to their saintly lives, 2:19f; 3:14; 4:12-19; 5:9, i.e. if, in return for evil, they offer: charity, obedience to civil authority, 2:13-17, and gentleness to all, 3:8-17; 4:7-11, 19. There is one obscure passage, 3:19f, cf. 4:6; the 'preaching' of Christ can be taken as an announcement either of salvation or of punishment; the 'spirits in prison' can be taken either as the wicked who were drowned in the Flood or as the fallen angels of biblical and apocalyptic tradition. On either view, this passage refers the 'preaching' to the moment Jesus died and is the chief source for the doctrine of the Descent into Hell.

The Second Letter of Peter claims to have been written by the apostle himself. He is named in the opening address, 1:1, the prediction of Peter's death is made by Jesus to the author himself, 1:14, who also claims to have witnessed the transfiguration, 1:16-18, and who alludes to a former letter that is obviously meant to be 1 Peter.

The purpose of the letter is twofold: to warn against false teachers, ch. 2, and to allay anxiety due to the delay of the parousia, ch. 3. It is possible that both these difficulties existed before Peter's death, but other considerations make Petrine authorship doubtful and suggest a later date. The vocabulary is notably different from 1 Peter; the whole of ch. 2 is obviously a free repetition of Jude; an accepted Pauline corpus seems to be already in existence, 3:15f; the apostolic body is referred to, with the prophets, as a thing of the past and as if the author did not belong to it. These difficulties caused early writers to hesitate, and there is no sure evidence that the letter was accepted at all before the 3rd century, and some, according to Origen, Eusebius and Jerome, explicitly refused to accept it. Most critics nowadays also reject the Petrine authorship, though the writer may have had some claim to represent Peter: perhaps he belonged to a group of Peter's disciples, perhaps he filled out one of Peter's writings with ideas from the letter of Jude. This is what we should call forgery but what in those days literary convention found admissible.

The letter has been definitely accepted by the Church as canonical, and Christians accept it as an authoritative document from the apostolic age. The doctrine it teaches supports this: note especially the vocation of all Christians to the 'share in the divine nature', 1:4; the way scriptural inspiration is defined, 1:20f; the assurance that eventually the parousia will come though no one can know when; the prediction of a new world free of all injustice after the old world has been destroyed by fire, 3:3-13.

For the three letters of John cf. the Introduction to the Gospel and Letters of Saint John.

c. James, in the tradition of the Jews, believes the essence of religion is its practical value in actions, cf. 2:14+.

d. Lit. 'uncompoundedly' i.e. simply, or unreservedly.

e. It is a theme of the O.T. that the poor, cf. Zp 2:3+, will be rewarded, 1 S 2:7-8; Ps 72:4,12, etc., and this theme is developed in the gospels, cf. Lk 1:52, Lk 6:20, etc., to show their reward in terms of the kingdom of heaven. This privilege of the poor is recognised in the early Church; it is barred to the rich unless they reduce themselves to the same humble state, cf. Mt 5:3+.

f. Or 'As soon as the sun, with a scorching wind'.

g. Om. 'the Lord'. Vulg. reads 'God'.

h. Om. (Vet. Lat.) 'from above'.

i. Lit. 'the Father of the lights', i.e. the maker of the stars, Gn 1:14-18, and source of spiritual light, cf. 1 P 2:9; 1 Jn 1:5. The imagery following this phrase is suggested by astronomy. Var. 'no such thing as alteration due to the movement of a shadow'.

j. Lit. 'He deliberately termed us forth by a word of truth'. This 'word of truth' is everything God has revealed to the human race, it is also called the law of freedom or the supreme Law, cf. 1:21-25; 2:8.

k. This reflects the Jewish concept of human freedom as flowing from obedience to the Law; Paul, however, had a different concept of Christian freedom as something flowing from the Christian's release from obedience to the Law, cf. Rm 6:15+; 7:1+.

l. Cf. Mt 6:9; 1 Co 15:24; Ep 5:20. The O.T. uses the phrase in Dt 32:6; cf. Is 63:16; Si 23:1,4; Ws 2:16. 2 a. Lit. 'our Lord Jesus Christ of glory', cf. 1 Co 2:8+.

b. James is writing to Jewish Christians; it is possible they may even have still been attending Jewish synagogues, or it may be his word for the Christian 'assembly' for liturgical services.

c. I.e. poor in money, rich in faith, cf. 1:9+; this letter is not concerned to advocate social reform since it emphasises that the poor already have the truest wealth.

d. Lit. 'blaspheming the good name invoked over you (or: that you bear)'. In the O.T. the name of Yahweh pronounced over someone dedicated him to the divine protection, Am 9:12; Is 43:7; Jr 14:9. In the N.T. the only means of salvation is the name of Jesus invoked, e.g. at baptism, Ac 2:21+.

Law. •Talk and behave like people who are going to be judged by the law of freedom, •because there will be judgement without mercy for those who have not been merciful themselves;^e but the merciful need have no fear of judgement.

Faith and good works^f

Take the case, my brothers, of someone who has never done a single good act but claims that he has faith. Will that faith save him? •If one of the brothers or one of the sisters is in need of clothes and has not enough food to live on, and one of you says to them, 'I wish you well; keep yourself warm and eat plenty', without giving them these bare necessities of life, then what good is that? •Faith is like that: if good works do not go with it, it is quite dead.^g

This is the way to talk to people of that kind:^h 'You say you have faith and I have good deeds; I will prove to you that I have faith by showing you my good deeds—now you prove to me that you have faith without any good deeds to show.

You believe in the one God—that is creditable enough, but the demons have the same belief, and they tremble with fear. •Do realise, you senseless man, that faith without good deeds is useless.ⁱ •You surely know that Abraham our father was justified by his deed, because he offered his son Isaac on the altar? •There you see it: faith and deeds were working together; his faith became perfect by what he did.^j

This is what scripture really means when it says: Abraham put his faith in God, and this was counted as making him justified; and that is why he was called 'the friend of God'.

You see now that it is by doing something good, and not only by believing, that a man is justified. •There is another example of the same kind: Rahab the prostitute, justified by her deeds because she welcomed the messengers^k and showed them a different way to leave. •A body dies when it is separated from the spirit, and in the same way faith is dead if it is separated from good deeds.

Uncontrolled language

Only a few of you, my brothers, should be teachers, bearing in mind that those of us^a who teach can expect a stricter judgement.

After all, every one of us does something wrong, over and over again; the only man who could reach perfection would be someone who never said anything wrong—he would be able to control every part of himself. •Once^b we put a bit into the horse's mouth, to make it do what we want, we have the whole animal under our control. •Or think of ships: no matter how big they are, even if a gale is driving them, the man at the helm can steer them anywhere he likes by controlling a tiny rudder. •So is the tongue only a tiny part of the body, but it can proudly claim that it does great things. Think how small a flame can set fire to a huge forest; •the tongue is a flame like that. Among all the parts of the body, the tongue is a whole wicked world in itself:^c it infects the whole body; catching fire itself from hell, it sets fire to the whole wheel of creation.^d •Wild animals and birds, reptiles and fish can all be tamed by man, and often are; •but nobody can tame the tongue—it is a pest that will not keep still, full of deadly poison. •We use it to bless the Lord and Father,^e but we also use it to curse men who are made in God's image: •the blessing and the curse come out of the same mouth.^f My brothers, this must be wrong—does any water supply give a flow of fresh water and salt water out of the same pipe? •Can a fig tree give you olives, my brothers, or a vine give figs? No more can sea water give you fresh water.

Real wisdom and its opposite

If there are any wise or learned men among you, let them show it by their good lives, with humility and wisdom in their actions. •But if at heart you have the bitterness of jealousy, or a self-seeking ambition, never make any claims for yourself or cover up the truth with lies —•principles of this kind are not the wisdom that comes down from above: they are only earthly, animal and

- 16 devilish. •Wherever you find jealousy and ambition, you find disharmony, and 17 wicked things of every kind being done; •whereas the wisdom that comes down from above is essentially something pure; it also makes for peace, and is kindly and considerate;^g it is full of compassion and shows itself by doing good; nor is 18 there any trace of partiality or hypocrisy in it. •Peacemakers, when they work for peace, sow the seeds which will bear fruit in holiness.

Disunity among Christians

- 1 4 Where do these wars and battles between yourselves first start? Isn't it precisely 2 in the desires fighting inside your own selves? •You want something and you haven't got it; so you are prepared to kill. You have an ambition that you cannot satisfy; so you fight to get your way by force.^a Why you don't have what you 3 want is because you don't pray for it; •when you do pray and don't get it, it is because you have not prayed properly, you have prayed for something to indulge your own desires.
 4 You are as unfaithful as adulterous wives;^b don't you realise that making the world your friend is making God your enemy? Anyone who chooses the world 5 for his friend turns himself into God's enemy. •Surely you don't think scripture is wrong when it says: the spirit which he sent to live in us wants us for himself 6 alone?^c •But he has been even more generous to us, as scripture says: God opposes
 7 the proud but he gives generously to the humble. •Give in to God, then; resist the 8 devil, and he will run away from you. •The nearer you go to God, the nearer he will come to you. Clean your hands, you sinners, and clear your minds, you 9 waverers. •Look at your wretched condition, and weep for it in misery; be 10 miserable instead of laughing, gloomy instead of happy.^d •Humble yourselves before the Lord and he will lift you up.
 11 Brothers, do not slander one another. Anyone who slanders a brother, or condemns him, is speaking against the Law and condemning the Law. But if you condemn the Law, you have stopped keeping it and become a judge over it.
 12 There is only one lawgiver^e and he is the only judge and has the power to acquit or to sentence. Who are you to give a verdict on your neighbour?^f

e. 'Judgement' (i.e. 'condemnation') is merciless to anyone who does not show mercy. 'the merciful ... judgement'; lit. 'mercy triumphs over judgement'. Cf. Mt 18:35.

f. The different points of view of James and Paul, Rm 3:20-31; Ga 2:16; 3:2, 5, 11f; Ph 3:9, are not wholly irreconcilable. Paul is anxious to rule out the view that a human being can earn salvation without having faith in Christ, since such a reliance on self-made sanctity would be contradicted by the radical sinfulness of unredeemed man, Rm 1:18-3:20; Ga 3:22, and would make faith in Christ superfluous, Ga 2:17; cf. Rm 1:16+. But Paul does not deny that the saint who has been made holy by grace must show his faith by actually loving, Ga 5:6; cf. 1 Th 1:3; 2 Th 1:11; Phm 6, and in this way obeying the Law, Rm 8:4, i.e. the Law or commandment of Christ and his Spirit, Ga 6:2; Rm 8:2, which is the commandment to love, Rm 13:8-10; Ga 5:14. It is perfectly true, however, that in order to teach the same truth as Paul, James in a different context and under different circumstances explains the case of Abraham in a completely different way from Paul.

g. Lit. 'it is dead by itself'.

h. The same opponents as in vv. 14 and 16.

i. Var. (Vulg.) 'dead', cf. vv. 17 and 26.

j. Unlike most Jews, James does not consider Abraham's faith (trust in God) as constituting a 'good deed' in itself; however closely he relates the two things, James makes a clear distinction between having faith and doing something as a result of that faith.

k. 'messengers'; var. 'spies', cf. Heb 11:31.

3 a. Var. (Vulg.) 'you'.

b. Lit. 'Now if (var. 'Behold' as, lit. in v. 4) we put bits into horses' mouths'.

c. Lit. 'the tongue... is the kosmos of wickedness' i.e. 'it is the world of wickedness', or alternatively 'it is the ornament of wickedness'.

d. Lit. 'inflaming the wheel (var. course) of nature' (i.e. of the world) 'and being inflamed by Gehenna'.

e. 'Lord and Father', var. (Vulg.) 'God and Father'.

f. The antithesis 'bless-curse' is common in the O.T., Gn 12:3; 27:29; Nb 23:11; 24:9; Jos 8:34.

g. Vulg. adds 'in harmony with good'.

4 a. Alternative translation (corr.) 'You crave things you don't have, you are envious and jealous of things you cannot have, you squabble and fight' (lit. 'fight and go to war'). 'War' here is not the internal spiritual struggle of a Christian, cf. Rm 7:23; 1 P 2:11, and it seems to be more than just a heated argument between Christians, it seems to mean coming to real blows.

b. Lit. 'You adulteresses, don't you know that friendship of the world is enmity of God?' The imagery of Israel the unfaithful wife of Yahweh is traditional in the O.T., Ho 1:2+, cf. Mt 12:39; Mk 8:38; 2 Co 11:2.

c. Lit. 'the spirit he has made to dwell in us yearns for our love'; or 'he yearns intensely over the spirit he has made to dwell in us'. This text, now lost, seems to have inspired Rm 8:26-27 as well. It is because God has shared his Spirit with us, that we want what God wants and that God answers our prayers, cf. Mt 18:19-20; Jn 14:13+.

d. Cf. Is 32:11f; Mt 2:4; Jr 4:13f; Zc 11:2f.

e. Var. 'There is only one: the lawgiver...'

f. Lit. 'And who are you the one judging your neighbour?' cf. 2:4. To believe yourself qualified to judge (=punish) a neighbour breaks the golden rule, 2:8, of love. Cf. Rm 2:1.

It was a burning fire that you stored up as your treasure for the last days.^a •Labourers mowed your fields, and 4 you cheated them—listen to the wages that you kept back, calling out; realise that the cries of the reapers have reached the ears of the Lord of hosts. •On earth 5 you have had a life of comfort and luxury; in the time of slaughter^b you went on eating to your heart's content. •It was you who condemned the innocent and 6 killed them; they offered you no resistance.

My brothers, if one of you strays away from the truth, and another brings 19 him back to it, •he may be sure^g that anyone who can bring back a sinner from 20 the wrong way that he has taken will be saving a soul from death and covering up a great number of sins.

5 a. Eschatologically the misfortunes of the rich will be apparent only at the Judgement, 5:7-9. We however are already living in the last days, cf. 2 Co 6: 2+.

b. Not a reference to Judgement day, but to the extreme violence to which, once, the innocent had been subjected, v. 6, while the rich were living at ease, v. 5.

c. 'rains', var. 'fruits'.

d. Om. 'of the Lord'. The tradition that these prayers and this anointing with oil in the name of the Lord, and for the purpose of helping the sick and forgiving their sins, are the origin of the Church's 'sacrament of the sick' (or Holy Unction), was endorsed by the Council of Trent.

e. This mutual confession and prayer for each other. Instead of being only recommendations to the sick, v. 15, are here urged on all Christians. Nothing special however may be deduced about sacramental confession.

f. Var. (Vulg.) 'assiduous'.

g. Var. 'you can be sure'.

Address. Greetings

Introduction. The salvation of Christians

- 3 Blessed be God the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who in his great mercy
4 has given us a new birth as his sons, by raising Jesus Christ from the dead, so that 5 we have a sure hope •and the promise of an inheritance that can never be spoilt 6 or soiled and never fade away, because it is being kept for you in the heavens.
7 Through your faith, God's power will guard you until the salvation which has 8 been prepared is revealed at the end of time.^c •This is a cause of great joy for you, 9 even though you may for a short time have to bear being plagued by all sorts of 10 trials; •so that, when Jesus Christ is revealed, your faith will have been tested and 11 proved like gold—only it is more precious than gold, which is corruptible even 12 though it bears testing by fire—and then you will have praise and glory and 13 honour. •You did not see him, yet you love him; and still without seeing him, 14 you are already filled with a joy so glorious that it cannot be described, because 15 you believe; •and you are sure of the end to which your faith looks forward, that 16 is, the salvation of your souls.

The hope of the prophets

- 10 It was this salvation that the prophets were looking and searching so hard for;
11 their prophecies were about the grace which was to come to you. •The Spirit of 12 Christ which was in them^d foretold the sufferings of Christ and the glories that 13 would come after them, and they tried to find out at what time and in 14 what circumstances all this was to be expected. •It was revealed to them that the 15 news they brought of all the things which have now been announced to you, by 16 those who preached to you the Good News through the Holy Spirit sent from 17 heaven, was for you and not for themselves. Even the angels long to catch a 18 glimpse of these things.

everyone according to what he has done, you must be scrupulously careful as long 18
as you are living away from your home. •Remember, the ransom that was paid 19 to free you from the useless way of life your ancestors handed down was not paid in anything corruptible, neither in silver nor gold, •but in the precious blood of a 20 lamb without spot or stain, namely Christ;• who, though known since before 21 the world was made, has been revealed only in our time, the end of the ages, for your sake. •Through him you now have faith in God, who raised him from the 22 dead and gave him glory for that very reason—so that you would have faith and hope in God. 23

Love

Rm 1:5+ You have been obedient to the truth and purified your souls until you can 22 love like brothers, in sincerity; let your love for each other be real and from the heart^f—•your new birth was not from any mortal seed but from the everlasting 23 in putting up with the pains of unearned punishment if it is done for the sake of are some husbands who have not yet obeyed the word, they may find them-

 4 doing up your hair, wearing gold bracelets and fine clothes; •all this should be inside, in a person's heart,^a imperishable: the ornament of a sweet and gentle 5 disposition—this is what is precious in the sight of God. •That was how the holy women of the past dressed themselves attractively—they hoped in God and were 6 tender and obedient to their husbands; •like Sarah, who was obedient to Abraham, and called him her lord. You are now her children, as long as you live good lives and do not give way to fear or worry.

face of the Lord frowns on evil men, but the eyes of the Lord are turned towards the virtuous.

In persecution

No one can hurt you if you are determined to do only what is right; •if you do have to suffer for being good, you will count it a blessing. There is no need to be afraid or to worry about them.^a •Simply reverence^e the Lord^f Christ in your hearts, and always have your answer ready for people who ask you the reason for the hope that you all have. •But give it with courtesy and respect and with a clear conscience, so that those who slander you when you are living a good life in Christ may be proved wrong in the accusations that they bring. •And if it is the will of God that you should suffer, it is better to suffer for doing right than for doing wrong.

The resurrection and 'the descent into hell'

Why, Christ himself, innocent though he was, had died once for sins,^g died for the guilty, to lead us to God. In the body he was put to death, in the spirit he was raised to life, •and, in the spirit, he went to preach to the spirits in prison.^h Now it was long ago, when Noah was still building that ark which saved only a small group of eight people 'by water', and when God was still waiting patiently, that these spirits refused to believe. •That water is a type of the baptismⁱ which saves you now, and which is not the washing off of physical dirt^j but a pledge^k made to God from a good conscience, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ, who has entered heaven and is at God's right hand,^l now that he has made the angels and Dominations and Powers his subjects.

4 Think of what Christ suffered in this life, and then arm yourselves with the same resolution that he had: anyone who in this life has bodily suffering has broken with sin, •because for the rest of his life on earth he is not ruled by human passions but only by the will of God. •You spent quite long enough in the past living the sort of life that pagans live, behaving indecently, giving way to your passions, drinking all the time, having wild parties and drunken orgies and degrading yourselves by following false gods. •So people cannot understand why you no longer hurry off with them to join this flood which is rushing down to ruin,^m and then they begin to spread libels about you. •They will have to answer for it in front of the judge who is ready to judge the living and the dead. •And because he is their judge too, the dead had to be told the Good News as well,ⁿ so that though, in their life on earth, they had been through the judgement that comes to all humanity, they might come to God's life in the spirit.

The revelation of Christ is close

Everything will soon come to an end, so, to pray better, keep a calm and sober mind. •Above all, never let your love for each other grow insincere, since love covers over many a sin. •Welcome each other into your houses without grumbling. Each one of you has received a special grace, so, like good stewards responsible for all these different graces of God, put yourselves at the service of others. •If you are a speaker, speak in words which seem to come from God;^o if you are a helper,^p help as though every action was done at God's orders; so that in everything God may receive the glory, through Jesus Christ, since to him alone belong all glory and power for ever and ever. Amen.

Recapitulation

My dear people, you must not think it unaccountable that you should be tested by fire. There is nothing extraordinary in what has happened to you. •If you can have some share in the sufferings of Christ, be glad, because you will enjoy a much greater gladness when his glory is revealed. •It is a blessing for you when they insult you for bearing the name of Christ, because it means that you have the

- 15 Spirit of glory,^e the Spirit of God resting on you. •None of you should ever deserve 16 to suffer for being a murderer, a thief, a criminal or an informer; •but if anyone of you should suffer for being a Christian, then he is not to be ashamed of it; he 17 should thank God that he has been called one. •The time has come for the judgement to begin at the household of God; and if what we know now is only the beginning, what will it be when it comes down to those who refuse to believe God's 18 Good News? •If it is hard for a good man to be saved, what will happen to the wicked 19 and to sinners? •So even those whom God allows to suffer must trust themselves to the constancy of the creator and go on doing good.

Instructions: to the elders

- 1 5 Now I have something to tell your elders:^a I am an elder myself, and a witness^b to the sufferings of Christ, and with you I have a share in the glory that is 2 to be revealed.^c •Be the shepherds of the flock of God that is entrusted to you:
 watch over it, not simply as a duty but gladly, because God wants it;^d not for 3 sordid money, but because you are eager to do it. •Never be a dictator over any group that is put in your charge, but be an example that the whole flock can

The allusion is to local persecutions.

g. 'sins', Vulg. 'our sins'. Om. 'to God'.

h. Probably alludes to the descent of Christ to Hades, cf. Mt 16:18+, between his death and resurrection, Mt 12:40; Ac 2:24,31; Rm 10:7; Ep 4:9; Heb 13:20. He went there 'in spirit', cf. Lk 23:46, or (better) 'according to the spirit', Rm 1:4+, his 'flesh' being dead on the cross, Rm 8:3f. The 'spirits in prison' to whom he 'preached' (or 'proclaimed') salvation are identified by some writers as the chained demons mentioned in the Book of Enoch (some texts are corrected so as to make Enoch, and not Christ, preach to them). These spirits have thus been put under the authority of Christ as Kyrios v. 22, cf. Ep 1:21f; Ph 2:8-10, and this subjection to him is to be confirmed later on, 1 Co 15:24f. Other writers suggest these were the spirits of people drowned in the Flood as a punishment but who are now summoned by God's 'patience' to eternal life, cf. 4:6. Mt 27:52f is a similar episode of liberation by Christ between his death and resurrection, only here it is the saints, the holy ones who were waiting for him, that are liberated, cf. Heb 11:39f; 12:23, and are given the freedom of the holy (the heavenly) city. The descent of Christ to Hades is one of the articles in the 'Apostles' Creed'.

i. Lit. 'by water, to which the antitype is the baptism' i.e. that which was prefigured by the 'type' (cf. 1 Co 10:6+). Here the 'type' of baptism is Noah's Flood.

j. As so few were saved from drowning, the Flood is taken to symbolise the O.T. purificatory rites that were, almost without exception, limited to an external 'bodily' purity, whereas the baptism by which a person is reborn can have no limits to its efficacy.

k. The 'pledge' (alternative translation 'the request') made by a convert at his baptism.

l. Add. (Vulg.) 'submitting to death so that we might inherit eternal life'.

4 a. Lit. 'rush with them to the same "unsafe up-pouring" (i.e. "flood of no-salvation" or "flood of debauchery")'; this dangerous flood destroys the good, unlike Noah's Flood that destroyed the wicked, cf. 3:20.

b. For the proclamation of the Good News to the dead cf. 3:19+. Some exegetes interpret this as meaning the 'spiritually dead', e.g. those who are persecuting the Christians to whom the letter is being written.

c. As in impromptu spiritual prophecies and in glossolalia, cf. 1 Co 14:2-19; Ac 11:27+ with Ac 2:4+.

d. This could possibly refer to liturgical service.

e. Add. 'and power'. Add. at end of verse 'the Spirit' blasphemed by them but honoured by you'.

5 a. These elders are to be identified with the 'presbyters' of Tt 1:5+, cf. note on 5:5 where 'elders' means 'older people'.

b. This can mean either that as an apostle, 1:1, he witnessed the Passion of Jesus, or that through his own sufferings he is a witness to Christ.

c. At the parousia, cf. 1:5,13; 4:7,17; 5:10.

d. Om. 'watch over it' and 'because God wants it'.

e. Lit. 'Nor as lordling it over those allocated (i.e. to you) but becoming examples of the flock'; var. 'Be examples to the flock'. Add. (Vulg.) 'with all your heart'.

f. Lit. 'Likewise younger people submit yourselves to older people'; the 'younger people' here are not adolescents as opposed to 'older people', cf. Tt 2:6, but the body of the faithful as opposed to the 'presbyters' or elders, 5:1+.

g. Add. (Vulg.) 'of his coming', cf. 2:12.

h. The word diabolos (lit. 'one who passes to another information against a third party') may be translated 'accuser'; it is applied to the devil in its legal sense of 'prosecutor'.

1 Th 2:12; 5:24 of all grace who called you to eternal glory in Christ will see that all is well again:

- 5 But to attain this,^g you will have to do your utmost yourselves, adding goodness to the faith that you have, understanding to your goodness, •self-control to your understanding, patience to your self-control, true devotion to your patience, kindness towards your fellow men to your devotion, and, to this kindness, love.
- 8 If you have a generous supply of these, they will not leave you ineffectual or unproductive: they will bring you to a real knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.
- 9 But without them^h a man is blind or else short-sighted; he has forgotten how his past sins were washed away. • Brothers, you have been called and chosen: work all the harder to justify it.ⁱ If you do all these things there is no danger that you will ever fall away. • In this way you will be granted admittance into the eternal kingdom^j of our Lord and saviour Jesus Christ.

c. 'glory' here refers to the miracles done by Jesus as a sign of his divinity, cf. Jn 1:14+, but in particular it refers to the transfiguration, 2 P 1:16-18. 'goodness' could refer to his powers both natural and miraculous.

 right to depend on prophecy and take it as a lamp for lighting a way Lk 1:78 Rv 2:28 + through the dark until the dawn comes and the morning star rises in your minds.
 At the same time, we must be most careful to remember that the interpretation 20 of scriptural prophecy is never a matter for the individual. •Why? Because no 21 2 Tm 3:16 prophecy ever came from man's initiative. When men spoke for God it was the 1 P 1:10-12 Holy Spirit that moved them.

 Rm 2:6 + ||Jude 8 punishment until the day of Judgement, •especially those who are governed by 10 their corrupt bodily desires and have no respect for authority.^d

The punishment to come

Such self-willed people with no reverence are not afraid of offending against ||Jude 9-10 the glorious ones,^e •but the angels in their greater strength and power make no 11 complaint or accusation against them in front of the Lord.^f •All the same, these 12
 Ps 49:12-14 people who only insult anything that they do not understand are not reasoning beings, but simply animals born to be caught and killed, and they will quite certainly destroy themselves by their own work of destruction, •and get their 13 reward of evil for the evil that they do. They are unsightly blots on your society:
 ||Jude 12 men whose only object is dissipation all day long,^g and they amuse themselves deceiving you even when they are your guests at a meal; •with their eyes always 14 looking for adultery,^h men with an infinite capacity for sinning, they will seduce any soul which is at all unstable. Greed is the one lesson their minds have learnt.

 Nb 22:28-33 until he was called to order for his faults. The dumb donkey put a stop to that 16
 ||Jude 12-13 prophet's madness when it talked like a man. •People like this are dried-up rivers, 17
 ||Jude 16 fogs swirling in the wind, and the dark underworld is the place reserved for them.
 With their high-flown talk, which is all hollow, they tempt back the ones who 18 have only just escaped from paganism,^j playing on their bodily desires with 19 debaucheries. •They may promise freedom^k but they themselves are slaves, slaves to corruption; because if anyone lets himself be dominated by anything, then 20 he is a slave to it; •and anyone who has escaped the pollution of the world once by coming to know our Lord and saviour Jesus Christ, and who then allows himself to be entangled^l by it a second time and mastered, will end up in a worse 21 state than he began in. •It would even have been better for him never to have learnt the way of holiness, than to know it and afterwards desert the holy rule 22 that was entrusted to him. •What he has done is exactly as the proverb rightly says: The dog goes back to his own vomit and: When the sow has been washed, it

THE FIRST LETTER OF JOHN

INTRODUCTION

The incarnate Word

- 1 1 Something which has existed since the beginning,
that we have heard,
and we have seen with our own eyes;
that we have watched
and touched with our hands:
the Word, who is life—
this is our subject.
- 2 That life was made visible:
we saw it and we are giving our testimony, telling you of the eternal life which was with the Father and has been made visible to us.
- 3 What we have seen and heard
we are telling you
so that you too may be in union^a with us, as we are in union
with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ.
- 4 We are writing this to you to make our own^b joy complete.

I. WALK IN THE LIGHT

- 5 This is what we have heard from him, and the message that we are announcing to you:
God is light; there is no darkness in him at all.
- 6 If we say that we are in union with God^c while we are living in darkness,
we are lying because we are not living the truth.
- 7 But if we live our lives in the light,
as he is in the light,
we are in union with one another,^d

1 a. Lit. 'have fellowship' (so also in v. 7). This union is the idea most central to John's mysticism, Jn 14:20; 15:1-6; 17:11,20-26; union between all Christians results from the union created by Christ between each Christian and God. This union is referred to in different ways: a Christian lives 'in' God and God lives 'in' him, 1 Jn 2:5,6,24,27; 3:6,24; 4:12,13,15, 16; a Christian is begotten by God, has new life from him, 2:29; 3:9; 4:7; 5:1,18; the Christian is from God, is his child, 2:16; 3:10; 4:4-6; 5:19; the Christian knows God, 2:3,13,14; 3:6; 4:7,8 (on knowledge and presence cf. Jn 14:17; 2 Jn 1-2). This union with God shows itself in a person's faith and in his love for the brothers,

cf. 1:7+.

b. 'our own', var. (Vulg.) 'your'.

c. Lit. 'him'. In this translation the pronoun has been rendered 'God', or 'Christ', where it seemed necessary for the sense.

d. God is in Christians, 1:3+, as the principle of their new life. Since God is light, 1:5, virtue, 2:29, and love, 4:8,16, whoever lives in union with God must live a life of light, virtue and love, and keep God's commandments, especially the commandment to love all human beings, 2:10,11; 3:10; 4:8,16. Faith and love are thus the visible evidence of true union with God, 1:6,7; 2:3,6; 3:6,10,17,24; 4:6,8,13,16,20.

and the blood of Jesus, his Son, purifies us from all sin.

First condition: break with sin

Pr 20:9 Qo 7:20 Si 8:5	If we say we have no sin in us, we are deceiving ourselves and refusing to admit the truth; ^a	8
Pr 28:13 + Jm 5:16 +	but if we acknowledge our sins, then God who is faithful and just will forgive our sins and purify us from everything that is wrong.	9
Ps 32:1 + Mt 6:12p	To say that we have never sinned is to call God a liar and to show that his word is not in us.	10
3:6+ 2	I am writing this, my children, to stop you sinning; but if anyone should sin, we have our advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ, who is just;	1
Heb 7:25; 8:6+ Jn 14:16 Ac 3:14+ 4:10 Rm 3:25+	he is the sacrifice that takes our sins away, and not only ours, but the whole world's.	2
Jn 4:42+

Second condition: keep the commandments, especially the law of love

1:3+, 7+ Jn 10:14+	We can be sure that we know God only by keeping his commandments.	3
4:20	Anyone who says, 'I know him', and does not keep his commandments, is a liar, refusing to admit the truth. ^a	4
Jn 14:21,23 3:17	But when anyone does obey what he has said, God's love comes to perfection in him. ^b We can be sure that we are in God	5
Jn 13:15,34 Ep 5:2 2 Th 3:7+	only when the one who claims to be living in him is living the same kind of life as Christ ^c lived.	6
3:11 Dt 6:5 Mt 22:37-40 2 Jn 5	My dear people, this is not a new commandment that I am writing to tell you, but an old commandment that you were given from the beginning, the original commandment which was the message brought to you.	7
Jn 13:34 +	Yet in another way, what I am writing to you, and what is being carried out in your lives as it was in his, is a new commandment;	8
Rm 13:12 Jn 1:5; 8:12	because the night is over and the real light is already shining.
	Anyone who claims to be in the light but hates his brother is still in the dark.	9
Jn 12:35-36 Pr 4:19 Qo 2:14	But anyone who loves his brother is living in the light and need not be afraid of stumbling; unlike the man who hates his brother and is in the darkness, not knowing where he is going, because it is too dark to see.	10
Mt 15:14p		11

Third condition: detachment from the world

- 12 I am writing to you, my own children, whose sins have already been forgiven through his name; 13 I am writing to you, fathers, who have come to know the one who has existed since the beginning;
I am writing to you, young men, who have already overcome the Evil One; 14 I have written^d to you, children, because you already know the Father;
I have written to you, fathers, because you have come to know the one
who has existed since the beginning;
I have written to you, young men, because you are strong and God's word has made its home in you, and you have overcome the Evil One.^e 15 You must not love this passing world or anything that is in the world.
The love of the Father cannot be in any man who loves the world, 16 because nothing the world has to offer
—the sensual body,
the lustful eye,
pride in possessions—^f
could ever come from the Father
but only from the world;
17 and the world, with all it craves for,
is coming to an end;
but anyone who does the will of God remains for ever.

and now several antichrists have already appeared;
we know from this that these are the last days.
19 Those rivals of Christ came out of our own number, but they had

e. This is possibly an allusion to the sect that called themselves 'spirituals', pneumatikoi, and who were the forerunners of the Gnostics of the 2nd c. who looked down on other people as being either psychikoi or hylikoi, i.e. either incompletely or not at all liberated from matter.

2 a. Add. 'of God'.

b. Lit. 'in him the love of God has been perfected (reached its goal)'; this refers more to God's love for us than to our love for him.

c. Lit. 'as That One': Jesus is repeatedly referred to in this way, 3:3,5,7,16; 4:17, cf. Jn 2:21; 19:35.

d. Var. (Vulg.) 'I am writing to you (now)'. The second clause ('I have written to you, fathers ... beginning') is omitted by Vulg.

e. The devil is still the Tempter as in Gn 3:1-6;

Jb 1:6+, who incites human beings to wickedness, 1 Jn 3:8+. Christians, however, having 'known' the Son, the Son lives in them, 1:3+, and 'clothes' them in light, virtue and love, 1:7+; and as this protects them from the devil, 5:18; Jn 17:15, and prevents them from sinning, 3:6,9, it constitutes their victory over the devil, 2:13,14, and over this transient world, 4:4; 5:4,5; cf. Jn 12:31; 14:30; 16:33; Mt 6:13.

f. Lit. 'the ostentation of living'.

g. 'an Antichrist' var. 'The Antichrist'.

h. Though they seemed to belong to the community, they lacked the spirit of Christ.

i. In the O.T. the chrism that was to anoint the Messiah (the 'anointed') was identified, Is 11:2; 61:1, with the (holy) Spirit or Breath of Yahweh. Christians share in this anointing that teaches them the true gnosis or knowledge.

j. Var. 'you know all things'.

2 P 1:12	It is not because you do not know the truth that I am writing to you	21
2 Jn 1:2	but rather because you know it already
3:19+	and know that no lie can come from the truth. ^k
	The man who denies that Jesus is the Christ—	22
	he is the liar,
2 Th 2:4+ 2 Jn 7	he is Antichrist;
	and he is denying the Father as well as the Son, ^l
	because no one who has the Father can deny the Son,	23
Jn 14:7-9; 17:6+	and to acknowledge the Son is to have the Father as well.
	Keep alive in yourselves what you were taught in the beginning: ^m	24 as long as what you were taught in the beginning is alive in you, 1:3+	you will live in the Son and in the Father;
Jn 5:24; 6: 40,68;17:2	and what is promised to you by his own promise	25
	is eternal life.
	This is all that I am writing to you about the people who are	26 trying to lead you astray.
22:20	But you have not lost the anointing that he gave you,	27 and you do not need anyone to teach you; ⁿ
Jr 31:34 Jn 14:26+	the anointing he gave teaches you everything;
	you are anointed with truth, not with a lie,
	and as it has taught you, so you must stay in him.
4:17	Live in Christ, then, my children,	28
2 Th 1:9	so that if he appears, we may have full confidence,
Mt 24:3+ 1 Co 15:23+	and not turn from him in shame
	at his coming.
1:3+,7+	You know that God is righteous—	29
	then you must recognise that everyone whose life is righteous has been begotten by him.

II. LIVE AS GOD'S CHILDREN

3	Think of the love that the Father has lavished on us,	1
Jn 1:12	by letting us be called God's children;
Rm 8:14-17, 37-39 Ep 1:5	and that is what we are. ^a
Jn 15:21; 16: 3; 17:25	Because the world refused to acknowledge him, therefore it does not acknowledge us.
	My dear people, we are already the children of God	2
	but what we are to be in the future has not yet been revealed; Rm 8:29 Ph 3:21 Col 3:4	all we know is, that when it is revealed
	we shall be like him because we shall see him as he really is.

First condition: break with sin

2:6 Mt 5:48+	Surely everyone who entertains this hope	3 must purify himself, must try to be as pure as Christ. ^b
	Anyone who sins at all	4
	breaks the law,
	because to sin is to break the law.
Jn 1:29+	Now you know that he appeared in order to abolish sin, ^c	5
Jn 8:46 Heb 7:26	and that in him there is no sin;
1:3+; 2:14+ Mt 7:18	anyone who lives in God does not sin, ^d	6 and anyone who sins
	has never seen him or known him.
	My children, do not let anyone lead you astray:	7

- to live a holy life
is to be holy just as he is holy;
8 to lead a sinful life is to belong to the devil,^e
since the devil was a sinner from the beginning.
It was to undo all that the devil has done that the Son of God appeared.
9 No one who has been begotten by God sins;
because God's seed^f remains inside him,
he cannot sin when he has been begotten by God.
- Second condition: keep the commandments, especially the law of love
- 10 In this way we distinguish the children of God from the children of the devil:
anybody not living a holy life
and not loving his brother is no child of God's.
11 This is the message
as you heard it from the beginning:
that we are to love one another; 12 not to be like Cain, who belonged to the Evil One and cut his brother's throat;
cut his brother's throat simply for this reason, that his own life was evil and his brother lived a good life.
13 You must not be surprised, brothers, when the world hates you; 14 we have passed out of death and into life,
and of this we can be sure because we love our brothers.
15 If you refuse to love, you must remain dead;
to hate your brother is to be a murderer,
and murderers, as you know, do not have eternal life in them.
16 This has taught us love—
that he gave up his life for us;
and we, too, ought to give up our lives for our brothers.
17 If a man who was rich enough in this world's goods saw that one of his brothers was in need,
but closed his heart to him,
how could the love of God be living in him?
18 My children,
our love is not to be just words or mere talk,
but something real and active;
19 only by this can we be certain^g

Probably a reference to Cerinthus who taught that Jesus was an ordinary human being who was 'possessed' by the Messiah at his baptism in the Jordan; this Messiah ascended before the Passion of Jesus. Another possible reference to his teaching is in 5:6—the belief in baptism ('water') but not the sacrificial death ('blood').

m. The apostolic teaching concerning the mystery of Christ.

n. Christians are taught by the apostles, 1:3,5; 2:7,24, but merely hearing what is said is not enough, the message must penetrate them and this it cannot do except through the grace of the Holy Spirit, cf. 2:20+.

3 a. Om. 'and that is what we are'; var. (Vulg.) 'and may we become precisely that'.

b. Lit. 'as That One'.

c. Lit. 'sins'; var. 'our sins'.

d. Because God, living in the Christian, is present with all his divine power for life. John is talking in general terms, ignoring people's momentary lapses, 1:7—2:1; all he is giving is a schematic contrast between the two 'worlds', cf. 3:9; 5:18.

e. Having used expressions like: of God, from Truth, child of God, to show how a Christian lives under the influence of God living in him, John now uses expressions like: of the devil, 3:8; of the Evil One, 3:12, from, or of, the impermanent world, 2:16; 4:5, children of the devil, to indicate those who live under the influence of the devil and allow themselves to be seduced by him.

f. The 'seed' of God could be a reference to Christ, cf. Ga 3:16; 1 Jn 5:13, but some commentators take it as a reference to the Spirit, cf. 2:20-27, or to the seed of divine life introduced into us by God.

g. Lit. 'we shall be certain'; var. (Vulg.) 'we are certain'.

2:21 + Jn 18:37 2 Jn 4	that we are children of the truth ^b

	we shall receive,
Jn 8:29	because we keep his commandments
	and live the kind of life that he wants.
	His commandments are these:	23
	that we believe in the name of his Son Jesus Christ
5:3	and that we love one another
Jn 13:34; 15:17	as he told us to.

1:7 + Jn 14:21-23 4:13	We know that he lives in us
	by the Spirit that he has given us.

Third condition: be on guard against the enemies of Christ and against the world

1 Co 12:10 +	4	It is not every spirit, my dear people, that you can trust;	1

		there are many false prophets, now, in the world.
		You can tell the spirits that come from God by this:	2 every spirit which acknowledges that Jesus the Christ has come in the flesh
		is from God;
		but any spirit which will not say this of Jesus ^a	3
2:22 2 Th 2:4 +		is not from God, but is the spirit of Antichrist, whose coming you were warned about.
		Well, now he is here, in the world.
2:14 +		Children,	4
		you have already overcome these false prophets, because you are from God and you have in you
3:20		one who is greater than anyone in this world;
3:8 +		as for them, they are of the world,	5
		and so they speak the language of the world and the world listens to them.
1:3 + Jn 8:47; 10: 26 +		But we ^b are children of God,	6
		and those who know God listen to us;
		those who are not of God refuse to listen to us.
3:10 Jn 14:17		This is how we can tell the spirit of truth from the spirit of falsehood. ^c

III. LOVE AND FAITH

Love

	My dear people,	7
	let us love one another
1 Th 4:9	since love comes from God
1:3 +	and everyone who loves is begotten by God and knows God.
1:7 +	Anyone who fails to love can never have known God,	8

	because God is love. ^d	4:16
9	God's love for us was revealed when God sent into the world his only Son so that we could have life through him;	Gn 22:12 Mt 21:37 Jn 3:16
10	this is the love I mean: not our love for God, but God's love for us when he sent his Son to be the sacrifice that takes our sins away.	Dt 7:8 Ws 6:16 Rm 8:31f Rm 5:8
11	My dear people, since God has loved us so much, we too should love one another.	2:2 Rm 3:25+
12	No one has ever seen God; ^e but as long as we love one another God will live in us and his love will be complete in us.	Mt 18:33 Ex 33:20+ Jn 1:18; 6:46 1:3+
13	We can know that we are living in him and he is living in us because he lets us share his Spirit. ^f	1:7+
14	We ourselves saw and we testify that the Father sent his Son as saviour of the world.	3:24 Rm 5:5+ Jn 3:17 Jn 4:42+
15	If anyone acknowledges that Jesus is the Son of God, God lives in him, and he in God.
16	We ourselves have known and put our faith in God's love towards ourselves. God is love and anyone who lives in love lives in God, and God lives in him.	Jn 17:6+ 4:7-8 1:3+
17	Love will come to its perfection in us when we can face the day of Judgement without fear; because even in this world we have become as he is.	2:28 Rm 8:15 Jm 2:13 2:6+; 3:2-3
18	In love there can be no fear, but fear is driven out by perfect love: because to fear is to expect punishment, and anyone who is afraid is still imperfect in love. ^g	2 Th 3:7+ 2 Tm 1:7
19	We are to love, then, because he loved us first.	4:9-10
20	Anyone who says, 'I love God', and hates his brother,	2:4

h. In the O.T. 'truth' (contrasting with unrighteousness and evil) often means the rightness of a life morally well lived in accordance with the will of Yahweh, in fidelity to Yahweh. This is the way John uses the word. As there is a double commandment to fidelity and love, 3:23, people are said to 'belong to truth' if they believe, 2:21,22, and love, 3:19; they are said to live 'in union with (walk according to) truth' 2 Jn 4-6, 3 Jn 3-6, to 'do the truth', Jn 3:21 (to perform or act it, as opposed to committing sin, doing wrong), cf. Jn 18:37; 4:24.

i. The person whose conscience (lit. 'heart') reproaches him, will find that God as a judge is both more acute and more lenient than his conscience, providing (it is understood) that charity has been practised. Another translation could be 'In the presence of God we shall prove to our conscience, if it has been accusing us, that God is greater than our conscience is, and that he knows everything'.

4 a. Var. (Vulg.) and strongly supported 'which dissolves (or breaks, splits, divides) Jesus'.

b. 'we' i.e. the authorised preachers, and particularly the apostles.

c. Lit. 'From this we know the spirit of truth and the spirit of error'; the theme of the two spirits, which also occurs in Essene (Qumran) literature, was destined to have a considerable influence on early Christian thought. All people are torn between the two 'worlds', cf. 3:8+; 3:19+, and in varying degrees all are inspired by the spirit of each of these 'worlds'. For John the spirit of truth comes from God, 3:24; 4:13, cf. Jn 14:26+.

d. The idea that God loves Israel was one of the great poetic inspirations of the O.T., cf. Is 54:8+. The fact that God sent his only Son to save the world proves that God is love.

e. This is directed against the pneumatikoi who held that by intuition a human being can 'reach' God.

f. It is God himself who through his Spirit produces charity in us.

g. It is impossible to combine the love of a son with the fear of a slave.

1 P 1:8
Mt 22:36-40
Jn 14:15,21;

keeping his commandments;
and his commandments are not difficult, because anyone who has been begotten by God has already overcome the world;
this is the victory over the world—
our faith.

Faith

Who can overcome the world?

5

Only the man who believes that Jesus is the Son of God:^b
Jesus Christ who came by water and blood,^c

6

Jn 19:34

Jn 4:1+

not with water only,
but with water and blood;
with the Spirit as another witness—since the Spirit is the truth—

Jn 1:33 +
2:20,27
Jn 14:26 +

so that there are three witnesses,^d
the Spirit, the water and the blood, and all three of them agree.^e

7

8

We accept the testimony of human witnesses, but God's testimony is much greater,
and this is God's testimony,
given as evidence for his Son.

9

Everybody who believes in the Son of God has this testimony inside him;

10

Jn 3:33

and anyone who will not believe God is making God out to be a liar, because he has not trusted
the testimony God has given about his Son.

Jn 3:11+

This is the testimony:

11

God has given us eternal life and this life is in his Son;

anyone who has the Son has life,

12

anyone who does not have the Son does not have life.

Conclusion

I have written all this to you

13 so that you who believe in the name of the Son of God

may be sure that you have eternal life.

Prayer for sinners

Mt 7:7p

We are quite confident that if we ask him for anything,

14

- and it is in accordance with his will,
he will hear us;
15 and, knowing that whatever we may ask, he hears us, we know that we have already been granted what we asked of him.
16 If anybody sees his brother commit a sin that is not a deadly sin, he has only to pray, and God will give life to the sinner
—not those who commit a deadly sin;
for there is a sin that is death,^g and I will not say that you must pray about that.
17 Every kind of wrong-doing is sin, but not all sin is deadly.^h

Summary of the letter

- 18 We know that anyone who has been begotten by God does not sin,
because the begotten Son of Godⁱ protects him,
and the Evil One does not touch him.
19 We know that we belong to God, but the whole world lies in the power of the Evil One.
20 We know, too, that the Son of God has come,
and has given us the power to know the true God.^j
We are in the true God,
as we are in his Son, Jesus Christ.
This is the true God,
this is eternal life.
21 Children, be on your guard against false gods.^k

5 a. To believe the truth is to be begotten by God and to love God as Father and so also to love all God's other children.

b. This argument is based on two previous ones; whoever believes is begotten by God, v. 1, and to be begotten by God is to be the conqueror of the 'world', v. 4.

c. The water and the blood that came from his side when Jesus was pierced on the cross, cf. Jn 19:34 and note. These were the 'evidence', for the original eyewitnesses, but they are also the witness for all Christians as the type of the baptism and the sacrificial death of Jesus which are operative in their own lives. The three components of the new life 'in Christ' are: the death (the blood), the resurrection, baptism (the water) and the gift of the Spirit.

d. Vulg. vv. 7-8 read as follows 'There are three witnesses in heaven: the Father the Word and the Spirit, and these three are one; there are three witnesses on earth: the Spirit the water and the blood'. The words in italics (not in any of the early Greek MSS, or any of the early translations, or in the best MSS of the Vulg. itself) are probably a gloss that has crept into the text.

e. See note c on v. 6. The three witnesses support each other; the water of baptism is accompanied by the Spirit, and the Spirit came through the 'blood' of the death of Jesus. The writer probably intends another warning here, against the doctrine of Cerinthus—that the Spirit which came on Jesus at his baptism (water) left him before his death (blood).

f. As in the gospel, cf. Jn 21, the conclusion is followed by a postscript.

g. The sin against the Spirit, against truth, cf. Mt 12:31+.

h. Lit. 'and there is a sin that is not to death'; Vulg. omits 'not'.

i. Jesus, cf. Jn 1:13, 18.

j. Lit. 'the True'; he is the only true God and the only one known for what he is in truth, i.e. Life and Love.

k. Lit. 'idols', as in paganism, but also the 'idols of the heart' (Qumran) that deflect human beings from their faith and true love. Vulg. adds 'Amen'.

THE SECOND LETTER OF JOHN

1 P 5:13 From the Elder:^a my greetings to the Lady, the chosen one,^b and to her 1
3 Jn 1 children, she whom I love in the truth—and I am not the only one, for so do all
1 Jn 2:21 who have come to know the truth—•because of the truth that lives in us and will 2
Jn 14:17 be with us for ever. •In our life of truth and love, we shall have grace, mercy and 3 peace from God the Father and from Jesus Christ, the Son of the Father.

The law of love

Phm 7 It has given me great joy to find that your children have been living the life of 4
3 Jn 3 truth^c as we were commanded by the Father. •I am writing now, dear lady, not to 5
1 Jn 3:19+ give you any new commandment, but the one which we were given at the begin-
1 Jn 2:7-11 ning, and to plead: let us love one another.
1 Jn 5:3 To love is to live according to his commandments: this is the commandment 6 which you have heard since the beginning,^d to live a life of love.

The enemies of Christ

1 Jn 2:18 There are many deceivers about in the world, refusing to admit that Jesus 7
1 Jn 4:2-3 Christ has come in the flesh. They are the Deceiver; they are the Antichrist.
1 Jn 2:22 Watch yourselves, or all our work^e will be lost and not get the reward it deserves. 8
Jude 4 If anybody does not keep within the teaching of Christ^f but goes beyond it,^g he 9 doctrine, you must not receive him in your house or even give him a greeting.

3 Jn 13f To greet him would make you a partner in his wicked work. 11
1 Jn 1:4 There are several things I have to tell you, but I have thought it best not to 12 trust them to paper and ink. I hope instead to visit you and talk to you personally, so that our joy^h may be complete.
Greetings to you from the children of your sister,ⁱ the chosen one. 13

a. The elders were the leaders in each community, cf. Tt 1:5+. Here the title refers to John the apostle, the outstanding leader of the communities of Asia Minor.

b. The 'Chosen Lady' or 'Sovereign Lady', figurative reference to one of the local churches under the jurisdiction of the Elder.

c. Lit. 'walk in the truth'.

d. Or 'you must obey that commandment as you learnt it at the beginning'.

e. Var. (Vulg.) 'your work'.

f. Teaching either by, or about, Christ.

g. Teaching pure speculation as apostolic doctrine, cf. Tt 3:9; 1 Tm 2:16, etc.

h. Var. (Vulg.) 'your joy'.

i. The church (perhaps Ephesus) from which the letter is being written.

3 JOHN

THE THIRD LETTER OF JOHN

- 1 From the Elder: greetings to my dear friend Gaius, whom I love in the truth. 2 Jn 1+
2 My dear friend, I hope everything is going happily with you and that you are as 3 well physically as you are spiritually. •It was a great joy to me when some brothers 2 Jn 4 came and told of your faithfulness to the truth, and of your life in the truth.
4 It is always my greatest joy^a to hear that my children are living according to 1 Jn 3:19+ the truth.
5 My friend, you have done faithful work in looking after these brothers, even 6 though they were complete strangers to you.^b •They are a proof to the whole Church of your charity and it would be a very good thing if you could help them 7 on their journey in a way that God would approve. •It was entirely for the sake of the name^c that they set out, without depending on the pagans for anything;
8 it is our duty to welcome men of this sort and contribute our share to their work Mt 18:5p
Jn 8:24+
Mt 10:10,41
1 Tm 5:18
for the truth.

Beware of the example of Diotrephes

- 9 I have written a note^d for the members of the church, but Diotrephes, who 10 seems to enjoy being in charge of it, refuses to accept us.^e •So if I come, I shall tell everyone how he has behaved, and about the wicked accusations he has been circulating against us. As if that were not enough, he not only refuses to welcome our brothers, but prevents the other people who would have liked to from doing 11 it, and expels them from the church. •My dear friend, never follow such a bad example, but keep following the good one; anyone who does what is right is a 1 Jn 1:3+ 7+
child of God, but the person who does what is wrong has never seen God.

Commendation of Demetrius

- 12 Demetrius^f has been approved by everyone, and indeed by the truth itself. 1 Jn 5:6
Jn 19:35;
21:24
We too will vouch for him and you know that our testimony is true.

Epilogue

- 13 There were several things I had to tell you but I would rather not trust them 2 Jn 12
14 to pen and ink. •However, I hope to see you soon and talk to you personally.
15 Peace be with you; greetings from your friends; greet each of our friends by name.

a. 'Joy', var. (Vulg.) 'privilege'.

b. Probably missionaries sent by the apostle to the communities of Asia Minor.

c. The name of the Lord; i.e. the Good News or gospel which carries the name of Jesus Christ to the pagans.

d. Perhaps 2 Jn.

e. Lit. 'Diotrephes loving being (or anxious to be) their leader is not receiving us'; by rejecting John's missionaries they reject John himself.

f. Either a leading member of that community or one of the missionaries recommended to Gaius.

THE LETTER OF JUDE

Address

Ac 12:17+ From Jude, servant of Jesus Christ and brother of James; to those who are 1 called, to those who are dear to^a God the Father and kept safe for Jesus Christ, 2 P 1:2 wishing you all mercy and peace and love. 2

The reason for this letter

My dear friends, at a time when I was eagerly looking forward to writing to 3 you about the salvation that we all share,^b I have been forced^c to write to you Ac 9:13+ now and appeal to you to fight hard for the faith which has been once and for all
||2 P 2:1 entrusted to the saints. •Certain people have infiltrated among you, and they 4 are the ones you had a warning about, in writing, long ago, when they were Ga 5:13 condemned^d for denying all religion, turning the grace of our God into immorality,
1 P 2:16 and rejecting our only Master and Lord, Jesus Christ.^e
1 Jn 4:1
2 Jn 10

The false teachers: the certainty of their punishment

1 Co 6:3 I should like to remind you—though you have already learnt it once and for 5
||2 P 1:12 all^f—how the Lord^g rescued the nation from Egypt, but afterwards he still
Nb 14:26-35 destroyed the men who did not trust him. •Next let me remind you of the angels 6
1 Co 10:5 who had supreme authority but did not keep it and left their appointed sphere;^h
||2 P 2:4 he has kept them down in the dark, in spiritual chains, to be judged on the great
Gn 19 day. •The fornication of Sodom and Gomorrah and the other nearby towns was 7
2 P 2: 6-9 equally unnatural,ⁱ and it is a warning to us that they are paying for their crimes
Mt 10:15p in eternal fire.

Their violent language

||2 P 2:10-12 Nevertheless, these people^j are doing the same: in their delusions they not 8 only defile their bodies and disregard authority,^k but abuse the glorious angels Dt 34:6+ as well. •Not even the archangel Michael, when he was engaged in argument 9
Dn 10:13+ with the devil about the corpse of Moses,^l dared to denounce him in the language
Zc 3:2+ of abuse; all he said was, 'Let the Lord correct you'. •But these people abuse 10 anything they do not understand; and the only things they do understand—just by nature^m like unreasoning animals—will turn out to be fatal to them.

Their vicious behaviour

Gn 4:8 May they get what they deserve, because they have followed Cain; they have 11
||2 P 2:15 rushed to make the same mistake as Balaam and for the same reward; they have
1 Jn 3:12 rebelled just as Korah did—and share the same fate. •They are a dangerous 12
Nb 16 obstacleⁿ to your community meals, coming for the food and quite shamelessly
P 23:14 only looking after themselves. They are like clouds blown about by the winds and ||2 P 2:13, bringing no rain, or like barren trees which are then uprooted in the winter and so
17-18

- 13 are twice dead; •like wild sea waves capped with shame as if with foam; or like Is 57:70 14 shooting stars^o bound for an eternity of black darkness. •It was with them in mind that Enoch, the seventh patriarch from Adam, made his prophecy when he said, 'I tell you, the Lord will come with his saints in their tens of thousands, Dn 7:10 15 to pronounce judgement on all mankind and to sentence the wicked for all the Rv 5:11 wicked things they have done, and for all the defiant things said against him by 16 irreligious sinners'.^p •They are mischief-makers, grumblers governed only by ||2 P 2:18 their own desires,^q with mouths full of boastful talk, ready with flattery for other Dn 7:8,20 people when they see some advantage in it. Lv 19:15

A warning

- 17 But remember, my dear friends, what the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ ||2 P 3:2-3 18 told you to expect. •'At the end of time,' they told you 'there are going to be 1 Tm 4:1+ people who sneer at religion and follow nothing but their own desires for 19 wickedness.' •These unspiritual and selfish people are nothing but mischief- 1 Co 15:44+ makers.^r

The duties of love

- 20 But you, my dear friends, must use your most holy faith as your foundation 1 Co 3:9-17
 21 and build on that, praying in the Holy Spirit; •keep yourselves within the love Ep 2:20-22 of God and wait for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ to give you eternal life.
 22 When there are some who have doubts, reassure them; •when there are some 23 to be saved from the fire, pull them out; but there are others^s to whom you must be kind with great caution, keeping your distance even from outside clothing which is contaminated by vice.

Doxology

- 24 Glory be to him who can keep you from falling and bring you safe to his ||2 P 3:14
 25 glorious presence, innocent and happy.^t •To God, the only God, who saves us through Jesus Christ our Lord, be the glory, majesty, authority and power, which Rm 16:25-27+ he had before time began, now and for ever. Amen. Rv 5:13

a. 'To those who are', var. 'to the nations who are'.
 'dear to'; var. 'made holy by'.

b. 'the salvation that we all share'; Vulg. 'your salvation'.

c. By the danger these heretics represent.

d. Lit. 'For certain men crept in who long ago have been written beforehand for this judgement'; var. 'for this sin'.

e. Var. 'rejecting God, the only Master and our Lord Jesus Christ'.

f. The faith entrusted 'once and for all', v. 3, to the saints must never be changed.

g. God the Father, cf. 2 P 2:4. Var. (Vulg.) 'Jesus', i.e. a reference to Christ in his divine pre-existence, cf. 1 Co 10:4.

h. They let themselves be seduced by the 'daughters of men', Gn 6:1-2; the subject is elaborated in the Book of Enoch.

i. Lit. 'Like Sodom... in the same way fornicating and going after alien flesh'. They lusted not after human beings, but after the strangers who were angels, Gn 19:1-11. The apocryphal Testament of the Twelve Patriarchs, like Jude 6-7, also compares the sin of the angels with the sin of the Sodomites.

j. The heretics living at the same time as Jude. Om. (Vulg.) 'in their delusions'.

k. 'disregard authority', lit. 'despise sovereignty'; var. 'sovereignties', i.e. the angels, cf. Ep 1:21; Col 1:16.

l. Almost certainly a reference to the apocryphal Assumption of Moses.

m. Their lack of knowledge results from the fact that they do not possess the Spirit, they know nothing except what they have learnt through their unaided natural powers.

n. Lit. 'They are reefs to your agapēs' (cf. 1 Co 11:20+). 'reefs': var. (Vulg.) 'blots'. 'agapēs': var. 'deceits', cf. 2 P 2:13. These heretics were still taking part in the life of the Church; all that had happened to them so far was that they had been noticed.

o. In Jewish apocrypha, e.g. the Book of Enoch, 'stars' often stand for 'angels'.

p. Enoch 1:9, probably quoted from memory.

q. Suggested by Enoch 5:5.

r. Lit. 'There are the ones who make divisions (Vulg. 'who separate themselves', i.e. from the Church), psychikoi not having the Spirit'. The heretics are like 'animals' because they act irrationally or on impulse, v. 10; the central human quality they lack is openness to the Spirit, cf. Rm 1:9+.

s. 'When there are some who have doubts, be kind to them, save them, pull them out of the fire; but there are others...'

t. Vulg. adds 'at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ'.

THE BOOK OF REVELATION

INTRODUCTION TO THE BOOK OF REVELATION

The Greek title of this book is 'Apocalypse of John', and the word 'apocalypse' is a transliteration of the Greek word for revelation: any writing under this title claims to include a revelation of hidden things, imparted by God, and particularly a revelation of events hidden in the future. It is not easy to draw an exact dividing line between prophecy and apocalypse, and the writers of apocalyptic are in some ways the successors of the prophets; but we can at least make the distinction that the Old Testament prophets characteristically received the message by 'hearing the word of God' and passed it on by word of mouth, whereas the author of a written apocalypse was given his revelation in a vision and passed it on in writing.

The language of apocalyptic writing is richly symbolic, and the importance of the visions which are described is never in their immediate literal meaning. It can be taken as a rule that every element in this kind of writing has symbolic value—persons, places, animals, actions, objects, parts of the body, numbers and measurements, stars, constellations, colours and garments—and if we are not to misunderstand or distort the writer's message, we must appreciate the imagery at its true value and do our best to translate the symbols back into the ideas which he intended them to convey. There are parts of the text in which this will involve our distinguishing a direct allegorical interpretation of the images that are used. There are other parts, however, in which no single interpretation can be confidently adopted, since a single group of images will be found to draw its meaning from various different associations.

Apocalyptic writing became very popular in some Jewish circles (including the Essenes of Qumran) in the two centuries before Christ. The visions of prophets like Ezekiel and Zechariah paved the way, and apocalypse as a literary form was already fully developed by the time of Daniel and in the many apocryphal writings about the beginning of the Christian era. The New Testament includes only one apocalypse; its author says he was called John, 1:9, and that at the time of writing he was an exile for his Christian faith on the island of Patmos. A tradition as early as Justin and widespread by the end of the 2nd century (Irenaeus, Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian, the Canon of Muratori) identified this John with the apostle, author of the fourth gospel. On the other hand, it is almost certain that the churches of Syria, Cappadocia and even Palestine did not include the Revelation in the canon of scripture until the 5th century; evidently they did not believe it to be the work of an apostle. At the beginning of the 3rd century a priest of Rome, Caius by name, attributed it to Cerinthus the heretic, though this may have been merely an attempt to justify his attack on it. Internal evidence shows that the Revelation of John has some affinity with the other Johannine writings, but as it is so sharply distinguished from them by language, style, and some theological positions, notably its view of the parousia, it is impossible to identify the author of Revelation as it stands with the author of the rest of the Johannine literature. In spite of that, Revelation is clearly Johannine in inspiration: it was written inside the apostle's immediate circle and is pervaded by his doctrine. Of its canonicity there can be no doubt; as for its date the most common opinion is that it was written in the reign of Domitian, about 95; others, with some justification, believe that parts of it at least were composed as early as Nero's time, shortly before 70.

Whatever its precise date, we cannot understand the Revelation without taking into account the historical conditions that gave birth to it. It is first and foremost a tract for the times, like the apocalypses (particularly Daniel) that preceded it and on which it draws. It was written during a period of disturbance and bitter persecution to increase the hope and determination of the infant Church. Jesus had said, 'Be brave: I have conquered the world', Jn 16:33; how therefore could God permit this mortal attack on his own Church? John's answer begins by recalling the classical themes of the prophets, notably that of the 'Great Day' of Yahweh (cf. Am 5:18+). When the Chosen People had been enslaved to the Assyrians, Chaldaeans, and Greeks, when they had been scattered abroad and nearly annihilated by persecution, the prophets had promised: the day is coming, and soon, when God will liberate his people from their oppressors, and restore their independence, and help them to conquer their enemies after he has punished them and brought them to the point of extinction. When John wrote the Revelation, the Church, the new chosen race, had just been decimated by persecution, ch. 13; 6:10-11; 16:6; 17:6; Rome and its empire (the Beast) was only a tool, but a tool wielded by Satan, ch. 12; 13:2,4, the great and only real enemy of Christ and his people. In the opening vision John describes God as emperor, enthroned in heaven; he is master of human destiny, ch. 4, and to the Lamb he gives the scroll that foretells the doom of the persecutors, ch. 5; the vision then proclaims a foreign invasion (the Parthians) and its familiar concomitants, war, famine, plague, ch. 6. During this, God's faithful will be preserved, 7:1-8; cf. 14:1-5, and eventually rejoice triumphantly in heaven, 7:9-17; cf. 15:1-5. God, however, wants to save their enemies as well, so instead of destroying them immediately, he warns them, as he had warned Egypt and its Pharaoh, by a series of plagues, ch. 8-9; cf. 16. The persecutors are only hardened in their evil determination, and God is forced to destroy them, ch. 17. Their aim was to corrupt the world and get it to worship Satan (an allusion to emperor-worship in pagan Rome). After this comes a lament over fallen Babylon (Rome), ch. 18, and hymns of victory in heaven, 19:1-10. There is a second vision of the destruction of the Beast (persecuting Rome), this time by Christ in glory, 19:11-21, that begins an era of prosperity for the Church, 20:1-6, which is to end in a new assault by Satan, 20:7f, followed by the annihilation of the Enemy, the resurrection and judgement of the dead, 20:11-15, and ultimately by the definitive establishment of the kingdom of perfect happiness in heaven when death itself has been destroyed, 21:1-8. A final vision glances back to the period just before this consummation, and describes the beauty of the new Jerusalem, or Church, on earth, 21:9f.

The significance of the Revelation is wider than this primary, basic, meaning derived by historical interpretation: the book is interested in the unchanging realities, to which faith is always open in any period of history. God's promise to be 'with his people', cf. Ex 25:8+, protecting them and saving them, had always been the foundation of their confidence in him in the Old Testament, and it is this presence that has now been perfected by the marriage of God and his new chosen people in the person of his Son, Immanuel (God-with-us). The promise of the risen Christ, 'I shall be with you always, yes, to the end of time', is what gives life to the Church, Mt 28:20. As a result, those who are faithful to Jesus have nothing to fear: they may suffer a while for him but in the end they will triumph over Satan and his schemes. The Revelation is an epic of Christian hope, the victory song of the persecuted Church.

As it stands, the text of Revelation presents many difficulties: repetitions, interruptions in the sequence of visions, and passages obviously divorced from their context. Many explanations for this have been suggested: that Revelation was compiled from diverse sources, that whole chapters have been accidentally misplaced, etc. The following hypothesis was first suggested in 1949 (cf. Revue Biblique, 1949, 507-541); it is that the strictly prophetic part of Revelation, ch. 4-22, is made up of two different apocalypses written by the same author at different times and later fused into one by some author. It is suggested that the two originally separate texts are as follows:

	Text I	Text II
Prologue: The small book		10:1-2a, 3-4, 8-11
Satan attacks the Church	12:1-6, 13-17	12:7-12
The Beast attacks the Church		13

The letters to the seven churches, ch. 1-3, which were certainly intended to be read as an introduction to the two prophecies, must originally also have existed as separate text.

THE BOOK OF REVELATION

Prologue

1 This is the revelation given by God to Jesus Christ^a so that he could tell his 1 servants^b about the things which are now to take place very soon; he sent his 2 angel to make it known^c to his servant John, •and John has written down 2 everything he saw and swears it is the word of God guaranteed by Jesus Christ.^d Happy^e the man who reads this prophecy, and happy those who listen to him, if 3 they treasure all that it says, because the Time^f is close.

I. THE LETTERS TO THE CHURCHES OF ASIA

Address and greeting^g

From John, to the seven churches of Asia: grace and peace to you from him 4 who is, who was, and who is to come,^h from the seven spirits in his presence before his throne, •and from Jesus Christ, the faithful witness, the First-born from the 5 dead, *the Ruler of the kings of the earth.*ⁱ He loves us and has washed away^j our sins with his blood, •and made us a line of kings, priests to serve^k his God and 6 Father; to him, then, be glory and power for ever and ever. Amen. •It is he who 7 is coming on the clouds; everyone will see him, even those who pierced him, and all the races of the earth will mourn over him. This is the truth. Amen.
'I am the Alpha and the Omega'^l says the Lord God, who is, who was, and who 8 is to come, the Almighty.

The beginning of the vision

My name is John, and through our union in Jesus I am your brother and share 9 your sufferings, your kingdom, and all you endure. I was on the island of Patmos^m for having preached God's word and witnessed for Jesus; •it was the Lord's day 10 and the Spirit possessed me, and I heard a voice behind me, shouting like a trumpet, •'Write down all that you see in a book, and send it to the seven 11 churches of Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamum, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia and Laodicea'. •I turned round to see who had spoken to me, and when I turned 12
I saw seven golden lamp-stands •and, surrounded by them, a figure like a Son 13 *of man,*ⁿ dressed in a long robe tied at the waist with a golden girdle. •His head 14 and his hair were white as white wool or as snow, his eyes like a burning flame, his feet like burnished bronze when it has been refined in a furnace, and his voice 15 like the sound of the ocean. •In his right hand he was holding seven stars, out of 16 his mouth came a sharp sword, double-edged, and his face was like the sun shining with all its force.

When I saw him, I fell in a dead faint at his feet, but he touched me with his 17 right hand and said, 'Do not be afraid; it is I, the First and the Last; I am the have seen in my right hand, and of the seven golden lamp-stands is this: the seven stars are the angels^r of the seven churches, and the seven lamp-stands are the seven churches themselves.

 Mt 13:9
 22:2
 Gn 2:9
 Pr 3:18

1 a. Lit. 'A revelation of Jesus Christ which God gave to him'.

b. 'His servants' may possibly be the prophets in the early Church, cf. 10:7; 11:18; 22:6; Ac 11:27+; and Am 3:7, among whom John includes himself, cf. 19:10 and 22:9; but the same word is regularly used for all followers and disciples of Christ and 19:10 suggests that no firm distinction is made between 'prophets' and other 'witnesses to Jesus' such as evangelists and martyrs.

c. Lit. 'He conveyed through signs sent by his messenger': ambiguous, the angel could be sent by Jesus, cf. 19:10; 22:6-20, or by God, in which case the angel would be the Messiah himself, cf. 14:14,15 and 1:13.

d. Lit. 'the Word of God and the witness of Jesus Christ'.

e. First of the seven beatitudes in the Apocalypse, cf. 14:13; 16:15; 19:9; 20:6; 22:7,14.

f. When Jesus returns; cf. 3:11; 22:10,12,20 and 1:7.

g. This section makes use of many O.T. allusions to suggest the King-Messiah's glorious return, solemn enthronement and future reign over God's people in fulfilment of the promise made to David. This is basically what the whole book is about.

h. Common title in Jewish literature, developed from the name revealed to Moses: 'I am who am', Ex 3:14+.

i. The Messiah is the 'witness' to the promise that was made to David, 2 S 7:1+; Ps 89; Is 55:3-4; Zc 12:8, both in his person and in his work; as he fulfils this promise he is the efficacious Word, God's 'Yes', Rv 3:14; 19:11,13; 2 Co 1:20. Not only is he heir to David, Rv 5:5; 22:6, but by his resurrection he is the 'First-born', Col 1:18, who will reign over the universe when his enemies have been destroyed, Dn 7:14; Rv 19:16.

j. Var. 'released us from'.

k. Lit. 'He made us a kingdom and priests for': those who turn to the Messiah and whose sins he forgives, vv. 5 and 7, will be a family of king-priests, Ex 19:6+; kings because they will rule over all the nations, Dn 7:22,27; Is 54:11-17; Zc 12:1-3; cf. Rv 2:26; 5:10; 20:6; 22:5; priests because in union with Jesus the messianic Priest they will consecrate the universe to God in a sacrifice of praise.

l. The beginning and end, originator and goal, of all things: Is 41:4; 44:6; Rv 21:6; 22:13. 'the Almighty': 'pantokrator' lit. 'the All-Ruler', a stock rendering of 'Lord of Hosts' ('Yahweh Sabaoth').

m. Deported there for being a Christian proselytiser. Patmos (10 miles × 5 miles) was used by Romans as a penal colony.

n. The Messiah as eschatological Judge (cf. Dn 7:13, also 10:6). The long robe symbolises his priesthood (cf. Ex 28:4; 29:5; Zc 3:4), the golden girdle his royalty, cf. 1 M 10:89, the white hair his eternity (cf. Dn 7:9), the burning eyes (to probe minds and 'hearts', cf. Rv 2:23) his divine knowledge, the feet of bronze (cf. Dn 2:31-45) his permanence; the brightness of his legs and face, and the strength of his voice symbolise the fear inspired by his majesty. In his power (his 'right hand') he holds the seven churches (the 'stars', cf. v. 20); he is prepared to sentence faithless Christians to death (the 'double-edged sword'), cf. 19:15+; 2:16; and Is 49:2; Ege 6:17; Heb 4:12. One or other of his attributes as Judge is used, at the beginning of each of the seven letters, to suggest the situation of the particular church addressed.

o. The one who has life 'in himself', cf. Jn 5:21,26; 1:4.

p. Lit. 'death and Hades'. Hades was the place of the dead, the Gk word corresponding to the sheol of the O.T., cf. Nb 16:33+. Christ has the power to release souls from Hades, Jn 5:26-28.

q. 'present happenings' refers to the letters of ch. 2 and 3; 'things that are still to come' the revelations of ch. 4-22.

r. Jews held that not only the physical universe was controlled by angels, cf. Rv 7:1; 14:18; 16:5, but also human beings (both individuals and communities), cf. Ex 23:20+. Each church here is thought of as under the control of an angel appointed to be responsible for it.

2 a. Metropolis of the province of Asia; the other six churches of the letters that follow were located in the same province.

b. Probably the Nicolaitans of v. 6, see 2:15+.

c. Allusion to some previous persecution.

d. Ephesus will cease to be the religious capital.

e. Var. (Vulg.) 'the paradise of my God'.

1:17-18+ the First and the Last, who was dead and has come to life again: •I know the trials 9
 Is 44:6; you have had, and how poor you are—though you are rich^f—and the slanderous and did not disown your faith in me even when my faithful witness, Antipas, was

Nevertheless, I have one or two complaints to make: some of you are 14 to idols. •I have given her time to reform but she is not willing to change her 24 adulterous life. •Now I am consigning her to bed, and all her partners in adultery 25 to troubles that will test them severely, unless they repent of their practices;^o 26

f. Smyrna’s spiritual wealth contrasts with her poverty.

g. Henceforth the Church of Christ is the true Israel, cf. Ga 6:16; Rm 9:8.

h. I.e. of short duration.

i. Emperor-worship, as well as other forms of paganism, flourished in Pergamum, and is always represented in Rv as the worship of Satan, ‘the prince of this world’.

j. According to one Jewish tradition, cf. Nb 31:16, Balaam suggested to Balak that he should persuade Israel to idolatry with the help of the women of Moab, Nb 25:1-3.

k. The prophets used this as a common figure of speech for idolatry, religious infidelity, cf. Ho 1:2+.

l. This doctrine had some affinity with the errors already attacked by Paul in the Captivity Letters (notably in Col); it heralded the gnostic speculations of the 2nd cent., but also tolerated a measure of compromise with pagan cults, e.g. participation in sacred banquets, cf. v. 14.

m. The perspective, as in the other six letters, is eschatological. The manna (hidden, together with the ark, by Jeremiah, 2 M 2:4-8) will be brought out as the food of those who are saved in the heavenly kingdom, cf. 15:8+. The white stone (white is the colour of triumph and joy) alludes to various ancient usages (badges of honour, tablets of discharge or admission) and symbolises entry into the kingdom. The ‘new name’ signifies the Christian’s spiritual rebirth.

n. ‘Jezebel’; var. ‘your wife Jezebel’. A self-styled prophetess of the Nicolaitan sect; her name is symbolic, cf. 2 K 9:22.

o. Var. ‘her practices’.

p. Those who follow her teaching.

q. The doctrine of the Nicolaitans, so called either by the heretics themselves, or, sarcastically, by their opponents, cf. 1 Co 2:10.

r. The true faith in Christ.

s. In Eastern literature the Morning Star is both the symbol of dominion and power and also, as apparently here, of resurrection and triumphant glory. Christ reigns because he rose from the dead, cf. Ac 2:36+; Rm 1:4+; Rv 1:5+, and his faithful will share his reign as they share the glory of his resurrection, on which his worldwide empire is based. In the Roman liturgy, this theme is introduced into the Exultet of the Easter Vigil.

3 a. These seven spirits of God are seven angels.

b. A symbol of purity but also of victory and joy. c. Perhaps the opportunity of spreading the Good News in fresh areas, for which this is a common metaphor, cf. Ac 14:27+, and Paul’s letters.

d. Lit. ‘all living on the earth’, i.e. the pagan world, as always in Rv. This ‘testing’ is therefore the plagues of 8-9 and 16, from which God’s servants will be preserved, cf. 7:1f.

e. The return of Christ in glory.

f. Cf. 2:17; 14:1; 19:12,13; and Is 56:5; 62:2; 65:15. Cf. Is 1:26+.

g. Either a name that will not be known until the parousia, or the name ‘Word’, cf. 19:13.

h. Reference to Is 65:16 where ‘God of truth’ is literally ‘God of Amen’. Cf. Rv 1:5+.

i. Cf. Pr 8:22; Ws 9:1f; Jn 1:3; Col 1:16f; Heb 1:2.

Is 55:1 blind and naked too.^f • I warn you, buy from me the gold that has been tested in 18
the fire^k to make you really rich, and white robes to clothe you and cover your shameful nakedness, and eye ointment to put on your eyes so that you are able to see.^l • I am the one who reproves and disciplines all those he loves: so repent 19 in real earnest. • Look, I am standing at the door, knocking. If one of you hears 20 me calling and opens the door, I will come in to share his meal, side by side with him. • Those who prove victorious I will allow to share my throne, just as I was 21 victorious myself and took my place with my Father on his throne. • If anyone has 22 ears to hear, let him listen to what the Spirit is saying to the churches.”

II. THE PROPHETIC VISIONS

A. THE PRELUDE TO THE GREAT DAY

God entrusts the future of the world to the Lamb^a

1:10 4 Then, in my vision, I saw a door open in heaven and heard the same voice 1 speaking to me, the voice like a trumpet, saying, ‘Come up here: I will show 2 you what is to come in the future’. • With that, the Spirit possessed me and I saw 2 a throne standing in heaven, and the One who was sitting on the throne, • and 3 the Person sitting there looked like a diamond and a ruby. There was a rainbow encircling the throne, and this looked like an emerald.^b • Round the throne in a 4 circle were twenty-four thrones, and on them I saw twenty-four elders^c sitting, dressed in white robes with golden crowns on their heads. • Flashes of lightning 5 were coming from the throne, and the sound of peals of thunder,^d and in front of the throne there were seven flaming lamps burning, the seven Spirits^e of God. • Between the throne and myself was a sea^f that seemed to be made of glass, 6 like crystal. In the centre, grouped round the throne itself,^g were four animals^h with many eyes, in front and behind. • The first animal was like a lion, the second 7 like a bull, the third animal had a human face, and the fourth animal was like a flying eagle. • Each of the four animals had six wings and had eyes all the way 8 round as well as inside; and day and night they never stopped singing:

Is 6:3 ‘Holy, Holy, Holy is the Lord God, the Almighty;
he was, he is and he is to come’.ⁱ

Every time the animals glorified and honoured and gave thanks to the One sitting 9 on the throne, who lives for ever and ever, • the twenty-four elders prostrated 10 themselves before him to worship the One who lives for ever and ever, and threw down their crowns in front of the throne,^j saying, • ‘You are our Lord and our 11 God, you are worthy of glory and honour and power, because you made all the universe and it was only by your will that everything was made and exists’.^k

5 I saw that in the right hand of the One sitting on the throne there was a scroll 1 that had writing on back and front and was sealed with seven seals.^a • Then 2
I saw a powerful angel who called with a loud voice, ‘Is there anyone worthy to open the scroll and break the seals of it?’ • But there was no one, in heaven 3 or on the earth or under the earth,^b who was able to open the scroll and read it.
I wept bitterly because there was nobody fit to open the scroll and read it, • but 4
one of the elders said to me, ‘There is no need to cry: the Lion of the tribe of 5 Judah, the Root of David, has triumphed,^c and he will open the scroll and the seven seals of it’.

Then I saw, standing between the throne with its four animals and the circle 6 of the elders, a Lamb that seemed to have been sacrificed;^d it had seven horns, and it had seven eyes,^e which are the seven Spirits God has sent out all over the 7 world. • The Lamb came forward to take the scroll from the right hand of the 7
One sitting on the throne, • and when he took it, the four animals prostrated 8

- themselves before him and with them the twenty-four elders; each one of them was holding a harp and had a golden bowl full of incense made of the prayers of the saints. •They sang a new hymn:
- ‘You are worthy to take the scroll and break the seals of it, because you were sacrificed, and with your blood you bought^f men for God of every race, language, people and nation^g
and made them a line of kings and priests, to serve our God and to rule the world’.^h
- In my vision, I heard the sound of an immense number of angels gathered round the throne and the animals and the elders; there were ten thousand times ten thousand of them and thousands upon thousands, •shouting, ‘The Lamb that was sacrificed is worthy to be given power, riches,ⁱ wisdom, strength, honour, glory and blessing’. •Then I heard all the living things in creation—everything that lives in the air, and on the ground, and under the ground, and in the sea, crying, ‘To the One who is sitting on the throne and to the Lamb, be all praise, honour, glory and power, for ever and ever’. •And the four animals said, ‘Amen’; and the elders prostrated themselves to worship.

The Lamb breaks the seven seals^a

- 6 Then I saw the Lamb break one of the seven seals, and I heard one of the four animals shout in a voice like thunder, ‘Come’. •Immediately a white

j. Unlike Smyrna, 2:9, Laodicea was rich in worldly goods, but spiritually poor.

k. The true riches that are of the spirit.

l. The clothing and the eye ointment are, of course, needed to repair the ‘blindness and nakedness’ of v.17; but there may be a special point in this as an allusion to the local products for which Laodicea was known.

4 a. God delegates to the Lamb the power of carrying out his decrees against persecuting pagans. The ‘Great Day’ of God’s anger is about to dawn. The vision begins with a view of God’s throne and widens to a view of the whole universe.

b. Lit. ‘the Enthroned One looked like a jasper stone (diamond) and a sardion (ruby) and a rainbow round the throne looked like a smaragdus (emerald)’. John is careful not to describe God anthropomorphically; he prefers to give an impression of light. The whole scene draws heavily on Ezk 1 and 10; cf. also Is 6.

c. The elders have a priestly function: they praise and worship God, 4:10; 5:9; 11: 16, 17; 19:4, and offer him the prayers of the faithful, 5:8. The number twenty-four suggests the twenty-four priestly classes of 1 Ch 24:1-9; the thrones indicate that the elders are ‘judges’ in the New Israel which is the redeemed world; the crowns are the sign that they share God’s royal power. It is to be noted that the thrones of the elders make the outer ring of the heavenly court, and in the New Jerusalem which comes down from heaven, ch. 21, the outer walls are composed of twelve foundation stones of apostles and twelve gates which are the twelve tribes of Israel.

d. Thunder is frequently associated with theophanies, cf. Ex 19:16+; Ezk 1:4,13.

e. Not the sevenfold Spirit of mediaeval tradition but the seven ‘angels of the presence’, cf. 3:1+; 8:2; Tb 12:15, God’s messengers, cf. Zc 4:10; Tb 12:14; Lk 1:26; Rv 5:6 and passim.

f. Either the ‘upper waters’ of Gn 1:7; Ps 104:3, or the ‘Sea’ of 1 K 7:23-26.

g. Lit. ‘In the centre of the throne and round the throne’; the text is obscure. ‘In the centre of the throne and’ is possibly a gloss from Ezk 1:5.

h. The symbolism derives from Ezk 1:5-21. The ‘animals’ are the four angels responsible for directing the physical world. ‘Four’ symbolises the universe; their many eyes symbolise God’s omniscience and providence. They give unceasing glory to God for his creation. The figures of lion, bull, man, eagle suggest all that is noblest, strongest, wisest, most swift, in the created world. Since Irenaeus, these four creatures have been used as symbols of the four evangelists.

i. The liturgical Trisagion or Sanctus echoes this doxology. It is said that the Church thus shares in the worship of the heavenly court, but it is also possible that John’s vision of heaven reproduces the worship of the Church on earth.

j. The crowns symbolise the government of the world, entrusted to the ‘elders’ by God. This power comes from God and must go back to him.

k. Lit. ‘Through your will they were (var. ‘they were not’) and they were created’: text uncertain.

5 a. A roll of papyrus in which God’s hitherto secret decrees are written. The contents are made known in ch. 6-9.

b. In Hades, 1:18+.

c. Over Satan and the world, cf. Jn 3:35+; 1 Jn 2:14+.

d. The Messiah, the Passover lamb sacrificed for the salvation of the Chosen People, cf. Jn 1:29+-. The wounds that caused the death of the Lamb are visible, but the Lamb has risen from death, and therefore stands upright. The Messiah, who became a lamb in order to submit as sacrifice, to suffer and to die, is a lion because he conquered death.

e. Symbolising the fulness (number seven) of the Messiah’s power (horns) and knowledge (eyes).

f. Var. ‘you bought us’, ‘you bought us for God’. The reading ‘us’ supposes that the elders are human beings, possibly the O.T. patriarchs. Lit. ‘you were killed and you bought for God by your blood’.

g. Cliché for ‘the whole world’. Cf. Dn 3:4,7,96.

h. Lit. ‘you made them into a kingdom and priests for our God and they will reign on earth’ (or ‘over pagans’); Vulg. ‘you have made us... we shall reign...’

i. Vulg. ‘divinity’.

6 a. Ch. 6-9 plus 11:14-18 make one homogeneous whole—a series of symbolic visions heralding and prelude the destruction of the Roman empire. The four horsemen of this first vision are modelled on Zc 1:8-10 and 6:1-3; but they further symbolise the four scourges with which God, through the prophets, horse appeared, and the rider on it was holding a bow; he was given the victor's crown and he went away, to go from victory to victory.^b

When he broke the second seal, I heard the second animal shout, 'Come'.³ And out came another horse, bright red, and its rider was given this duty: to take away peace from the earth and set people killing each other. He was given a huge sword.^c

When he broke the third seal, I heard the third animal shout, 'Come'.⁵ Immediately a black horse appeared, and its rider was holding a pair of scales;^d and I seemed to hear a voice shout from among the four animals and say, 'A ration of corn for a day's wages, and three rations of barley for a day's wages, but do not tamper with the oil or the wine'.

When he broke the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth animal shout, 'Come'.⁷ Immediately another horse appeared, deathly pale, and its rider was called Plague,^e and Hades followed at his heels.^f

They were given authority over a quarter of the earth, to kill by the sword, by famine, by plague and wild beasts.

When he broke the fifth seal, I saw underneath the altar^g the souls of all the people who had been killed on account of the word of God,^h for witnessing to it.

They shouted aloud, 'Holy, faithful Master, how much longer will you wait before you pass sentence and take vengeance for our death on the inhabitants of the earth?'ⁱ Each of them was given a white robe,^j and they were told to be patient a little longer, until the roll was complete and their fellow servants and brothers had been killed just as they had been.

In my vision, when he broke the sixth seal, there was a violent earthquake and the sun went as black as coarse sackcloth; the moon turned red as blood all over, and the stars of the sky fell on to the earth like figs dropping from a fig tree when a high wind shakes it; the sky disappeared like a scroll rolling up and all the mountains and islands were shaken from their places.^k Then all the earthly rulers, the governors and the commanders, the rich people and the men of influence, the whole population, slaves and citizens, took to the mountains to hide in caves and among the rocks. They said to the mountains and the rocks, 'Fall on us and hide us away from the One who sits on the throne and from the anger of the Lamb. For the Great Day of his anger^l has come, and who can survive it?'¹⁷

God's servants will be preserved

Next I saw four angels, standing at the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the world back to keep them from blowing over the land or the sea or in the trees. Then I saw another angel rising where the sun rises, carrying the seal of the living God; he called in a powerful voice to the four angels^a whose duty was to devastate land and sea, 'Wait before you do any damage on land or at sea or to the trees, until we have put the seal on the foreheads of the servants of our God'. Then I heard how many were sealed: a hundred and forty-four thousand,^b out of all the tribes of Israel.

From the tribe of Judah, twelve thousand had been sealed; from the tribe of Reuben, twelve thousand; from the tribe of Gad, twelve thousand; from the tribe of Asher, twelve thousand; from the tribe of Naphtali, twelve thousand; from the tribe of Manasseh, twelve thousand; from the tribe of Simeon, twelve thousand; from the tribe of Levi, twelve thousand; from the tribe of Issachar, twelve thousand; from the tribe of Zebulun, twelve thousand; from the tribe of Joseph, twelve thousand; and from the tribe of Benjamin, twelve thousand were sealed.

The rewarding of the saints

After that I saw a huge number, impossible to count, of people from every nation, race, tribe and language;^c they were standing in front of the throne and in front of the Lamb, dressed in white robes and holding palms in their hands.^d

10 They shouted aloud, 'Victory to our God, who sits on the throne, and to the 11 Lamb!' •And all the angels who were standing in a circle round the throne, surrounding the elders and the four animals, prostrated themselves before the throne, and touched the ground with their foreheads, worshipping God 12 with these words, 'Amen. Praise and glory and wisdom and thanksgiving and honour and power and strength to our God for ever and ever. Amen.'

13 One of the elders then spoke, and asked me, 'Do you know who these people 14 are, dressed in white robes, and where they have come from?' •I answered him, 'You can tell me, my lord'. Then he said,^e 'These are the people who have been through the great persecution,^f and because they have washed their robes white 15 again in the blood of the Lamb, •they now stand in front of God's throne and serve him day and night in his sanctuary; and the One who sits on the throne will 16 spread his tent over them. •They will never hunger or thirst again; neither the 17 sun nor scorching wind will ever plague them, •because the Lamb who is at the throne will be their shepherd and will lead them to springs of living water; and God will wipe away all tears from their eyes.'^g

The prayers of the saints bring the coming of the Great Day nearer

2 Next I saw seven trumpets being given to the seven angels who stand in the 3 presence of God. •Another angel, who had a golden censer,^b came and stood at the altar.^c A large quantity of incense was given to him to offer with the prayers from the angel's hand the smoke of the incense went up in the presence of God immediately there came peals of thunder and flashes of lightning, and the earth

b. The rider on the white horse (symbol of victory) represents the Parthians, identified by the bow, their favourite weapon. They were the terror of the Roman world in the 1st cent. These are the 'wild beasts' of v. 8 (i.e. victorious pagan nations, cf. Dt 7:22; Ezk 34:28; Jr 15:2-4; 50:17). The Parthian invasion is described in the vision of 9:13f. One tradition identified the rider with the Messiah, as in 19:11-16.

c. Symbol of war.

d. Symbol of famine: food is rationed and sold at a prohibitive price.

e. Lit. 'death', but this word (as in 'the black death') signifies an endemic plague.

f. To swallow up the victims.

g. The altar of holocaust, 1 K 8:64+.

h. The martyrs.

i. The pagan nations.

j. Symbolising triumphant joy.

k. In prophetic writings, these cosmic phenomena are the concomitants of the Day of Yahweh, cf. Am 8:9+. They are to be interpreted therefore not as physical realities but as symbols of God's anger, cf. Mt 24:1+.

l. Var. 'their anger'.

7 a. The angels of v. 1.

b. Twelve (the sacred number) squared and multiplied by one thousand represents the totality of all who have been faithful to Christ (the new Israel, cf. Ga 6:16).

c. All the Christian martyrs now in heaven; v. 14.

d. Palms symbolise victory.

e. For this form of dialogue cf. Zc 6:4-5 and also 4:4-13.

f. Nero's persecution.

g. Common metaphors in the prophetic tradition, used to symbolise eschatological bliss, cf. Ho 2:20+; Is 11:6+; they recur in 21:4.

8 a. The 'coming of Yahweh' is often preceded and heralded by silence, in prophetic literature.

b. This was in the shape of a scoop or shovel, and was also used for carrying the live coals from the altar of holocaust to the altar of incense.

The fifth trumpet

20:1
 Is 14:12 9 Then the fifth angel blew his trumpet, and I saw a star^a that had fallen from 1 heaven on to the earth, and he was given the key to the shaft leading down Gn 19:28 to the Abyss.^b •When he unlocked the shaft of the Abyss, smoke poured up out of 2
 Ex 19:18 the Abyss like the smoke from a huge furnace so that the sun and the sky were Ex 10:12,15 darkened by it, •and out of the smoke dropped locusts which were given the 3
 Ws 16:9 powers that scorpions have on the earth:^c •they were forbidden to harm any 4
 J1 1-2 fields or crops or trees^d and told only to attack any men who were without God's Ezk 9:6 seal on their foreheads. •They were not to kill them, but to give them pain for 5 five months, and the pain was to be the pain of a scorpion's sting. •When this 6 Jb 3:21 happens, men will long for death and not find it anywhere; they will want to die and death will evade them.
 J1 2:4 To look at, these locusts were like horses armoured for battle; they had things 7 that looked like gold crowns on their heads, and faces that seemed human, •and 8
 J1 1:6 hair like women's hair, and teeth like lions' teeth. •They had body-armour like 9 J1 2:5 iron breastplates, and the noise of their wings sounded like a great charge of horses and chariots into battle. •Their tails were like scorpions', with stings, 10 and it was with them that they were able to injure people for five months.^e •As 11 their leader they had their emperor, the angel of the Abyss, whose name in Hebrew is Abaddon, or Apollyon^f in Greek.
 8:13; 11:14 That was the first of the troubles; there are still two more to come. 12
 Ezk 7:5

The sixth trumpet

The sixth angel blew his trumpet, and I heard a voice come out of the four 13
 Ex 30:1-3 horns of the golden altar^g in front of God. •It spoke to the sixth angel with the 14
 = 16:12 trumpet, and said, 'Release the four angels that are chained up at the great river
 1 Co 1:8 Euphrates'.^h •These four angels had been put there ready for this hour of this 15 day of this month of this year,ⁱ and now they were released to destroy a third of 16
 the human race. •I learnt how many there were in their army: twice ten thousand 17 times ten thousand mounted men. •In my vision I saw the horses, and the riders 18 Jb 41:10-13 with their breastplates of flame colour, hyacinth-blue and sulphur-yellow; the horses had lions' heads, and fire, smoke and sulphur were coming out of their 19 mouths. •It was by these three plagues, the fire, the smoke and the sulphur coming 20 out of their mouths, that the one third of the human race was killed. •All the horses' power was in their mouths and their tails: their tails were like snakes, 21 Am 4:6+ and had heads that were able to wound. •But the rest of the human race, who

 Ps 135:15-17 up their murdering, or witchcraft, or fornication or stealing.

The imminence of the last punishment

10 Then I saw another powerful angel coming down from heaven, wrapped in 1 a cloud, with a rainbow over his head; his face was like the sun, and his legs 2 Ezk 2:10 were pillars of fire. •In his hand he had a small scroll, unrolled; he put his right foot

- 3 in the sea and his left foot on the land • and he shouted so loud, it was like a lion Am 3:8

 seven thunderclaps had spoken, I was preparing to write, when I heard a voice Jr 25:30 for ever and ever, and made heaven and all that is in it, and earth and all it bears, Ne 9:6

The seer eats the small scroll

- 8 Then I heard the voice I had heard from heaven speaking to me again. 'Go,' it said 'and take that open scroll out of the hand of the angel standing on sea

 he said, 'Take it and eat it; it will turn your stomach sour, but in your mouth it 10 will taste as sweet as honey'. • So I took it out of the angel's hand, and swallowed Ezk 3:1-3 it; it was as sweet as honey in my mouth, but when I had eaten it my stomach 11 turned sour.^e • Then I was told, 'You are to prophesy again, this time about many different nations and countries and languages and emperors'.

The two witnesses

- 1 11 Then I was given a long cane as a measuring rod, and I was told,^a 'Go and Ezk 40:1-5 measure God's sanctuary, and the altar, and the people who worship there;^b Zc 2:5-9

 I shall send my two witnesses to prophesy for those twelve hundred and sixty days,

 Ex 7:17;

9 a. One of the fallen angels, possibly Satan himself, cf. v. 11 and Lk 10:18.

b. Where the fallen angels are imprisoned pending their ultimate punishment.

c. The vision of locusts is suggested by Jl 1-2 which, according to Jerome, the Jews interpreted historically: the four armies of locusts being successive invaders, Assyrian, Persian, Greek, Roman; cf. Jr 51:27. Here the locusts probably indicate the Parthians. Another suggestion is that the locusts symbolise spiritual torments inflicted by demons.

d. Possibly symbols of upright, faithful Christians, cf. 7:1f.

e. Lit. 'They have scorpion-like tails and stings and their authority (power) is to harm people for five months with their tails'; Var. 'they have tails like scorpions, and stings, and in their tails (lies) their power...'

f. Destruction, or ruin.

g. This shows that the pagans are punished in answer to the martyrs' prayer of 6:9,10 (cf. 8:2f).

h. The Parthians lived east of the Euphrates; the sixth plague represents Parthian cavalry. Cf. 6:2+.

i. Lit. 'for the hour and day and month and year'. For the 'Great Day' of wrath, cf. 6:17.

10 a. The voice of God.

b. Because the time of their fulfilment has not yet come. Cf. 22:10.

c. The angel, in contact with air, sea and land, the three regions of the universe, is about to swear by him who made them. Cf. Gn 14:22; Ezk 20:6,15,28;

Dt 32:40.

d. The definitive establishment of the kingdom; the sign of this is the destruction of the enemies of God's people, i.e. Babylon, ch. 17, Satan, and the pagan nations, 20:7-10. On the 'mystery' or 'secret' of God in the eschatological sense, cf. Rm 11:25; 2 Th 2:6f and Rm 16:25+. Cf. 2:24, the 'secrets of Satan'.

e. The news is sweet because it announces the Church's victory, bitter because it foretells her suffering.

11 a. Lit. 'A reed like a rod was given to me saying'; var. 'and the angel stood (there) saying'.

b. The Holy City, Jerusalem, symbolises the Church, cf. 20:9, which is about to be persecuted by the Beast (the Roman empire, cf. ch. 13). The Temple of God, which is measured as a sign that it will be spared, symbolises those who will remain faithful to Christ (cf. 14:1-5), the new 'remnant' of Israel, cf. Is 4:3+.

c. This period (three-and-a-half years) taken from Dn, had become the symbol for any persecution, cf. Lk 4:25; Jm 5:17. Here it is the Roman persecution.

d. In Zc the two olive trees symbolise Joshua and Zerubbabel, the religious and the civil leaders of the repatriated community who restored Temple and city after the Exile. Here they probably symbolise the two leaders appointed to build the new Temple, the Church of Christ, namely Peter and Paul, probably martyred in Rome under Nero, v. 8. They are described in terms of Moses and Elijah, the two witnesses of the transfiguration.

When they have completed their witnessing, the beast that comes out of the 7
 Dn 7:21 Abyss^e is going to make war on them and overcome them and kill them. •Their 8 corpses will lie in the main street of the Great City^f known by the symbolic names Sodom and Egypt, in which their Lord was crucified. •Men out of every 9 Jn 16:20 people, race, language and nation will stare at their corpses, for three-and-a-half Est 9:19 days, not letting them be buried, •and the people of the world will be glad about 10 it and celebrate the event by giving presents to each other, because these two prophets have been a plague to the people of the world.'

Ezk 37:5,10 After the three-and-a-half days, God breathed life into them and they stood up, 11 and everybody who saw it happen was terrified; •then they heard^g a loud voice 12 from heaven say to them, 'Come up here', and while their enemies were watching, 2 K 2:11 they went up to heaven in a cloud. •Immediately, there was a violent earthquake, 13 and a tenth of the city collapsed; seven thousand persons^h were killed in the earthquake, and the survivors, overcome with fear, could only praise the God of heaven.

The seventh trumpet

8:13; 9:12 That was the second of the troubles; the third is to come quickly after it.ⁱ 14
 Ezk 7:5

Then the seventh angel blew his trumpet, and voices could be heard shouting 15 1:5+; 12:10 in heaven, calling, 'The kingdom of the world has become the kingdom of our Ps 2; 22:28 Lord and his Christ, and he will reign for ever and ever'. •The twenty-four elders, 16
 Dn 7:14,27 enthroned in the presence of God, prostrated themselves and touched the ground
 Zc 14:9 with their foreheads worshipping God •with these words, 'We give thanks to 17
 1:4+; you, Almighty Lord God, He-Is-and-He-Was,^j for using your great power and 16:5; 19:6 beginning your reign. •The nations were seething with rage and now the time has 18
 Ps 2:1,5 come for your own anger, and for the dead to be judged, and for your servants 19:2 the prophets, for the saints and for all who worship you, small or great, to be Am 3:7 rewarded. The time has come to destroy those who are destroying the earth.'

Ex 25:8-10+ Then the sanctuary of God in heaven^k opened, and the ark of the covenant 19 2 M 2:5-8 could be seen inside it. Then came flashes of lightning, peals of thunder and an Heb 8:5 earthquake, and violent hail.

The vision of the woman and the dragon^a

 Gn 37:9 standing on the moon, and with the twelve stars on her head for a crown. 2
 Sg 6:10 She was pregnant, and in labour, crying aloud in the pangs of childbirth. •Then 3 Gn 3:16 a second sign appeared in the sky, a huge red dragon which had seven heads 4

j. Add. (Vulg.) 'and he is to come'.

k. As opposed to the Jerusalem Temple referred to in vv. 1 and 2.

12 a. This chapter is made up of two separate visions: the attack of the dragon on the woman and her children, vv. 1-6 and 13-17; the attack of Michael on the dragon, vv. 7-12.

b. The woman is essentially an image of Israel as the mother of the messianic saviour, cf. Mi 4:9-10; Is 66:7; the son born to her is, like Moses, snatched from the dragon of water (in whom Leviathan of the Nile-Pharaoh can be seen) and taken up to the throne, while she herself escapes into the desert for a time of 42 months which recalls the 42 years of Israel's desert wanderings; the earth's swallowing of the dragon's river can be associated with the miraculous crossing of the Red Sea. The Messiah is here seen under the type of Moses. The woman's pain in travail may recall the curse of Eve, whose offspring would ultimately wound the serpent, so that Israel is seen as representing all humanity. It does not seem probable that John had Mary in mind or intended any allusion to the physical birth of the Messiah in the incarnation; cf. note to v. 5.

c. I.e. Satan, cf. v. 9 and 20:2; this Hebr. word, rendered diabolos by LXX, in its primary sense means 'Accuser', cf. v. 10 and Zc 3:1-2 and see Jb 1:6+. In Jewish tradition the snake and the dragon symbolised the power of evil, the enemy of God and his people which God is to destroy at the end of time, cf. Jb 3:8+ and 7:12+.

d. Allusion to the fall of the angels seduced by Satan.

e. The Messiah considered simultaneously as an individual person and as head or leader of the new Israel, cf. the 'Son of Man' of Dn 7:13, and the 'Servant of Yahweh' of Is 42:1+.

f. Allusion to the ascension and the triumph of the Messiah that will result in the dragon's fall.

g. Traditional O.T. refuge for the persecuted, cf. Ex 2:15; 1 K 17:2f; 19:3f; 1 M 2:29,30. To exist, the Church must depend not on paganism but on her own divine life, cf. Ex 16; 1 K 17:4,6; 19:5-8; Mt 14:13,19.

h. Lit. 'a time and times and half a time'. Three-and-a-half years, cf. 11:3+.

i. The Roman empire, like a flood let loose by Satan, cf. Is 8:7-8, will try to engulf the Church, cf. Rv 13.

j. All faithful Christians.

k. This vision is inspired by Dn 7 (persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes). According to Rv 17:10,12-14, the beast symbolises the Roman empire, type of all forces that are to oppose the Church. The seven heads are a series of successive emperors; the ten crowned horns are ten subject kings.

l. Var. 'he stood', which would join v. 18 to the preceding passage.

13 a. Satan, 'prince of this world', Jn 12:31+—can give imperial power to anybody he chooses, cf. Lk 4:6+.

b. Allusion to the empire recovering after some temporary setback; possibly Julius Caesar's assassination or the disturbances after Nero's death. The risen beast is a caricature of the risen Christ.

c. A parody of the name Michael, 12:7, which means 'Who-can-compare-with-God?'

Dn 7:21 to make war against the saints and conquer them, and given power over every race,
Dn 7:6 people, language and nation; •and all people of the world will worship it, that 8 had been wounded by the sword and still lived. •It was allowed to breathe 15 life into this statue, so that the statue of the beast was able to speak, and to have

17:9 There is need for shrewdness here: if anyone is clever enough he may interpret 18 the number of the beast: it is the number of a man, the number 666.^h

=7:1-8+ The companions of the Lamb^a

The harvest and vintage of the pagans¹

Jl 4:12-13

- 14 Now in my vision I saw a white cloud and, sitting on it, one like a son of man
15 with a gold crown on his head and a sharp sickle in his hand. •Then another angel came out of the sanctuary, and shouted aloud to the one sitting on the cloud, 'Put your sickle in and reap: harvest time has come and the harvest of the earth is ripe'. •Then the one sitting on the cloud set his sickle to work on the earth, and the earth's harvest was reaped.
- 17 Another angel, who also carried a sharp sickle, came out of the temple in 18 heaven, •and the angel in charge of the fire left the altar^m and shouted aloud to the one with the sharp sickle, 'Put your sickle in and cut all the bunches off the 19 vine of the earth; all its grapes are ripe'. •So the angel set his sickle to work on the earth and harvested the whole vintage of the earth and put it into a huge

The hymn of Moses and the Lamb^a

- 1 15 What I saw next, in heaven, was a great and wonderful sign: seven angels 2 were bringing the seven plagues that are the last of all, because they exhaust the anger of God. •I seemed to see a glass lake suffused with fire, and standing by the lake of glass, those who had fought against the beast and won, and against his statue and the number which is his name. They all had harps

d. Var. 'he who kills by the sword must die...'

e. This seems to mean that God's decrees against the persecutors will be carried out inexorably; their punishment is at hand; cf. 14:11,12; Mt 26:52.

f. This second beast is later called the 'false prophet', 16:13; 19:20; 20:10. Before describing the return of the Son of Man, 14:14-21; cf. 19:11f and Mt 24:30, John describes the activities of the false messiahs (first beast) and false prophets (second beast) foretold by Christ himself, Mt 24:24; cf. 2 Th 2:9.

g. The second beast mimics the Spirit who works miracles in the Church to encourage faith in Christ. Similarly, the first beast had imitated the risen Messiah, 13:3. The Dragon, the first beast and the second beast form a caricature of the Trinity.

h. Var. '616'. In both Greek and Hebr., letters are used for numbers, the value corresponding to the place in the alphabet; by adding up the values of component letters the total 'number of a person's name' is obtained. Some commentators point out that in Hebr. the letters of Caesar Nero add up to 666, and that in Greek the letters of Caesar-God add up to 616 (the alternative reading).

14 a. The followers of the beast who are branded with his name and number, 13:16-17, are now contrasted with the followers of the Lamb marked with his name and the name of his Father. This is the 'remnant' of the new Israel. Is 4:3+, the faithful Christians who have survived persecution and who are to begin the restoration of God's kingdom when its enemies have been destroyed.

b. Var. 'the Lamb'.

c. Moses had celebrated the deliverance from Egypt, Ex 15:1-21; cf. Rv 15:3-5; the new hymn celebrates the new deliverance of God's people and of the new order introduced by the Lamb that was sacrificed.

d. Lit. 'the earth', which is here equivalent to the 'world' of the fourth gospel, cf. Jn 1:10+, i.e. the pagan world, cf. 5:9.

e. Metaphorically. In the O.T. marital infidelity is a metaphor for idolatry, cf. Ho 1:2+, in this case the worship of the beast.

f. Just as Israel followed Yahweh at the Exodus, so the new Israel, newly redeemed, follows the Lamb into the desert, cf. Jr 2:2-3, where the marriage rites are renewed (Ho 2:16-25).

g. I.e. they have not invoked false gods, the beast. h. Before God's vengeance strikes, the angels appear to exhort the persecutors to repentance by proclaiming the hour of judgement; but the appeal goes unheeded, cf. 16:2,9,11,21. See 15:5+.

i. The tense is the prophetic perfect.

j. Lit. 'who has made all nations drink the wine of anger' corr. 'drink the wine of the anger of her adultery' Greek, as in 18:3. The 'wine of anger' is a familiar image, cf. Is 51:17+, for the divine anger to which Babylon (Rome) has exposed all nations by making them worship her idols.

k. The lake of burning sulphur is where the wicked are punished, cf. 19:20; 20:10; 21:8.

l. The destruction of the pagan nations. The fulfilment of this prophecy is described in 19:11f.

m. Persecutors are annihilated in answer to the martyrs' prayers which are carried to God by the angel who tends the altar fire.

n. The pagans are to be destroyed outside Jerusalem according to Zc 14:2f,12f; Ezk 38-39; cf. Heb 13:11; Lv 4:12+ . See also Is 63.

15 a. The hymn of Moses, vv. 2-4, interrupts the development of the vision of the seven cups, just as the symbolic liturgy of 8:3-5 interrupted the vision of the seven trumpets. The severity of the divine punishment is thus vindicated before it is described.

b. The hymn of Ex 15 which celebrated Israel's triumph over Pharaoh. Here the conquerors of the

The seven bowls of plagues^c

Ex 25:22+

in heaven, •and out came the seven angels with the seven plagues, wearing pure 6

=8:6-12

16 Then I heard a voice from the sanctuary shouting to the seven angels, 1
'Go, and empty the seven bowls of God's anger over the earth'.

13:15-17

The first angel went and emptied his bowl over the earth; at once, on all the 2 people who had been branded with the mark of the beast and had worshipped Ex 9:8-11 its statue, there came disgusting and virulent sores.

The second angel emptied his bowl over the sea, and it turned to blood, like 3 the blood of a corpse, and every living creature in the sea died.

Ex 7:14-24

The third angel emptied his bowl into the rivers and water-springs and they 4

B. THE PUNISHMENT OF BABYLON

The famous prostitute

Ezk 16:23

- 1 17 One of the seven angels that had the seven bowls came to speak to me, and said, 'Come here and I will show you the punishment given to the famous prostitute^a who rules enthroned beside abundant waters,^b •the one with whom all the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and who has made all the population of the world drunk with the wine of her adultery'.^c •He took me in spirit to a desert,^d and there I saw a woman riding a scarlet beast which had seven heads and ten horns^e and had blasphemous titles written all over it. The woman was dressed in purple and scarlet, and glittered with gold and jewels and pearls, and she was holding a gold winecup filled with the disgusting filth of her fornication; •on her forehead was written a name, a cryptic name: 'Babylon the Great',^f the mother of all the prostitutes and all the filthy practices on the earth'. •I saw that she was drunk, drunk with the blood of the saints, and the blood of the martyrs of Jesus;^g and when I saw her, I was completely mystified. •The angel said to me, 'Don't you understand? Now I will tell you the meaning of this woman, and of the beast she is riding, with the seven heads and the ten horns.

The symbolism of the beast and the prostitute

- 8 'The beast you have seen once was and now is not; he is yet to come up from the Abyss, but only to go to his destruction.^h And the people of the world, whose names have not been written since the beginning of the world in the book of life, will think it miraculous when they see how the beast once was and now is not and is still to come. •Here there is need for cleverness, for a shrewd mind; the seven heads are the seven hills, and the woman is sitting on them. 'The seven heads are also seven emperors.ⁱ Five of them have already gone, one is here now, and one is yet to come; once here, he must stay for a short while. The beast, who once was and now is not, is at the same time the eighth and one of the seven, and he is going to his destruction. 'The ten horns are ten kings^j who have not yet been given their royal power but will have royal authority only for a single hour and in association with the beast. •They are all of one mind in putting their strength and their powers at the beast celebrate the justice of God in punishing the wicked persecutors.

c. Before finally destroying Babylon (Rome), 16:18-19, God sends a series of plagues on the wicked (several are reminiscent of the Egyptian plagues, Ex 7-10) to bring them to repentance; but, like Pharaoh, the wicked are obstinate.

d. According to 2 M 2:4-8 the reappearance of the sacred tent and the manifestation of God's glory as in the time of Moses, Ex 40:34-35, and of Solomon, 1 K 8:10, were to herald the coming of the messianic age and the renaissance of the chosen people. The 'glory' (cf. Ex 24:16+) is the sign of God's presence (cf. the 'silence' of 8:1, and the appearance of the ark of the covenant in 11:19).

16 a. Rome, type of all pagan powers hostile to God. b. The Parthian kings, dreaded by the Roman world.

c. The work of these evil spirits is foreordained to bring the pagan nations to judgement.

d. I.e. 'the mountains of Megiddo'. The defeat of King Josiah near this town, 2 K 23:29f, made the place symbolise disaster for any armies assembling there, cf. Zc 12:11.

e. Add. '(proceeding) from the throne' or 'from God'.

f. These cosmic phenomena symbolise the powers of this world withering under God's anger.

g. Lit. 'about one talent'.

17 a. Rome, type of any place where evil is supreme. Prostitution symbolises idolatry as in Ezk 16 and 23, cf. Ho 1:2+. See also Rv 14:4+.

b. A literal description of Babylon, metaphorically explained in v. 15.

c. All pagan nations and their kings who have adopted the imperial cult.

d. Where unclean beasts live, cf. Lv 16:8+; 17:7+.

e. The seven heads are Rome's seven hills, v. 9, and the horns ten subject kings, v. 16. The beast, v. 8, is Nero himself; he is dead but will return as the ruler of the subject peoples to avenge himself on Rome, vv. 16-17—a reflection of popular belief that the dead Nero would return, at the head of a Parthian army. This return figures as a parody of Christ's resurrection just as the formula of v. 8, 'he once was and now is not (and he is to come)' echoes the divine name, 'He was, he is, and he is to come'.

f. Babylon is the symbolic name for Rome.

g. Allusion to Nero's persecutions. Like Jerusalem (Ezk 16:36-38 and 23:37-45) Rome is guilty of a double crime: idolatry, v. 4, and murder, v. 6.

h. Two different interpretations of the beast's symbolism are combined, vv. 8,9,15-18 and vv. 10,12-14; these correspond to the two originally distinct texts of Rv (see Introduction).

i. Seven Roman emperors; the sixth, Nero, is now on the throne.

j. The kings of the satellite nations.

19:11-21 beast's disposal, •and they will go to war against the Lamb; but the Lamb is 14

The angel continued, 'The waters you saw, beside which the prostitute was 15 sitting, are all the peoples, the populations, the nations and the languages. •But 16 the time will come when the ten horns and the beast will turn against the prostitute, and strip off her clothes and leave her naked; then they will eat her 17 flesh and burn the remains in the fire. •In fact, God influenced their minds to do what he intended, to agree together to put their royal powers at the beast's disposal until the time when God's words should be fulfilled. •The woman you 18 saw is the great city which has authority over all the rulers on earth.'

An angel announces the fall of Babylon

Jr 50 18 After this, I saw another angel come down from heaven, with great 1
 Ezk 43:2 authority given to him; the earth was lit up with his glory. •At the top of 2 14:8 his voice he shouted, 'Babylon has fallen, Babylon the Great has fallen, and has
 Is 21:9 become the haunt of devils and a lodging for every foul spirit and dirty, loath-
 Jr 50:15 some bird. •All the nations have been intoxicated by the wine of her prostitution;^a 3
 Is 13:21-22; every king in the earth has committed fornication with her, and every merchant 34:11,14 grown rich through her debauchery.'

The people of God summoned away

16:17 A new voice spoke from heaven; I heard it say, 'Come out, my people, away 4
 Is 48:20; from her, so that you do not share in her crimes and have the same plagues
 52:11 to bear. •Her sins have reached up to heaven, and God has her crimes in mind: 5
 Jr 50:8 she is to be paid in her own coin. She must be paid double the amount she exacted. 6
 51:6 She is to have a doubly strong cup of her own mixture. •Every one of her shows 7
 Gn 18:20 and orgies is to be matched by a torture or a grief. I am the queen on my throne,
 Jr 50:15 she says to herself, and I am no widow and shall never be in mourning. •For that, 8
 Is 47:8 within a single day, the plagues will fall on her: disease and mourning and famine.
 Is 47:9 She will be burnt right up. The Lord God has condemned her, and he has great power.'

The people of the world mourn for Babylon

Ezk 27-28 There will be mourning and weeping for her by the kings of the earth who 9 Ezk 26:17 have fornicated with her and lived with her in luxury. They see the smoke as she burns, •while they keep at a safe distance from fear of her agony. They will 10 say:

'Mourn, mourn for this great city,
 Babylon, so powerful a city,
 doomed as you are within a single hour'.

There will be weeping and distress over her among all the traders of the earth 11 when there is nobody left to buy their cargoes of goods; •their stocks of gold 12 and silver, jewels and pearls, linen and purple and silks and scarlet; all the sandalwood, every piece in ivory or fine wood,^b in bronze or iron or marble; •the 13 cinnamon and spices, the myrrh and ointment and incense; wine, oil, flour and 1 Tm 1:10+ corn; their stocks of cattle, sheep, horses and chariots, their slaves, their human cargo...

Ho 10:5 'All the fruits you had set your hearts on have failed you; gone for ever, never 14
 Am 6:7 to return, is your life of magnificence and ease.'

The traders who had made a fortune out of her will be standing at 15 a safe distance from fear of her agony, mourning and weeping. •They will be 16 saying:

'Mourn, mourn for this great city;
 for all the linen and purple and scarlet that you wore,

for all your finery of gold and jewels and pearls;
your riches are all destroyed within a single hour'.

Songs of victory in heaven

Victory and glory and power to our God! •He judges fairly, he punishes justly, and he has condemned the famous prostitute who corrupted the earth with her fornication; he has avenged his servants that she killed'. •They sang again, 'Alleluia! The smoke of her will go up for ever and ever.' •Then the twenty-four elders and the four animals prostrated themselves and worshipped God seated there on his throne, and they cried, 'Amen, Alleluia'.
5 Then a voice came from the throne; it said, 'Praise our God, you servants of his and all who, great or small, revere him'. •And I seemed to hear the voices of a huge crowd, like the sound of the ocean or the great roar of thunder,

The reign of the Lord our God Almighty has begun; •let us be glad and joyful and give praise to God, because this is the time for the marriage of the Lamb.^a •His bride is ready, and she has been able to dress herself in dazzling white linen,^b because her linen is made of the good deeds of the saints.' •The angel said, 'Write this: Happy are those who are invited to the wedding feast of the Lamb', and he added, 'All the things you have written are true messages from God'. •Then I knelt at his feet to worship him, but he said to me, 'Don't do that: I am a servant just like you and all your brothers who are witnesses to

c. Lit. 'the witness of Jesus'; this is the word of God to which Jesus testifies and which is implanted in every Christian, cf. 1:2; 6:9; 12:17, and which inspires the prophets.

d. After the fall of Babylon, foretold in 14:8 and described in 16:19,20, Christ comes from heaven at the beginning of the Great Day of Yahweh on which all evil will be destroyed, as had been proclaimed in 14:14-20 and 17:12-14.

e. The colour symbolises victory.

f. Because he is King of kings, cf. v. 16.

g. Alluding (cf. v. 15) to Is 63:1. Symbol of the mortal ruin he deals his enemies, cf. Rv 5:5.

h. The rider comes from heaven: God's Word destroying the first-born of Egypt, Ws 18:14-18.

i. The angels, cf. Mt 26:53, or preferably, following 14:5 and 17:14, the white-robed martyrs, cf. 19:8; 3:5,18; 6:11; 16:15 and also Mt 22:11f.

j. Lit. 'a sharp blade issues out of his mouth', symbol of the destroying Word; cf. Is 11:4; Ws 18:16 and also Ho 6:5; Rv 1:16; 2 Th 2:8.

k. The winepress is a common image in prophetic literature for God's destruction of his people's enemies on the Great Day of his revenge; cf. Gn 49:9-12; Jr 25:30; Is 63:1-6; J14:13. On the 'wine of anger', cf. 14:8+ and Is 51:17+.

l. Possibly meaning 'on his sword'; it has also been suggested that we should read 'on his standard', since the similarity of the two words in Hebr. could be responsible for the present reading.

m. This long parenthesis echoes the events described in ch. 13.

20 a. Lit. 'I saw thrones, they sat on them, judgement was given to them, and I saw the souls of those beheaded for the witness of Jesus and the Word of God'. This verse, scarcely intelligible as it stands, must have begun 'I saw the souls...' and must have been completed '...Word of God: they came to life and reigned...' The remainder ('And I saw thrones on which all those took their seats who would not worship the beast and his image or be sealed on their foreheads or their hands') must have belonged to Text II (see Introduction) and should be read between vv. 11 and 12. Cf. Mt 19:28; 1 Co 6:2-3.

b. One interpretation makes this 'resurrection' of the martyrs (cf. Is 26:19; Ezk 37) symbolise the recovery of the Church after the Roman persecution; the 'reign of a thousand years' is then the period of the kingdom of Christ on earth from the end of persecution (the fall of Rome) to the Last Judgement (in 20:11f). According to Augustine and others who follow him, the 'reign of a thousand years' is to be reckoned from Christ's resurrection, and the 'first resurrection' is baptism, cf. Rm 6:1-10; Jn 5:25-28. A literal interpretation of this verse was widespread in the early Church: after the first resurrection, of the martyrs, Christ was to return to reign on earth with his faithful for a thousand years. This literal millenarianism was censured.

c. The first death is on earth, the second 'death' is failure to win eternal life.

d. The messianic rule of Christians on earth is foretold in 5:9-10, and under the symbol of the New Jerusalem, in 21:9-22 and 22:6-15; this second passage has been inserted so that it follows the mention of the Last Judgement, 20:13-15.

e. Ezk 38-39 (see notes) mentions 'Gog, king of Magog', here the two names symbolise all the pagan nations leagued against the Church at the end of time. This is the eschatological combat of Text I and it corresponds to the war of Text II described in 19:11.

f. Palestine.

g. Jerusalem, symbol of the Church, cf. Lk 21:24.

h. At this point part of v. 4 should be inserted (see note to v. 4).

i. The first scrolls unrolled list human deeds, the scroll of life opened last is the list of the predestined, cf. Dn 7:10+; 12:1+; Ac 13:48+.

j. After the Last Judgement death itself will lose its power.

21 a. A vision of heaven, cf. 7:15-17. The opening is suggested by Is (51 and 65 especially).

b. In Is 51:16; 65:17; 66:12, the phrase is merely a symbol of the new messianic age. St Paul, following the lead of Jesus, cf. Mt 19:28, is more realistic: the whole of creation will one day be freed from the dominance of corruption, renewed and transformed by the glory of God, Rm 8:19+.

c. The sea symbolises evil because it was the home of the dragon, cf. Jb 7:12+; it will vanish as it did at the Exodus, but this time for ever, before the triumphant advance of the new Israel, cf. Is 51:9-10; Ps 74:13,14; Jb 26:12-13; Is 27:1.

d. The new and joyful wedding of Jerusalem and her God has taken place, cf. Is 65:18; 61:10; 62:4-6; the Exodus ideal has at last been achieved, cf. Ho 2:16+.

Is 8:8

EPILOGUE

- 16 I, Jesus, have sent my angel to make these revelations to you for the sake of the churches. I am of David's line, the root of David and the bright star of the morning.
- 17 The Spirit and the Bride^f say, 'Come'. Let everyone who listens answer, 'Come'.^g Then let all who are thirsty come: all who want it may have the water of life, and have it free.
- 18 This is my solemn warning to all who hear the prophecies in this book: if anyone adds anything to them, God will add to him every plague mentioned in the book; •if anyone cuts anything out of the prophecies in this book, God will cut off his share of the tree of life and of the holy city, which are described in the book.
- 20 The one who guarantees these revelations repeats his promise: I shall indeed be with you soon. Amen; come, Lord Jesus.
- 21 May the grace of the Lord Jesus be with you all.^h Amen.

e. Lit. 'and he, God with them, will be their God' Vulg.; var. 'and God himself will be their God' or 'and God himself will be with them'. The shekinah, or presence, is an essential part of God's covenant with his people, cf. Ex 25:8 and Jn 1:14+, and is to be real and total after the end of the world, cf. J1 4:17, 21; Zc 2:14; Zp 3:15-17; Is 12:6.

f. In the O.T., fresh, drinking water is a symbol of life, and as such is to be a feature of the messianic age. In the N.T. it is a symbol of the Spirit, cf. Jn 4:1+.

g. The title 'Son of God' was to be conferred on King-Messiah, David's heir, on the day of his enthronement, 2 S 7:14+; hence Jesus was proclaimed 'Son of God' in virtue of his resurrection, Ac 2:36+; Rm 1:4+.

h. Eternal death. The fire, like the water of v. 6, is symbolic.

i. This is Jerusalem on earth during the last or messianic days since the pagan nations have not yet been destroyed, 21:24, and have a chance of conversion, 22:2; but it foreshadows the heavenly Jerusalem that develops from it. The details of the description are mostly from Ezk 40-47.

j. I.e. renewal in these present, messianic times;

the transformation of humanity by an act of God.

k. The symbol of (terrestrial) perfection.

l. Symbolic number: twelve (for the new Israel) multiplied by one thousand (for immensity).

m. The destruction of the Jerusalem Temple symbolises the end of the old covenant; there is now a new temple, the Body of Christ; cf. Jn 2:19-21.

22 a. Allusion to the Trinity, since the river of living water is a symbol of the Spirit (Jn 4:1+), cf. Ry 21:6+.

b. Or punctuate 'Down the middle ... on either side'.

c. Vv. 3-5 (Text II) should be inserted after 21:4. Cf. Introduction.

d. God pursues his design whatever man may do.

e. The Jerusalem described in 21:9f.

f. The Church, wife of the Messiah, cf. 21:10.

g. The appeal is addressed to the Messiah: it is the Marana tha refrain of the liturgical assemblies, 1 Co 16:22, expressive of the Christians' longing for the parousia, see 1 Th 5:1+.

h. Lit. 'with all'; var. 'with the saints' or 'with all the saints'.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE

The columns to the right of the date column deal with Palestinian and biblical history; those to the left deal with general history; but this distinction is less strict from the Christian era onwards. In the right-hand column, extra-biblical writings are in italics, and (before the Roman period) extra-biblical facts or those not taken from Josephus are also in italics.

The names of rulers, kings, governors and high priests are in SMALL CAPITALS or CAPITALS according to their importance. In the list of the kings of Judah the succession is from father to son unless anything different is indicated. THE CALENDAR

The year was based upon a dual lunar-solar calculation: 12 months of 29 or 30 days, with a supplementary month every second or third year to correct the lag of the lunar cycle behind the solar cycle. From the 4th century, the Babylonian experts, by spreading the 7 supplementary months over a 19 year cycle, reduced the lag to approximately two hours. This system was adopted by Seleucus I when, on October 1st (Macedonian reckoning) of the year 312, he inaugurated the 'Grecian Age' (cf. 1 M 1:11), which prevailed throughout the East. In Babylon they retained the spring New Year's Day and the seleucid era begins on 1st Nisan 311 (about 3rd April in the Julian Calendar).

With the Jews, the religious calendar also starts in the spring. The Jewish civil calendar by contrast starts in the autumn, but the sequence of the months begins in the spring as with Babylon. 1 K 6:8 has preserved three Phoenician month-names and Exodus an old west-semitic name (Abib). After the Exile the Jews adopted month-names from Babylon (Nisan, Iyyar, etc.), and the intercalary month was placed before Nisan (Ve-Adar). The observation of the new moon of Nisan determines the structure of the entire Jewish calendar, and normally occurred after the spring equinox (in the seleucid period, about 25th March); the interval could be as much as 29 days. The Jewish week was not determined by the phases of the moon—so much so that a feast day upon which work was forbidden, such as the Passover, rarely fell on the Sabbath. As the new moon rises in the evening, the day was reckoned as from one sunset to the next. The day of the full moon of Nisan (Passover) therefore began on the evening of the 14th.

The night was divided into three watches, Ex 14:24; Jg 7:19; 1 S 11:11. The Roman system had four watches, dividing the period from sunrise to sunset into 12 hours, the sixth hour thus falling at midday.

MEASURES AND MONEY

TABLES OF APPROXIMATE EQUIVALENTS

I. DISTANCE

	RATIO	INCHES	CENTIMETRES
amma (cubit)	1	18	45
zereth (span)	1/2	8.8	22
tofah (palm)	1/6	3	7.2
esba (finger)	1/24	0.8	2

The old cubit of Ezekiel measured 7 palms or handbreadths (= 21 ins/52.5 cms), cf. Ezk 40:5 note f; the man's measuring rod was 6 old cubits = 10 ft 4 ins/315 cms. The N.T. has, besides the cubit, the arm-span of approximately 6 ft/1.84 metres, and the stadion of approximately 202 yds/185 metres. The Roman mile was 8 stadia or some 1616 yds/1.48 km. The schoinos of 2 M 11:5 equals 30 stadia, or about 3½ modern miles/5.55 km.

II. CAPACITY (Dry)

	RATIO	BUSHEL/GALLONS	LITRES
homer/cor	10	12½ bus.	450
lethech	5	6¼ bus.	225
ephah	1	1¼ bus.	45
seah (measure)	1/3	3½ U.K. gal. 4 U.S. gal.	15
issaron (tenth of a measure)	1/10	1 U.K. gal. 1¼ U.S. gal.	4.5

(Liquid)

	RATIO	GALLONS		LITRES
		U.K.	U.S.A.
cor	10	100	120	450
bath	1	10	12	45
hin	1/6	1⅔ pints	2 quarts	7.5
kab	1/18	4½ pints	2½ quarts	2.5
log	1/72	1 pint	fl. ozs 20	0.6

The artabē in Dn 14:3 (LXX) is a Persian measure of about 12⅓ (U.K.)/14¾ (U.S.) gallons or 56 litres. In the N.T. there are: the 'measure' (metrētē) of 8⅔ (U.K.)/10½ (U.S.) gallons or 39.4 litres which is equivalent to bath; the 'sixth' (sextarius or xestes) of ¾ (U.K.) pint/15 (U.S.) fl. ozs or 0.46 litres as an equivalent to the log; the modion in 2 (U.K.)/2⅓ (U.S.) gallons or 8.75 litres which is two thirds of the seah; and the choinix of Rv 6:6 which is 2 (U.K.) pints/1⅓ (U.S.) quarts or 1.1 litres. The N.T. also uses the words seah, cor, and bath in Greek forms.

III. WEIGHT

	RATIO	LBS/OZS	KILOGRAMS
kikkar (talent)	3000	75 lbs	34.272
maneh (mina)	50	1¼ lbs	0.571
shekel	1	0.39 ozs	0.0114
beqa (half-shekel)	1/2	0.19 ozs	0.0057
gerah	1/20	0.02 ozs	0.0006

The mina of Ezk 45:12 is 60 shekels ($1\frac{1}{2}$ lbs or 0.685 kg.). The N.T. has the Roman pound (Lat. libra = Gr. litra) of approximately $11\frac{1}{2}$ ozs/0.326 kg.

IV. MONEY

1. BEFORE DARIUS I. Coinage first appeared in the 7c. B.C. in Anatolia and then in Greece. Prior to this date the value of metal was gauged only by its weight. The gold drachmas of Ne 7:69 = Ezr 2:69, are probably the Attic half-staters (see table of monetary equivalents). The silver mina mentioned at the same place was only money of account, and was possibly the Babylonian maneh of about 1 lb or 0.505 kg.

2. DARIUS, soon after 515 B.C., issued the gold daric having the weight of the Babylonian shekel of $\frac{1}{3}$ oz. or 8.41 grams (Ezr 8:27), and a silver shekel one twentieth of the value of the gold coin and thus weighing $\frac{1}{3}$ oz. or 5.60 grams, since gold was valued at 13.3 times as much as silver. It is this shekel that is mentioned in Ne 5:15, whereas the shekel of Ne 10:33 is regarded only in terms of weight^a. The minting of silver coinage seems to have been permitted throughout the Persian empire; silver coins have been found in Palestine with the inscription YHD = Judah.

3. HELLENISTIC AND ROMAN PERIOD. Alexander extended the Attic system throughout his empire, with a gold to silver value ratio of 10 to 1. Later the Romans introduced their currency; they reckoned large sums in sesterces (see table). In the East, reckonings continued to be made in talents and minas i.e. in equivalents of 6000 and 100 drachmas.

Silver coinage in Palestine during the Graeco-Roman Period (issued only during the First and Second Revolts):

FIRST REVOLT, 66-70 A.D.:

tetradrachmas 0.49 oz./14 gr. inscribed 'shekel of Israel' didrachmas 0.25 oz./7 gr. inscribed 'half shekel'
drachmas 0.12 oz./3.35 gr. inscribed 'quarter shekel'

SECOND REVOLT, 133-135 A.D.:

tetradrachmas 0.49 oz./14 gr.
denarii restruck

NOTES

- a. The tetradrachma represents a unit of the same order as the ancient shekel-pound. The didrachma annual levy for the Temple corresponds to the half-shekel of Ex 30:13 and to the third-of-a-shekel of Ne 10:33. The rabbis stipulated that these should conform to the standard of Tyre whose staters (tetradrachmas) had a high reputation.
- b. Before Alexander.
- c. This gold coin was the equivalent of 0.3225 grams of gold.
